Mr. Simmie joined the California Volunteers during the early days of the Spanish-American War. He came to the Philippines, landing at Cavite on June 30, 1898. They camped at Pasay, the present site of the Manila Polo Club, then came to the city of Manila on Occupation Day, his first military duty being that of guard on the Escolta at the foot of the Bridge of Spain; assigned a few days later to Cuartel Fourteen, the present site of the Manila Post Office. He saw service during the insurrection, was sent to Negros in March, 1899, played a leading role in the pacification of the lawless elements, especially those headed by Papa Ito. He was discharged from the military service in Manila in July, 1899; became salesman for the Pacific Oriental Trading Company for a number of years; engaged later in transportation business by taking passengers and cargo from Calumpit to San Isidro, Nueva Ecija, went to Lucena and Tayabas in connection with his work; visited Samar, and then came back to Manila. He bought the interests of the late Frederick Macondray in the Luzon Stevedoring Co. for P1,000.00, studied all the details of his new job, and worked hard until he succeeded in making the company one of the biggest concerns in the Islands today. He has contributed his share along the line of making Manila a progressive city with the best port facilities in the Orient.

SOBREPEÑA, Aniceto — Proprietor and Businessman; res., San Jose, Nueva Ecija.

Aniceto Sobrepeña

Born in Lupao, Nueva Ecija, on April 17, 1890. He is the son of Cayetano Sobrepeña and Saturnina Casantusan. Married to the former Miss Aurelia Reyes, by whom he has three children: Senecio, Perla and Maurino. Studied from 1904 to 1905; was a teacher in 1906 and studied again, 1907 to 1908; resumed teaching in 1909, after which he continued studying at Wright Institute, San Isidro, the old capital of Nueva Ecija, where he pursued his secondary course. After his studies, he was appointed Principal Teacher in San Jose. He later gave up teaching and engaged in farming, a vocation which since childhood he was interested in.

Through perseverance and hard work, with a strong determination to forge ahead, he gradually but continuously built and established himself in his farm industry. At present he owns a vast rice field of over 350 hectares in San Jose which is being farmed all the year round under his direct management. Modern methods have been introduced in the cultivation and harvesting of rice. In January, 1927, he bought a 17,000-peso harvesting machine, and in April, 1930, he built one of the biggest warehouses and rice mills in Nueva Ecija worth about P31,000.00. He is at present one of the biggest rice growers in Central Luzon.

Mr. Sobrepeña is also engaged in cattle raising industry. His cattle ranch, located in one of the best grazing lands in Nueva Ecija, is a very promising enterprise. Mr. Sobrepeña is not only a rice producer and dairy farmer, but is also a businessman. In January, 1933, he built an ice factory and installed an ice plant which cost him a little over P22,000.00. The plant supplies nearly all the ice needed in the neighboring towns.

Mr. Sobrepeña is a Nacionalista (Anti) by political affiliation, and an "Aglipayano" by religion.

Hon. Juan Sumulong

Born in Antipolo, Rizal, on December 27, 1875; the son of Policarpo Sumulong and Arcadia Marquez de Sumulong; received his elementary education from the school of his native town, and attended the San Juan de Letran College and later the University of Sto. Tomás, graduating from the last named institution with the degree of Licentiate in Law, and was admitted to the Philippine bar in 1900. Upon the recommendation of Chief Justice Arellano of the Supreme Court, Governor William H. Taft appointed him provincial fiscal for Mindoro, but he declined the position in order to attend to his private practice. He taught political law in the Escuela de Derecho de Manila (now Manila Law College). In 1906 he was appointed Judge of the Court of First Instance, which position he accepted; and in 1909 he was appointed Member of the Philippine Commission, which was the only legislative body in the Islands at that time. He was a member of that body from 1909 to 1913, and engaged later in private practice.

Judge Sumulong was also a captain during the two Philippine revolutions of 1896 and 1898. He was one of the first organizers of the Federal Party in 1901, and later the Progressive Party which advocated economic independence for the Islands. It was also Judge Sumulong who, in his publications, pointed out certain objectionable features in the Philippine Bill of 1915 when this measure was submitted by Resident Commissioner Quezon to U.S. Congress through the Hon. William Atkinson Jones, especially those referring to the indefinite promise of independence and the veto power of the governor-general. His views were, however, disregarded by the party in power; but subsequent events proved that he was right, and he has since been called the "Brain of the Opposition". He was made president of the Democrata Party in 1919. In the special elections held in the fourth senatorial district on October 3, 1923, he was made the official candidate of the minority party and was defeated; but in the general elections of June, 1925, he was elected Senator from the same district and co-operated with Senate President Quezon in forming the so-called Supreme National Council in 1926. As minority leader in the upper house, Senator Sumulong was made a member of the Philippine Legislative Mission to the United States, 1930-31. He was again elected Senator from the fourth district in 1934 under the Asti banner; but retired from public life in 1935. However, in the elections of 1937 and 1938 he accepted the presidency of the Popular Front, or Allied Minorities, and is still the recognized leader of the opposition party in the Philippines.

Judge Sumulong is well known in the Islands, not only as a legal talent and an honest political leader but also as an able writer, whose broad vision and keen foresight as a statesman won for him the respect and admiration of his followers. On various occasions he has published articles of public interest, discussing our Philippine problems with President Quezon and others.

TAPIA, José M. — Manager, Pampanga Sugar Development Company, Inc.; res., San Fernando, Pampanga; and 814 San Marcelino, Malate, Manila; tel. 5-42-39.

Born of humble parents at Ermita, Manila, on November 25, 1897. With the help of a tutor, young Tapia at the age of four could already read and write. His education, however, was interrupted by his parents' moving to Ilocos and staying there until he was about eleven years old, and he did not actually attend school until then.

After finishing the third year at the Manila High School (now Araullo High School), he was forced to find work to help his aging father support the family. He continued his studies at night in the National Academy (now National University), where he finished high school.

He had always distinguished himself as a leader and had been at the head of his class each school year, besides being a debater and an orator, for which he was awarded a gold medal. He studied law for one semester but switched on to business when the Jose Rizal College was established, thus belonging to the first graduating class of this college.

When he left the Manila High School he was employed as clerk in the Quartermaster Department, U.S. Army, at Fort McKinley, from which he resigned in September, 1918, to join the Philippine National Guard. In November of same year, he was named a Regimental Sergeant Major and was recommended for commission just before the Guard was mustered out. His business career began in May, 1919, when he entered the employ of the Manila Trading and Supply Co. as stenographer; was promoted soon to the position of chief clerk, then assistant sales manager, assistant treasurer, and subsequently auditor, he being the first and only Filipino to occupy this position. In November, 1926, he was appointed manager of the Legaspi Branch of said company, and again he was the first Filipino to be named as such. In December, 1929, he was appointed manager of the Bamban branch of the Insular Sugar Refining Corporation, where he acquired his knowledge of the sugar industry as manager of the Bamban office, then as assistant treasurer of the Manila office, and lastly as chief of the factory and warehouse administration, besides handling the exports and the purchasing of raw sugar, materials, and supplies.

Mr. Tapia resigned from the Insular Sugar Refining Corporation in November, 1936, and has since been connected with the Pasudeco Central as manager. He married the former Miss Adriana Valencia, by whom he has five children: Felicidad, Evangelina (dec.), Jose, Jr., Juanita, and Jesus. He belongs to no political party, and is a Roman Catholic.

He was an independent candidate for a seat in the Constitutional Convention in 1934.

TEODORO, Luis — Lawyer and Notary Public; res., 1922 Ipil, Santa Cruz, Manila.

TEODORO, Toribio — Proprietor and General Manager, "Ang Tibay Footwear Factory", office and factory, Rizal Avenue Extension, Grace Park Subdivision, Caloocan, Rizal; tel. 2-17-31; res., 3277 Ave. Rizal Extension, Caloocan, Rizal; tel. 2-31-42.

Born in Caloocan, Rizal, on April 27, 1887; the son of a poor farmer of Tondo named Julian Teodoro and Apolinaria del Mundo. When he was twelve years old, he worked in a cigar factory, El Oriente, as apprentice receiving eighty centavos a week, and later ₱10.00 a week. He left the factory and worked as a cutter in a slipper shop where he learned how to make slippers. In 1910 he opened a small slipper shop with Juan Katindig, as partner, in which enterprise he invested all his savings of P210.00. Eleven years later, the business was worth P86,000.00; then in 1921 he and Mr. Katindig dissolved their partnership. With his share of P43,000.00 he began to conduct his own business in

Toribio Teodoro

1922, and as a result of his wise and efficient management he made his factory the biggest of its kind in the Philippines. Former Governor-General Frank Murphy, in his letter of October 26, 1935, addressed to Mr. H. A. Andrada, editor of "Quarter Century of Progress" dedicated to the silver anniversary of "Ang Tibay", said: "It was thoughtful of you to tell me of your plans which are being made in connection with the celebration of the success which has been achieved by Mr. Teodoro. Certainly his example should be an inspiration to his fellow-countrymen. He has demonstrated what is possible of accomplishment when one is possessed of an indomitable will to succeed, and combines with it business integrity and tireless industry." Former Vice-Governor and Secretary of Public Instruction, Hon. J. R. Hayden, in his congratulatory letter of Oct. 28, 1935, said: "It is said of any industry that if its products do not give satisfaction to the public, it is bound to die a natural death. Ang Tibay started in 1910 as a small business. It is now a big enterprise, employing hundreds of Filipino workmen. Ang Tibay undoubtedly gave satisfaction to its patrons otherwise it would not be what it is now."

"Ang Tibay", with its modern machineries, turns out 600 pairs of shoes a day and 6,000 pairs of slippers a week, and has branches and agencies all over the Islands. This marvelous progress of a native industry is due to the initiative and business ability of one who received his education not from college or university but from his own school of experience, as Mr. Teodoro has never completed the elementary course and yet he can speak and write Spanish as well as English, not to mention

Mrs. Marta J. Teodoro

Tagalog, his native language, which he has thoroughly mastered as a vernacular writer. He married his first wife, Florentina Alcantara, when he was only 16 years old; became a widower and then married his second wife, Mrs. Marta J. de Teodoro, by whom he has several children: Toribia, Cecilia, Caridad, Prudencio, Francisco, and Josefina. In 1928, he toured the world to study the machinery and materials for his new shoe factory, visiting Cologne, Milan, the Pyramids, Colombo, Cairo, Singapore, Zurich, Frankfurt, London, Jones Farm in Missouri, San Francisco (Cal.), and other cities of Europe and U. S. He loves to play golf and other outdoor sports. He is a member of the committee on management, City Branch, Y.M.C.A.; director, P. I. Chamber of Commerce, Aseguradores de las Islas Filipinas; president, Aguinaldo & Aguinaldo; vice-president and director, National Economic Protectionism Association (NEPA), Santa Rosa Mining Co., Inc.; Union Management Co., and member, Cooperative Mines, Inc. He is also a member of the Biak-na-Bato Lodge No. 7, F. & A.M., Wack Wack Golf and Country Club, and president of the Filipino Slippers Association, and of Iglesia Evangelica Unida de Filipinas.

JULIA TOMAS-MEDINA

Born in Parañaque, Rizal, on December 18, 1882; the daughter of Mariano Tomas and Macaria Tomas. Received her early education from the local Spanish school. Being a daughter of poor laborers, she had to quit school and started to work when she was just twelve years old. At the age of sixteen she was already a proficient embroiderer, so much so that in 1898, when the first Americans came and landed at Parañaque, where they first established their camp, she made herself popular with the new comers, who took interest in ordering their Blue Shirts embroidered with American flag, crossed sabers and rifles, with their names written so attractively beneath such beautiful symbols. A few months later, many of the soldiers, who placed their orders with her, were transferred to Camp Stotsenburg, Pampanga. She then sought permission of the military authorities to collect about ₱300.00 worth of goods due her from the soldiers and she was granted a pass to said camp, where she had the occasion to meet several American ladies, most of whom were wives of the Cavalry men then stationed at Camp Stotsenburg (now, Fort Stotsenburg). She found no difficulty in collecting her bills. A few weeks later, she received word from the Office of the Military Governor at Malacbang to the effect that several American tourists would visit Parañaque and make some purchase of native embroideries. Taking advantage of that opportunity, Miss Julia Tomas immediately invited several embroiderers of the town to work in her embroidery shop. She then had around twenty young girls who worked in her shop at Parañaque every day, except Sunday, embroidering piña and jusi cloths which cost ₱30.00 to ₱80.00 apiece. On the first day of her business, she made a gross sale of about ₱2,000.00 worth of goods, and has since been known as the "Pioneer in Embroidery Business of the Philippines." For years her old nipa house in Parañaque was a little "mecca" to American tourists who stopped at Manila, and to accommodate them as well as the local residents she established her shop at Calle San Luis, and later transferred same to Calle M.H. del Pilar, Ermita, Manila, where her office and residence are now located. At the International Colonial Exposition (Exposition Coloniale Internationale) held at Paris in 1931, she obtained First Prize (Gold Medal) for her exhibits consisting of handmade embroideries. She also obtained several prizes from the Philippine Carnival and Exposition, in 1932. In 1939 she sent various exhibits to the Golden Gate International Exposition at San Francisco, Cal.

She married on May 14, 1914, Mr. Victor Medina, also a businessman, who later became Municipal President of Parañaque, Rizal (1922-25), and is at present the owner and director of the famous Gregg Business Institute (formerly, Gregg Business College, founded in 1912). Mr. and Mrs. Medina have six children. They are Andrés Medina, businessman; Dr. Silvestre Medina, physician; Miss Cornelia Medina, pharmacist; Miss Rosario Medina, B.S.C.; Jesus Medina, 3rd year in commerce, U.P.; and Miss Corazon Medina, 3rd year student, high school.

TORRES, Antonio C. — Chief of Police, Police Department, City of Manila; res., 1415 California, Ermita, Manila; tel. 5-77-87.

Born in Manila on Sept. 1, 1885; the son of the late Justice Florentino Torres, of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands, and Doña Sabina Vergara de Torres, from a wealthy Vergara family of Vergara Street, Manila. He is a younger brother of Judge Luis P. Torres.

He studied at the Ateneo de Manila, where he completed his secondary course and obtained his A.B. degree in 1901. In 1902 he left for the United States and studied law in the Cornell University, where he also took up courses in military science. After one year at Cornell, he transferred to the National University, Washington, D.C., and, together with former Secretary Filemon Perez and Vicente Albert, he graduated with the degree of LL.B. in 1905, when he was only twenty years old and one of the youngest in the class.

COL. ANTONIO TORRES

He returned to the Philippines in 1905. Because of his youth, he was not allowed to take the bar examinations. He was appointed to the statistical division of the Bureau of Customs, and later acted as confidential investigator of the then Insular Collector McCoy, of same bureau, until 1909, when he was elected Sergeant-at-Arms of the Philippine Assembly of which the first Speaker was Sergio Osmeña, now Vice-President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines. Later, he was made Social Secretary to the Speaker.

He was the first Filipino to organize cadet battalions in Manila high schools, specially the cadet corps in the Liceo de Manila and Ateneo de Manila during 1906-08; his battalion cadet commanders at that time were men who are now holding high positions with the government, namely Brigadier General Guillermo B. Francisco, Justice Mariano Albert, and ex-Senator Jose Loatin.

In 1914, he left the Philippines for the United States and visited the Panama Exposition. While there, he enlisted for field training at Presidio Fort, California, under General G. J. Harbord, former chief of Philippine Constabulary; and in 1917 he returned to the Philippines and joined the National Guard where he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel by Governor-General Francis Burton Harrison. When the war ended he retired to private life.

When Speaker Osmeña made a tour of Japan, China and Korea in 1919, he designated Colonel Torres as his military aide, and was given official authority to study police conditions in those neighboring countries. In 1929, when he toured Europe and the United States, he was also given recommendations by former Acting Governor-General Gilmore to the heads of European and American police organizations, and with those credentials he was able to study the best police system in the old and new worlds. He was later recommended for appointment to the position of Chief of Police of Manila, but because the appointee had to be an American, Captain Piatt was appointed instead.

In 1928 he was elected City Councilor, re-elected 1931 and 1934, and was president of the Municipal Board during his second term of office. He resigned as member of the board in 1936 in order to accept his present position as the first Filipino Chief of Manila Police Department.

He married the former Miss Corazón Veloso, a wealthy proprietress from Cebu and one-time Queen of the Philippine Carnival.

Rosendo D. Tuazon

Chief Tuazon was born in Pateros, Rizal, on March 1, 1892. He is the son of a farmer. Educated in the public schools. After leaving school, he worked as a clerk in the government. Qualified for appointment as chief of police, and has since 1923 been serving as head of the police department of Pasay under the administrations of Presidents Cruz, Cornejo, San Juan and Mateo. Pasay, with a population of approximately 65,161 and an annual revenue of approximately P280,000.00, counts with a police force consisting of 55 members, perhaps the biggest of all municipal forces in the Islands. Its geographical location as a suburban town with favorable climatic conditions, has attracted all classes of people to reside therein. To protect them and their property from lawless elements and to keep peace and order in such a thickly populated municipality is not an easy task, and Chief Tuazon has so far coped satisfactorily with the situation. He was top-notch in the Civil Service Examinations for Police Lieutenant held in Rizal on Aug. 21, 1937.

A leader, like her husband, in society, in industry, and in business, Doña Marina Yulo-Vargas has distinguished herself among the women of the Philippines through her own merits with which she has been endowed by nature. Her charming personality, coupled with her tact and ability, made her "Queen of the 1917 Iloilo Carnival." She was also elected "Best Dressed Lady of the Philippines" by the D-M-H-M Publications in 1936. She was born in Iloilo, Iloilo, on September 4, 1901; the daughter of ex-Governor Gregorio

MRS. MARINA YULO VARGAS

Yulo Regalado, of Iloilo, and Filomena Ortiz Rubin de Celis.

She studied at the "Moritas" in 1907 when she was barely six years old, and at the Sagrado Corazon de Jesus in 1908. From 1909 to 1915, she was a student in the Assumption Convent, a religious institution of the Philippines. Two years after she became queen of the 1917-Iloilo Carnival, she was married to Jorge B. Vargas, then executive secretary of the First Independence Mission to the United States and secretary to the President of the Philippine Senate, Hon. Manuel L. Quezon. Their union took place on July 23, 1919. She has now eight children: Jorge B. Jr., Angel Federico, Gregorio Roberto, Lourdes Filomena, Eduardo Mariano, Ramon Teodoro, Teresa Carolina, and Maria Luisa.

Notwithstanding her numerous attentions at home as a mother to eight children, she still has time to attend to social, business and public affairs. She is a Roman Catholic.

cessfully managed to learn the Shakespearean language by exchanging her Spanish instruction with that of an American teacher. Then she took up grammar, arithmetic, and other subjects which she used later in her new occupation as one of the pioneer Filipino teachers in Saravia, Negros Occidental. And when the first Girls' Dormitory was established in Bacolod, Negros Occidental, she was at once chosen matron, until she was transferred to the Normal Hall Dormitory in Manila as assistant dean of women. While in Manila, she did her best to acquire all the knowledge she wanted in realizing her ambition. Jointly with an American woman, Miss Mary E. Coleman, she organized in 1907 the first training school for nurses in the Philippines. She was also one of the organizers of the first woman's club in the Islands, and she took great interest in consolidating all the women's clubs into the National Federation of Women's Clubs of the Philippines.

In 1907, she married Jaime C. de Veyra, who was then governor of Leyte and the first Filipino to occupy said office in that province, and who was soon elected delegate to the first Philippine Assembly from the Fourth District of Leyte, 1907-12. Her long and continuous contact with high government officers, business and professional men, social leaders and statesmen of different nationalities here and abroad did not only help her husband in his offices as member of the Assembly, member of the Philippine Commission, executive secretary of the Insular Government, and Resident Commissioner to Washington, D.C., from 1907 to 1923, but also in boosting the Philippines, especially during their stay in America where she attended social functions, state affairs, national conventions, etc., giving lectures on Philippine topics that enlightened the foreigners. As an educator, writer, and social worker, she has qualified herself to discharge the positions she now occupies as private secretary in the Office of the President of the Philippines, member of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, and others.

DR. INES S. VILLA

Born in Cebu, Cebu, on January 21, 1900; daughter of Teresio Villa and Florencia Suico, both of the well-known families in the city of Cebu. Reared and educated in a very Catholic home of well-to-do parents, she grew up amidst favorable conditions for physical, spiritual and intellectual development. She is a product of Philippine, American and European schools. After graduating from the Cebu High School, she enrolled in the Cebu Junior College, U.P., and later in the College of Law, same university; and went to the United States in September, 1921, when she won a scholarship of the National Council of Catholic School of Social Service, at Washington, D.C., where she finished the course in two years; obtained her B.A. degree from the Trinity College, in 1923; and her M.A., from the Catholic University of America, in 1924; took a course in International Relations at Pennsylvania University, and a course in Prevention of Blindness and Conservation of Vision at Columbia University; finished her Doctorate in Education and Sociology, at Fordham University, N.Y., in 1931; and Ph.D., Universidad Central de Madrid, Spain, in 1932.

She was the first to write a long and stirring article advocating suffrage for Filipino women, which article was published in the Manila Times, and which caught the attention of the then Mrs. Harrison, wife of the Governor-General of the Philippines. She was honor student of the Junior College, U.P., and recipient of the Osmeña Gold Medal in the Second Oratorical Contest. In the United States she also captured the first prize for her winning oration entitled, "A Tribute to Woodrow Wilson." Upon her return to the Philippines after her graduation as Ph.D. from Spain, she won the much coveted Zobel Prize for Spanish Literature in the Philippines, in 1932, making her the first Filipino woman to receive the highest literary distinction. She is the author of the book entitled, The Philippines on Road to Culture, written in Spanish and published in Madrid.

She was associate editor, The Advertiser; founder and organizer, Cebu Reformatory, and Cebu City Women's Club; social worker, Office of the Public Welfare Commissioner; instructor in sociology, education, philosophy, Spanish and French languages, in the Manila University, Sto. Tomas University, National University, and Philippine Women's University; member of the faculty, Mapua Institute of Technology, Holy Ghost College, and Adamson School of Industrial Chemistry and Engineering; lecturer, Assumption College, and School of Public Health Nursing, University of the Philippines; and executive secretary, National Economic Protectionism Association, 1935-38.

Dr. Villa also taught at the Summer School of Fordham University; took part in the International Convention of International League of Women Voters; was guest speaker in various conventions and conferences held at Washington, D.C.; represented the Philippines at the International Conference of the Blind held in New York, in which about eight hundred blind men and women from all over the world took part; visited Russia in 1931; witnessed the inauguration of the first Spanish President of the Republic, Mr. Alcala Zamora; attended several sessions of the Republican Spanish Cortes (Assembly), and various intellectual meetings held at the Ateneo de Madrid, Spain; was granted a private audience with His Holiness, the late Pope Pius XI; visited important cities of Europe, the famous universities, national museums, historical places, palaces, basilicas, and the French and Italian Riviéras. She is a traveler and a active of note as legislator, educator and a leader. He was a candidate for a seat in the National Assembly from the First District of Cebu in the national elections held November 8, 1938, but was defeated. However, his defeat in politics did not deter him from continuing his further efforts in the Philippine community. He was elected to the National Assembly of the Philippine Commonwealth in 1946. A. Domingo, Jr. 1947.

Born in Malate, Manila, on June 17, 1885; the son of the late Prof. Tereso Zapata, former violinist-composer and instructor, U. P. Conservatory of Music, and of Juliana Salazar, of Navacan and Cavite. He was educated at the St. Francis Xavier College, where he received his Teacher's Diploma in 1903, and attended the seminary for a few months and later took up commerce, graduating in 1904 with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce (B.S.C.) from the same institution. Among his classmates and co-graduates of that year are Assemblymen Pedro Gil and Tibureio Tancinco, Dr. Leon G. Guin-to, and Pablo de Guia, treasurer of the Manila Railroad Company, who are leaders in their respective lines.

Mr. Zapata started his career as a clerk in the Bureau of Forestry, in 1904. He transferred later to the Bureau of Health, and then to the Bureau of Audits, where he served as examiner and as District Auditor of Antique, 1905-08. He was also Bookkeeper and Assistant Cashier of the Philippine Railway Co. at Iloilo, 1908-11. Returning to Manila in 1911, he joined the Manila Railroad and Light Co. (Meralco) as examiner in the Auditor's Office, and was made Night Cashier of said company; he resigned to join John Rothschild & Co., importers and exporters, 1912-16; and, when the Philippine National Bank was organized in 1916, he found an opportunity to utilize his business knowledge and experience to advantage; so he transferred to said bank where he worked successively as a clerk, bookkeeper, chief bookkeeper, department chief of the Liberty Bonds and War Stamps during the World War, acting manager of the Pangasinan Bank, in 1918, and then cashier and acting manager, Legaspi Branch, until 1920, when he transferred to the Asia Banking Corporation as manager of the Foreign Exchange and Foreign Collections department, 1920-22. In 1922, he joined the Philippine Trust Co. and organized the Foreign Exchange Department of the newly established bank, and was manager of said department until 1929, when he transferred to the Peoples Bank & Trust Co. where he served as auditor, comptroller and bank executive, 1929-37. Sometime in April of 1937, Mr. Zapata resigned from the Peoples Bank and joined the Araneta investment company, and upon the acquisition of the People's Press, was designated Finance Director and General Manager of the four newspapers: Debate, Herald, Mabuhay, and Monday Mail. But about the end of the same year, a disagreement between him and the owners started and he decided to sever connections with the DMHM and go into business for himself. At present he owns and operates more than eight theatres in Luzon, where he exhibits foreign and locally-made cinema films.

Mr. Zapata has the distinction of being the First Filipino Bank Auditor and Comptroller in the Philippines, and the First Filipino to organize Foreign Exchange Department of a local bank. He married on Feb. 29, 1908, the former Miss Aurea Olarte, of Manila, by whom he has had one child. His first wife died on Dec. 15, same year; and in May, 1911, he married his second wife, Maria Bautista, of Capiz, by whom he has thirteen children. He was elected Municipal Councillor of Pasay, Rizal, in June, 1922, and occupied first place in that election, having held said office until October 15, 1925. He is also one of the organizers and stockholders of the Modern Oriental Academy, now known as the Rizal Memorial Academy, of which he is the secretary-treasurer at present. He was a leading member of the Democrata Party in Pasay, and is organizer and National President of the Philippine Section of the World Theosophical Society.

Making a spectacular rise in the public service, starting from a hard-working stenographer to Senator, and now Senior Judge of the Court of Industrial Relations (formerly, chairman of the Board of Industrial Relations), Judge Zulueta's career is indeed an inspiration to the youths of the Philippines. He was born in Molo, now a district of the City of Iloilo, on August 21, 1891; the son of Evaristo Zulueta and Atilana Casten. After obtaining his early education from his hometown, he entered the Ateneo de Manila, where he obtained the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and then studied law in the Escuela de Derecho de Manila (now Manila Law College), graduating with the degree of "Licenciado en Jurisprudencia" (Bachelor of Laws). He began to work as a stenographer and deputy clerk of the Court of First Instance of Manila. From this position he was promoted to that of provincial fiscal of Antique in 1920; transferred to Capiz in the same capacity, 1922; and then to Negros Occidental, 1924-29. Having shown great proficiency, honesty and integrity in his office as fiscal, he was appointed Auxiliary Judge of the Court of First Instance on June 11, 1929, and was subsequently promoted to District Judge of the Court of First Instance for Zamboanga and Sulu.

Francisco Zulueta

Judge Zulueta, as a politician, was the only senator ever elected without any opponent. This was in 1929, when he ran for that high legislative office from the Eighth Senatorial District comprising the provinces of Negros Occidental, Negros Oriental, Palawan and Antique, and was unanimously supported by both the Colectivista and the Unipersonalista parties. In the Philippine Senate, he was chairman of the committees on appointments and health; ranking member of the committees on justice, agriculture, and elections and privileges; member of the steering committee; and member, committees on finance, banking, corporations, and public works.

In June, 1936, he was appointed Judge of the Court of First Instance of Cavite.

Upon the creation of the Industrial Relations Board by Commonwealth Act No. 103, President Quezon appointed Judge Zulueta chairman of said board, a position that calls for tact, wisdom and judicial experience and training, as the board is entrusted with the work of solving the most difficult problems of the country. The important work of the Industrial Relations Board, now Court of Industrial Relations, in accordance with the Act that created it, is to improve the lot of the laborer, in order to eliminate, as much as possible, causes of social unrest and discontent. Judge Zulueta is married to the former Miss Paula Menchaca, of the well-known Menchaca family of Negros Occidental. He is a Roman Catholic.

ADAZA, (Miss) Guadalupe C. — Educator; Member, Provincial Board of Zamboanga; res., Zamboanga, Zamboanga.

Hon. Guadalupe C. Adaza, the first lady to be elected member of the Provincial Board of Zamboanga, was born in Dapitan, Zamboanga, the town made famous for being the place where Dr. José Rizal lived during his four years of exile. She is the eldest among the children of Leoncio Adaza and María Carreon. Born in the year 1906, she studied at the Dapitan Elementary School. Finished her High School at the Philippine Women's College (now Philippine Women's University), and then decided to pursue a course in Education, graduating from the same institution with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education (B. S. E.) with Economics and History as her major and minor subjects, respectively. She then taught at the Zamboanga North Junior High School, Dapitan,

Hon. Guadalupe C. Adaza

Zamboanga; and later at the Lincoln Institute, Manila. Her political stars must have guided her to stay in her home province; consequently she found herself a teacher at the Dapitan Elementary School. In the general elections of 1937, she was a candidate for membership of the provincial board of Zamboanga, with Attorney Matias Ranillo for Governor in the ticket, and she was elected. During the convention of provincial governors held in Dansalan, Lanao, when Governor Ranillo had to be absent from his office to attend said convention, he designated Miss Adaza as Acting Governor of Zamboanga, thus making her the first lady to sit in the gubernatorial chair in that province and perhaps in the whole Philippines. She is a Nacionalista by political affiliation.

General JUAN CAILLES

Agriculturist, Politician, Patriot, and Philanthropist
Chairman, Board on Pensions for Veterans.

GENERAL JUAN CAILLES, coconut planter, patriot, politician and philanthropist, was born in the town of Naugbu, province of Batangas, on November 10, 1871. He is the son of Hipolito Cailles (Frenchman) and Maria Caupama (British Indian). He received his early education from a private school conducted by Don Olivido Caballero in Tuy, Batangas, and his college training from the Jesuit's Normal School for Teachers, Manila, where he graduated in 1890. He was a school teacher in Cavite when the revolution against Spain broke out in 1896. Joining the revolutionary forces as a private under General Emilio Aguinaldo, he rose to the rank of Brigadier General through his own merits as a soldier of special tact, ability and valor. He was appointed Governor of Laguna in 1898, and later Governor of Laguna and Tayabas from 1899 to 1900. He was subsequently elected Provincial Governor of Laguna during the early part of the American administration and held said office until 1910. He was active in his duties in maintaining peace and order, suppressing banditry and other acts of lawlessness in his province. He did a lot of public improvements during his terms of office. From 1911 to 1916 he devoted his attention to his agricultural interests, and from 1916 to 1925 he was again at the helm of his province. In October, 1925, Governor General Leonard Wood appointed him a Representative for the Mountain Province, which position he held continuously until 1931, when he was elected Provincial Governor of Laguna and re-elected to same office in 1934 for another term which expired on December 31, 1937. During his last two terms of office as chief executive of the province he helped a number of deserving students of high school by paying their tuition fees, books, etc., which cost him about P3,000.00 a year. He also spent a part of his salary for the services of an extra physician who was assigned to duty in the free ward of the Laguna Provincial Hospital to accommodate poor patients. Notwithstanding the business depression prevailing throughout the coconut regions as a result of last storms and earthquake, leaf miners, and other calamities which visited Laguna, Governor Cailles was able to keep his province solvent and free from deficits. He did also maintain peace and order within his jurisdiction. With the cooperation of the Philippine Constabulary and town police he immediately suppressed the Sakdal uprising in Sta. Rosa and Cabuyao on May 3, 1935, and took an important part in the campaign for the capture of the notorious bandit, Teodoro Asedillo, one-time Terror of the Sierra Madre.

General Cailles was appointed a member of the National Defense Council, and also member of the Board on Pensions for Veterans, of which he is now the Chairman. He is married to the former Miss Jacinta Zakra, by whom he has one child, Juannita Z. Cailles. He is a Nacionalista by political affiliation, and a Roman Catholic by religion. Born in San Roque, Cavite, Cavite, on December 5, 1883. Educated at the Sta.

Cruz (Manila) Public School and later at the Ateneo Municipal de Manila (now Ateneo de Manila), graduating from the latter with the degrees of "Bachiller en Artes" (A.B.) in 1900, and "Perito Mercantil" (B.C.S.) in 1901; studied law at night in the Escuela de Derecho de Manila (now Manila Law College) and in La Jurisprudencia, where he obtained the degree of "Licenciado en Derecho" (LL.B.) in 1917, and passed the bar examinations in 1918. Mr. Galvez started to work as a temporary clerk in the banking house of Francisco Reyes, now defunct, with a salary of P180.00 per annum in 1901, and rose to his present position as Vice-President and Treasurer of the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company with a salary of P18,000.00 per annum in 1938. He was one of the first Filipino second-grade civil service eligibles during the early part of American administration and was offered a good position in the Executive Bureau before he left with the Philippine Exposition Board for the St. Louis Exposition at

José S. Galvez

St. Louis, Missouri, U.S.A., in 1903, when he was made private secretary to the late Dr. León Ma. Guerrero, then Secretary of the Board. While in America, Mr. Galvez was made Assistant Secretary of the Board. He returned to the Philippines with the representatives of the Philippine Exposition Board in 1905, and upon his arrival he was employed by the Manila Electric Railroad and Light Company (Meralco), first, as a translator and instructor of conductors, and then transferred to the Transportation Department of same company as starter and time-schedule man, and later promoted to Paymaster of the Meralco, which position he held until Oct. 31, 1908, when he resigned to accept the position of Cashier of the Philippine Islands Telephone and Telegraph Company, with Mr. E. A. Noble as General Manager. On many occasions, Mr. Galvez was called upon to act in the absence of the General Manager, especially in supervising the purchases and expenses of the company, and has since that time been entrusted with the signing of checks for disbursements of the Company's funds.

In March, 1923, when the Philippine Islands Telephone and Telegraph Company was reorganized and reincorporated as a domestic corporation under the name of Philippine Telephone and Telegraph Company, Mr. Galvez was elected Secretary of the new corporation. After fifteen years of continuous, faithful and efficient service, he retired on Dec. 31, 1923, to devote his full time to the practice of law. At the request of Mr. Walter Z. Smith, then General Manager of the Philippine Telephone and Telegraph Company, Mr. Galvez joined the organization again on March 16, 1924, to take charge of the Cashier's and the Recorder's Section, in addition to his duties as Secretary. On January 1, 1927, he was also elected Assistant Treasurer of the corporation, and in 1929, upon the consolidation of the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company and the Philippine Telephone and Telegraph Company, Mr. Galvez was again elected, this time, as Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, and appointed General Commercial Manager, which position he held until 1936, when he was elected Treasurer and Assistant Secretary.

During the early part of 1935, as can be recalled, Mr. and Mrs. Galvez left the Islands for a pleasure trip around the world, which lasted for about six months. It was during this trip that he saw the different telephone organizations in other parts of the globe, and he returned home with the satisfaction of knowing that the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. can feel proud of their system as it "can favorably compare with that of the leading cities of Europe, including Paris, Rome and Berlin, although wonderful telephone systems can be found in the Pacific Telephone Company and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company," in the words of Mr. Galvez.

On May 26, 1938, Mr. Galvez was elected Vice-President and Treasurer of the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company, and re-elected on April 20, 1939. He is a member of the Manila Rotary Club, Wack Wack Golf and Country Club, Philippine Chamber of Commerce, Philippine Columbian Association (charter member), Boy Scouts of America, Caballeros de Rizal (charter member), National Geographic Society, Club Filipino, Pasay Civic Club (founder), Sociedad de Socorros Mutuos de Empleados del Comercio de Filipinas (charter member), Sociedad Lírico-Dramática de Aficionados "Talia" (charter member), the Y.M.C.A., and others.

He married on May 31, 1903, the former Miss Graciana Zaldua, of Daet, Camarines Norte, by whom his children are: Cesar, Josefina, Carlos, Elvira, Rosa, Fernando, Eugenio, Armando, Amparo, Jose and Remigio. He belongs to no political party and is a Catholic by religion.

Dr. Maria Paz Mendoza-Guazon, one of the most cultured Filipino women, was born in Pandacan, Manila, on May 10, 1884. She received her primary as well as elementary and musical education from the Colegio de la Concordia, studied English in the American School at Calle Victoria, Intramuros, then transferred to the Philippine Normal School, where she graduated as an insular teacher in 1905. She then studied medicine and graduated from the University of the Philippines with the degree of M. D. in 1912. After graduation she served in the Philippine General Hospital as a resident physician, and in 1913 she married Dr. Potenciano Guazon, who died a few years later.

In memory of him she built the Guazon Memorial Surgical Pavillion in the Philippine General Hospital.

She was appointed an assistant instructor in bacteriology and pathology, College of Medicine, University of the Philippines, in 1914, and was promoted to instructor in 1916. She attended the School of Tropical Medicine and obtained her degree in Doctor of Tropical Medicine, the first woman in the Philippines to possess that distinction, 1916. She was appointed Dean of Women, Univ. of the Philippines, and organized the Women's Medico-Pharmaceutico-Dental Association, of which she was elected the first president, the U. P. Red Cross in 1917 and the conferences on first aid to the injured. She instituted the uniform of the U. P. girls and was elected Secretary-Treasurer of the U. P. Alumni, 1918-19, and Fellow abroad, 1919-21. She took post graduate work in the Universities of Chicago, Columbia, and Harvard, and visited the Universities of Pennsylvania and Johns Hopkins. She also took post graduate courses in the Universities of Paris and London, visited the hospitals and universities of Berlin and Barcelona, and returned to Manila in May, 1921. She was appointed Associate Professor of Bacteriology and Pathology, 1922. She was a member of the Educational Mission to the U.S.A. in 1926 as representative of the U. P. Alumni; after her mission she travelled around the world. In 1927, she was made Professor of Bacteriology and Pathology, College of Medicine, University of the Philippines.

She was first president of the Women's Medical Association of the Philippines, 1921-22, and first president of the National League of Filipino Women, 1922. She organized civic conferences for young women and factory girls.

Dr. Mendoza-Guazon was a member of the first Pan-Pacific Women's Conference, Honolulu, 1928; became first woman Regent of the University of the Philippines, and president of the Philippine Association of University Women, 1928; member of the House Beautiful Contest since 1929; first woman member of the Text-Book Board, 1931; and member of the delegation to Hankow, China, for the Pan-Pacific Relations, 1931. She retired from active service in the University of the Philippines in 1933 to become Managing Editor of "The Woman's World" until March, 1937. In February, 1939, she was chosen to head the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; she being the first Filipina to hold the office.

She is a noted traveler, a writer, and a social worker. She is the author of a "Guide to the Study of Pathology" and many scientific papers published in various magazines. Her "Notas de Viaje" won the Zobel prize on Spanish literature in 1930. She is also the author of "My Ideal Filipino Girl," a compilation of her writings and speeches, and "The Development, and Progress of the Filipino Women." She is also an accomplished pianiste.

RODRIGUEZ, Eulogio — Agriculturist, Business Executive, and Statesman; former Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce; now President and General Manager, Cebu Portland Cement Co.; Member, Board of Directors, Philippine National Bank; and General Campaign Manager, 1940-41 Elections, Partido Nacionalista; res., 533 Legarda, Sampaloc, Manila, tel. 2-69-48. (Correcting biography on pages 2071-72; see picture on page 913.)

The life story of the Hon. Eulogio Rodriguez, the "Favorite Son" of Rizal Province, is an epitome to a man who has graduated from political apprenticeship to that of a key position in the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

Born in Montalban, Rizal, on January 21, 1883, he started his early schooling in his hometown. At a tender age, he fell under the tutorship of the late Don Benedicto Luna. Later, he enrolled in the San Juan de Letran College, and took up the study of law under Don Mariano Legaspi y Florendo.

His rise as a businessman of reputation and credit was even more meteoric than his bristling political career. He started business in a small way by supplying fodder and firewood to American soldiers stationed at Marikina and its environs during the early American régime. Later, he operated four saloon bars that catered to American doughboys. From then on, he branched anew as a contractor. With the modest fortune that he amassed from his business ventures, he bought lands to engage himself in wide range farming.

In the year 1928, he pitched his quarters in Manila by organizing the Luzon Surety Company, Inc., of which he was first general manager and secretary-treasurer. Simultaneously, he was treasurer and member of the board of directors of the Luzon Investment Co., Inc., secretary and member of the board of directors of the National Life Insurance Co., president of the Madaymon Mining Exploration Co., and vice-president and eventually, president of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce.

He earned his first political plum at the age of 25, when he considered himself primed for the political life. He was elected Municipal President of Montalban, Rizal, and served in that official capacity for eight consecutive years, 1909-16.

His next political foray was as Provincial Governor of Rizal for two separate terms, 1916-19, and 1922-23. On July 20, 1923, while Governor-incumbent of Rizal, he was designated Mayor of the City of Manila, which position he held up to November 17, 1923. On January 21, 1924, Governor-General Wood appointed him Representative for the Province of Nueva Vizcaya, and in the general elections of June, 1925, he was elected Representative from the second district of Rizal and reelected to same office in June, 1931, his term of office expiring in 1934. While yet a member of the House of Representatives, Governor-General Frank Murphy appointed him Secretary of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, which position he held until October 31, 1938, when he resigned in order to attend to his business interests; but on November 1, 1938, President Quezon appointed him General Manager of the Cebu Portland Cement Co., of which he is also chairman of the board of directors. He is also chairman of the Board of Governors of the National Produce Exchange; vice-president, National Development Co.; director, Philippine National Bank; director, Philippine Exposition, Inc.; and member, National Economic Council.

In the first presidential election held under the Commonwealth in 1935, he was in the thick of the fight, acting as "Jimmy Farley" of the campaign committee, traveling extensively in the provinces, and swaying, with his magnetic personality, followers of the opposition candidates. Barring the candidates themselves, he has done more than any other single individual for the success of the Quezon-Osmeña coalition ticket. He was formerly a member of the Progresista Party and later a member of the National Directorate of the Democrata Party. In June, 1939, he was designated General Campaign Manager of the Nacionalista Party for the coming elections (1940 and 1941).

As a traveler, former Secretary Rodriguez has visited Japan, United States of America, and Europe, March 22-August 8, 1938.

He is married to the former Miss Juana Santiago, by whom his children are Eulogio Rodriguez, jr., now governor of Rizal; José Rodriguez, Dr. Ruperto Rodriguez, Leonora Rodriguez, Isidro Rodriguez, Constanca Rodriguez, and Adelaida Rodriguez. He is a member of various clubs and associations, and is a Roman Catholic by religion.

ZIPPER, Dr. Herbert — Professor, Composer and Conductor; director, Academy of Music of Manila; orchestra conductor, Manila Symphony Society; office, 44 Mabini, Ermita, Manila; tel. 2-30-64.

Prof. Zipper arrived at Manila on board the s.s. Conte Biancamano at 8:30 a.m., Friday, June 23, 1939, welcomed at Pier 7 by Mr. and Mrs. Benito F. Legarda and a delegation of musical artists headed by Prof. Ernesto Vallejo, concert master of the Manila Symphony Orchestra.

He was born in Vienna, Austria, 34 years ago; studied music at the State Conservatory of Music at Vienna, graduating with honors in 1924 under the direction of Dr. Joseph Marx. After graduation he has acquired more experience in composing opera and symphony music and has been well-known in the cities of Czechoslovakia and Germany. He also gave various concerts under the direction of Bruno Walter, Toscanini, Furtwangler and others in Vienna and Salzburg. During his vacations he has written several compositions, and has worked during one summer with the National Madrigal Choir at London and with the London Broadcasting Co. He conducted his first orchestral concert in 1927. In 1931 he was offered the position of conductor of symphony and opera orchestra at Disseldorf, Germany, having directed a choir of 400 persons, and was also professor of harmony in the conservatory of said city.

In 1933, Dr. Zipper left Germany and returned to Vienna where he met Dr. Fritz Stiedry, general director of music in Leningrad, who invited him to join the radio company of Moscow. On his way to Moscow he directed two concerts of Beethoven at Varsovia; and when he was already in Russia one of his compositions was played at the Grand Concert Hall of Vienna and also at Paris by Dr. George Spill. During his stay in Russia, he wrote also a ballet in three acts and a number of songs. In 1937 he returned to Vienna where he wrote a comic opera based on the composition of Oscar Wilde for a new opera company which would make a tour in the United States under the direction of Mr. Hurok. He was among those found in the concentration camp in Europe in May, 1938, when Dr. Klemperer and Dr. Stiedry, both of whom are now in the United States, made arrangements for his trip to that continent for a number of concerts he had to give there, and he was in Paris preparing for his departure when he was offered the position as successor to the late Dr. Alexander Lippay.

Dr. Paul R. Verzosa

Dr. Verzosa was born in Orion, Bataan, on January 15, 1893. Graduated from the Bataan Provincial School; attended Cavite High School; obtained his A.B. degree as valedictorian from the St. Xavier College, 1914; M.A., McKinley University, Chicago, Ill., 1916; LL.B., St. Louis College of Law and Finance, St. Louis, 1919; B.S.C., San Antonio University, Texas; Ph.D., Oskaloosa College, Iowa, 1919; LL.M., Oskaloosa College, 1921; Certificate of Proficiency in Calligraphic Testing, Silliman University, 1937; awarded Diploma in Meritorious Research in Criminological Chemistry, Quisumbing School of Technology, 1937. Ex-Dean, College of Philosophy and Literature, University of Manila; War Correspondent in Tokyo, Shanghai, Hongkong, Amoy, Kulangsu; and Staff Correspondent in Honduras, Nicaragua, and Mexico. Former Editor, Cebu Daily Advertiser; Iloilo Daily Times; and General Manager of National News Service; and, Editor and Proprietor, Commonwealth Magazine.

Mr. Eulogio B. Rodriguez, acting Director of the National Library of the Philippines, wrote on June 5, 1939, the biographic notes on Dr. Verzosa as follows:

"Among the outstanding Filipino philologists and linguists, the author of this unique book (Philippine National Writing), Dr. P. R. Verzosa, can be counted without misgiving. Time and again he has proven his mettle. Having resided abroad for many years and crisscrossed the Philippines for over a decade, he has rounded his philological career of a proficient linguist worthy of his salt.

"As a college student he held the scholarship of the late Archbishop Jeronimas Harty of Manila in the Central Seminary of St. Xavier and then he was awarded the scholarship of the late Chief Justice Cayetano Arellano in St. Xavier College. Graduating at the head of his class from this college, Don Cayetano sent him abroad. At Fordham University, New York City, Dr. Verzosa was awarded four year scholarship in the School of Law. Later the late Cardinal Farley of New York took him as His Eminence's protégé in the Cathedral College, where he was given special tutors in English and romance languages.

"During his stay in New York he underwent a rigid tutorage in philology under the guidance of the foremost Jesuit linguist, the Rev. Francis Barnum, S.J.

"After the World War, the Federal Board for Vocational Education of the United States sent Dr. Verzosa to the famous School of Journalism, University of Missouri, and later to the School of Journalism, University of the Philippines.

"Upon his return from abroad he immediately founded the first Philological School in Manila and during his training in the University of the Philippines, he was selected to be the dean of the College of Philosophy and Literature, University of Manila.

"He associated himself with the Philippines' foremost philological savants: Don Ignacio Villamor, Dr. T. H. Pardo de Tavera, Don Epifanio Cristobal de los Santos, Don Pedro Serrano Laktaw, and Prof. Otto Scheerer.

"After his pedagogic career in Manila, the author was sent as War Correspondent in Tokyo, Kulangsu, and Shanghai, and made several trips to the neighboring Asiatic countries, where he had the unusual opportunity to perfect his knowledge of Oriental tongues.

"Being a proficient practicing handwriting expert and qualified before the courts of law, Dr. Verzosa has dwelt upon the Filipino ancient calligraphy and writing in the light of the sciences. He has happily boiled down between the covers of his latest book, the remarkable features of our native writing, an undisputed landmark of our past cultural grandeur.

"From the sancta sanctorum of the New York Public Library Manuscript Division where he made his calligraphic researches and coupled with his painstaking devotion to this uninvaded field of human knowledge, Dr. Verzosa remarkably delivered his lecture on "The Evolution of Tagalog Alphabet and Calligraphy" last March 2, 1939, in Villamor Hall, as guest speaker of the Institute of National Language."

BYRNS, Joseph W. — Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, died in June, 1936. (See pages 393-395.)

Speaker Joseph Wellington Byrns
(From The Time — June 15, 1936.)

During the death of Rep. A. Platt Andrews, Speaker Byrns appointed a committee of four to attend the funeral, banged his gavel for adjournment, went home to his suite at the Mayflower Hotel. That was during the early part of the month of June, 1936. Nine hours later the Grim Reaper paid another call, and lanky bushy-browed, 66 year old Joe Byrns lay dead of a cerebral hemorrhage, first Speaker in history to die while Congress was in session.

Joe Byrns was not a great speaker in the tradition of "Tsar" Reed, "Uncle Joe" Cannon and Nick Longworth. But the same big warm heart which kept him from giving the unwieldy House the iron fisted discipline it often needs made the one time Tennessee farm boy one of the best-liked Speakers the house has ever had. Last week the nation's statesmen forgot his amiable, easy-going leadership, paid heartfelt tribute to his honest simplicity, blamed his death on the conscientious industry with which he strived to fulfill his duties. "He served his state and the nation", mourned President Roosevelt, "with fidelity, honor and great usefulness."

When the Democratic majority rewarded Joe Byrns' quarter-century of loyal party service with the Speakership 17 months ago, the New Deal counted on quite able Floor Leader William Brockman "Tallulah's Father" Bankhead of Alabama to help him keep that unwieldy majority marching in line. Speaker Bankhead took his oath in tears.

CADWALLADER, Brook W. — Businessman; General Manager of the Florannie Mining Company; organizer, B. W. Cadwallader Lumber Co., and partner of the Cadwallader-Gibson Lumber Company, died in Lucerne, Switzerland, on November 20, 1936. (See page 1635.)

CARRION, Santiago — Businessman; General Manager of the "La Yebana", died on April 21, 1939. (See page 1643.)

CASIMIRO, José — Lawyer, Clerk of the Court of First Instance and Sheriff of Manila, died of paralysis on May 26, 1938.

CASIMIRO, Pedro — Proprietor, Businessman, and lover of sports; died after a lingering illness that lasted 5 years and 6 months as a result of paralysis, on September 15, 1935. He was the father of the late Don José Casimiro, clerk of court, Court of First Instance of Manila.

COPELAND, Royal S. — Democrat; U. S. Senator, died when he collapsed after adjournment of the 75th Congress, on June 17, 1938.

COWAN, James William Ian — Manager of the "Asiatic Petroleum Company", died on June 5, 1939.

DARROW, Clarence — World famed criminal lawyer, died of heart attack in Chicago, Illinois, U.S.A., on March 1, 1938.

DARVIN y EJERCITO, Teodoro — Municipal Vice-Mayor of Imus, Cavite, died on June 5, 1939.

DERN, George H. — Statesman; Secretary of War of the United States of America, died of heart attack on August 27, 1936, in Washington Hospital. (See pages 424-430.)

DERN IS LAID TO REST

Fully nine months after he attended the inauguration of the Philippine Commonwealth as personal representative of President Roosevelt, George H. Dern, former Utah Governor and Secretary of War in the Roosevelt Cabinet, died of heart failure in a Washington hospital on August 27, 1936. On August 30, 1936, through lines of cavalry and infantry, at salute, the funeral procession passed to the Union Station, Washington, where the body of the Cabinet officer was started back to Utah for burial.

On September 1, 1936, a crowd estimated at 30,000 or more jammed in or near the great Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, Utah, as funeral services were held for the late Secretary, with President Roosevelt and members of the Cabinet in attendance. The remains of Secretary Dern were finally laid to rest in Mt. Olivet cemetery.—The Sunday Tribune Magazine—October 11, 1936.

EARHART-PUTNAM, Amelia — World-famed Aviatrix, was lost in the Pacific on her last flight, June 29, 1937, with Capt. Fred J. Noonan.

Elihu Root

ROOT, FAMED STATESMAN, PEACE EXPERT, DIES

NEW YORK, FEB. 7, 1937.—Elihu Root, former Secretary of State and Secretary of War during the Philippine insurrection, died at 2:40 a.m. today at the age of 92.

Winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for his "eminent merits in the pacification of the Philippines and China and in handling the American-Japanese dispute," he was nationally regarded as the prime U.S. example of the statesmen's statesman.

Born in the scholarly atmosphere of a college campus home at Clinton, New York, Elihu Root rose to positions of high importance in the government. After retiring from public life, however, he came forward once more to do deeds of international importance and to be honored.

It was during the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt that Root had perhaps his best chance to achieve the highest office of the land. Root had been Secretary of War and he had done more than reorganize the army; he had framed the Platt amendment which defined American relations with Cuba. He wrote the instructions to the military commission which was sent to govern the Philippines, and he had devised the constitution for Porto Rico. After a period of private practice he returned to the cabinet as Secretary of State and achieved the brilliant diplomatic stroke of negotiating the "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan. Then he became Senator from New York, making notable speeches.

When Roosevelt (Theodore) neared the end of his administration he thought of Root. Once he remarked that he would crawl from the White House to the Capitol on hands and knees to make Root President. But, in 1908 he gave the nomination to Taft, not to Root, because of his conviction that while Root would make a great President he would make a poor candidate.

Again, during the administration of President Harding, Root had a chance under even more promising circumstances to set a foot on the ladder. He was strongly supported for the position of Secretary of State, but President Harding instead chose Charles E. Hughes.

Root was born February 15, 1845. His father was a college professor and he received an excellent early education.

He graduated from New York University in 1867 and began the practice of law in New York City. Unlike most young lawyers, Root found almost immediate success. He had never been poor and his life contrasts strongly with Lincoln and Washington. He was more like Henry Cabot Lodge. He married Miss Clara Wales, daughter of Salem Wales of New York in 1878.

After admission to the New York bar in 1867 he practiced in New York until 1893, when he was chosen district attorney—his first public office. He took a big part in Republican affairs in New York state, and President McKinley chose him to be Secretary of War in 1899 at the close of Spanish-American War.

His natural genius caused President Roosevelt (Theodore) to name him Secretary of State in the Roosevelt cabinet, July 1, 1905. His greatest act as Secretary of State was reorganization of the consular service for which he was highly commended by those who appreciated his quiet work. He also negotiated 75 treaties with foreign nations—a record number, although none of them was of sufficient importance to draw any fighting public masses to him.

Root conceived the idea of an International court of justice in co-operation with the League of Nations. He practically formulated the scheme. President Harding later brought a proposal for American participation in the court before the Senate. But Root received no credit.

His contribution to the Constitution of the World Court has been considered Root's greatest international achievement. For his work in helping found the World Court he received the $25,000 award of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation in 1926. The National Assembly of Design created a new international award, a medal for "distinguished service in the fine arts," and presented it to Root in 1929.

He held the presidency of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace until his resignation in May of 1925. In 1910 he had become a member of the Permanent Court at The Hague, this leading to his subsequent service in creation of the World Court.—The Monday Mail-February 8, 1937.

SINGIAN, Dr. Gregorio — Noted Filipino Physician and Surgeon, died in Hongkong, on January 29, 1937.

SISON, Pedro Ma. — Lawyer; Judge of the Court of First Instance of Manila, died in the court room of heart failure as a result of high blood pressure and kidney trouble, June 12, 1938.

SNOWDER, Philip — Viscount; former Chancellor of Exchequer, Great Britain, died of heart attack in London, on May 15, 1937.

TOLENTINO, Dr. Mariano — Physician; Assistant Director, Philippine General Hospital, died on March 31, 1935.

TOPACIO, Dr. Teódulo — Bacteriologist, Pathologist, and Veterinarian; Chief, Veterinary Research Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. (Died of cerebral hemorrhage on June 19, 1939.)

Dr. Topacio, eminent Filipino veterinarian, was born in Imus, Cavite, on March 20, 1887; the son of Cayetano Topacio and Petra Concepción. Obtained his early education from his home province; went to the United States in 1905 and enrolled in the University of Nebraska, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Science, in 1909. Returned to the Philippines in 1912, and took veterinary science in the University of the Philippines, graduating in 1916 with the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Science. In 1927, Dr. Topacio returned to the United States to further his studies in the State College of Washington where he specialized as expert in bacteriological science. He studied in the Johns Hopkins University, where he obtained the degree of Doctor of Science in Hygiene, 1930. Dr. Topacio specialized in veterinary, bacteriology, and pathology in Washington, D.C., and had visited famous laboratories of Berlin, London, Paris, and Rome in 1931. At the time of his death, Dr. Topacio was a professor in the College of Veterinary Science, U.P., and president of the Asociación Médica Veterinaria de Filipinas; member, Phi Kappa Phi (State College of Washington), Society of American Bacteriologists (University of Pennsylvania), Sigma Chi (Johns Hopkins University), Society of Scientists of P.I., Philippine Society of Parasitologists, Association of Veterinarians of America, National Scientific Research of the Philippines, and Chief, Veterinary Research Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. A member of the masonic lodge "Nilad" No. 12, F. & A. M. of the Philippines.

He was married to the former Miss Rosario Masaaga, by whom his children are Arsenio, Eduardo, Teódulo, Renato, and Rodolfo.

I. AVIATION

HISTORY OF THE BUREAU OF AERONAUTICS

By

Captain BASILIO FERNANDO, AC, PA.
Acting Director, Bureau of Aeronautics

Introduction

Credit for the introduction of the airplane into the Philippines is due to the United States Army Air Corps. In 1916 five United States Army officers, with six hydroplanes, were stationed at Corregidor. In September, 1919, the present United States Army air units arrived in the Philippines.

The Philippine Government was not slow to realize the importance of aviation, for in the appropriation act for the year 1921 an item of ₱322,035 was included for the purpose of creating the Philippine Air Service and another sum of ₱645,000 for the purchase of a landing field at Camp Claudio, Parañaque, Rizal. The Philippine Air Service was to engage in carrying mail and passengers, thus affording a self-supporting means of training pilots continuously. The necessary flying equipment was purchased and plans to carry airmail* were perfected, but due to the fact that the income of the government for the first quarter of that year was much lower than that estimated, the appropriation for the Philippine Air Service was drastically cut. At the end of that year, it was finally discontinued for failure of the Legislature to appropriate funds for its operation for the following year.

As time went on and as the flight by the United States Army Air Corps became a familiar occurrence, business establishments came to think of the numerous advantages of this new means of transportation. Owners of sugar centrals in various places in the Philippines began constructing private airports for use in case of emergency. However, air travel became a commercial venture in the Philippines only in 1930 when the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company was organized. This company commenced operations in the latter part of 1931.

Creation of the Aeronautics Division

To meet the apparent need for a government office to supervise, regulate and control air commerce and to foster aviation development, the Philippine Legislature passed a bill in 1931, which later became Act No. 3909. Pursuant to the provisions of the said Act, the Secretary of Public Works and Communications created the Aeronautics Division on February 15, 1932.

*"On April 4, 1919, the first page of the history of the air mail in the Philippines had been written. That was Ruth Law, the American aviatrix, who for the first half of her contract with the Philippine Aero Club carried the first air mail in the Islands on an exhibition flight around the City of Manila.

The flight lasted almost one hour but it made so great an attraction that according to an estimate, at least ten thousand people — men, women and children — stood spell bound gazing at the swooping and darting heroine of the sky on the afternoon of April 4, 1919, at the Luneta, Manila."—W. Bruggmann, Pres., Phil. Air Mail Society.

Organization and Functions of the Aeronautics Division

Captain Russell L. Maughan of the United States Army Air Corps was detailed to act as Chief of the Aeronautics Division. Dr. G. Y. Zara, an aeronautical engineer graduate from well-known universities in the United States and in France, was appointed to assist him. One aeronautical inspector and two clerk-stenographers, besides the Chief and the Assistant Chief, composed the personnel of the Aeronautics Division.

Among the functions of this new office were: the issuance and publication of regulations; supervision of airlines, the inspection, acquisition and construction of landing fields; the examination and rating of airmen and inspection and licensing of airplanes; the enforcement of laws pertaining to aviation; and the securing of satisfactory aviation legislation.

All possible landing field sites were inspected and the site for the Manila Airport selected. Construction of landing fields at Cebu, Cebu; Baguio, Mountain Province; and San Fernando, La Union, was begun with a financial aid of ₱2,000 for each field from the appropriation of the Aeronautics Division. With the cooperation of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, maps were made showing the routes to be followed in air navigation. Airports were classified into insular, provincial, municipal or commercial.

Aeronautics Bulletin No. 1, containing air commerce rules and regulations, was promulgated and copies of it distributed to aircraft owners, operators, pilots, mechanics and Constabulary officers. All aircraft were inspected and licensed in accordance with existing law and regulations. Pilots and mechanics who passed the required examinations were licensed.

Necessary facilities were extended to the following foreign aviators who flew to the Philippines: Richard Halliburton in March, F. Rein y Loring in July, and Wolfgang Von Gronau in September.

The Aeronautics Division entered its second year of activity without change of personnel. However, due to the steadily increasing volume of work, it was found necessary later to fill the position of Chief Clerk and that of topographical draftsman and messenger.

Five new airplanes arrived in the Philippines, four of which were of the cabin type accommodating from six to eleven passengers. This is the first time that aircraft capable of being economically used on airlines was received in the Philippines. There were 13 airplanes, 34 pilots (except student pilots) and 37 mechanics registered. A total of 31 inspections of aircraft were made. Six aeronautics bulletins were printed.

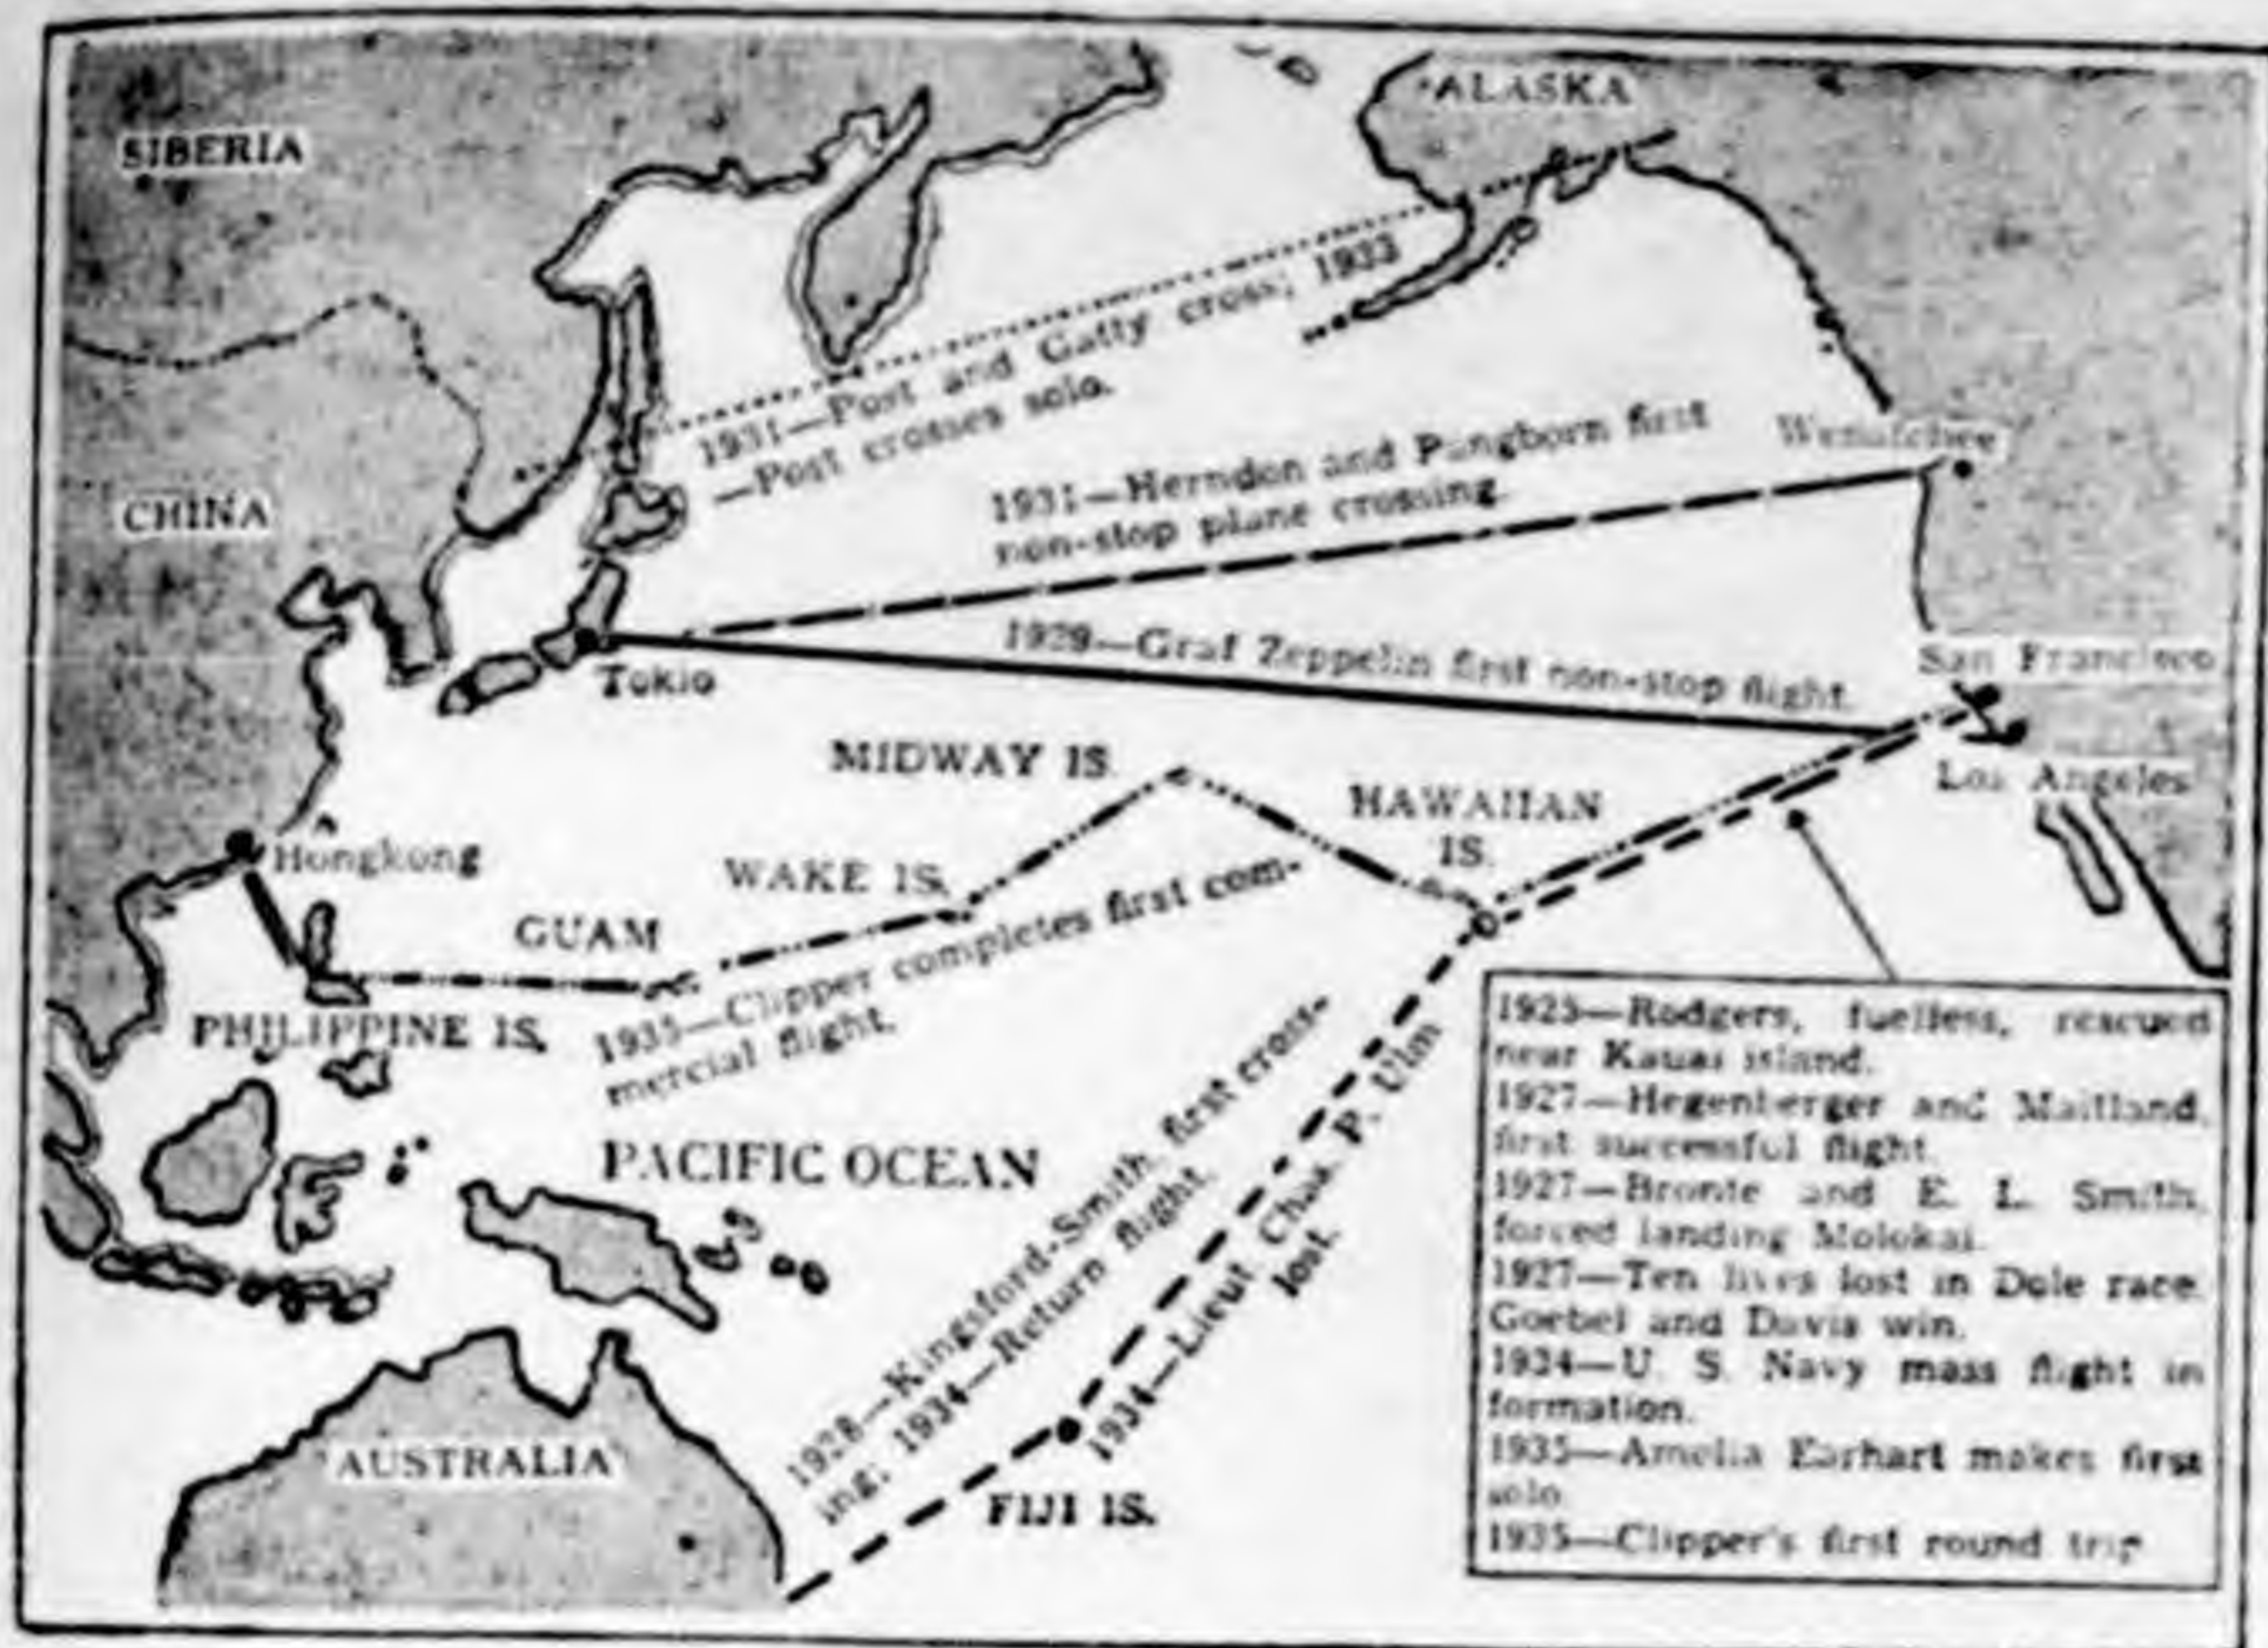

Construction work on the Manila Airport was begun, construction of the Cebu and Baguio Airports was completed, and numerous other fields in provincial capitals were inspected. The Iloilo-Negros Air Express Company began actual operations in February. In view of the actual operations of two airline companies (the other being the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company), it was found necessary to establish intermediate landing fields along the routes served by them. A survey of such possible field was made.

The Aeronautics Division sponsored a number of bills designed to promote the development of aviation, but none of them received legislative approval. The first bill would create a Bureau of Aeronautics; the second would allow the construction and maintenance of airports from the Road and Bridge Fund; the third would exempt airports and landing fields from taxation; the fourth would create an aviation unit in the Philippine Constabulary; and the fifth would appropriate funds for the construction of intermediate landing fields.

Facilities were extended to F. Rein y Loring who made another flight to the Philippines, and Harold Bixby who made an exploration flight from Shanghai to Manila for the Pan American Airways Company.

In view of the steadily expanding activities of the Aeronautics Division all positions were filled, and in addition to its regular personnel, it was found necessary to secure the detail of a number of United States Army Air Corps officers as temporary inspectors.

Nine provinces and municipalities where construction of landing fields was deemed necessary received financial aid from the Aeronautics Division. A two-month inspection of possible landing fields in Mindanao was made. Twenty-two possible fields were located and they were recommended reserved for future use.

As in previous years, the Aeronautics Division sponsored five bills, three of which were enacted. They were: Act No. 4143, providing for the exemption of airports from taxation; Act 4193, appropriating P200,000 for the construction of landing fields and other air navigation facilities; and Act 4194, providing for the creation of an aviation unit in the Philippine Constabulary. The aviation unit created under this Act formed the nucleus of the present Philippine Army Air Corps.

Ten theoretical and practical examinations of pilots, fourteen theoretical and practical examinations of mechanics, thirty routine and twenty-eight inspections of airplanes were made during the year.

A British Flying Squadron flew over, and stopped in, the Philippines.

Two inspectors, one messenger-clerk and five laborers were added to the office force.

An investigation of all feasible airlines in the Philippines was made. The Manila-Paracale and the Manila-Iloilo-Cebu-Davao airlines were inaugurated during the latter part of the year. Forty landing fields were inspected, twenty-one were acquired and twenty-two constructed, maintained or improved.

Thirteen theoretical and practical examinations of pilots, eleven theoretical and practical examinations of mechanics, and thirty-four routine and nine special inspections of airplanes were made.

During the year, two good-will flights by foreign airplanes were made to the Philippines: one by a Royal Air Force Squadron and the other by a Japanese airplane.

On November 29th the China Clipper of the Pan American Airways landed in Manila, thus inaugurating the trans-Pacific air route of the said Company.

In July, Captain Maughan severed his connection with the Aeronautics Division, his tour of duty in the Philippines having expired. Captain Harvey W. Prosser, also of the United States Army Air Corps, succeeded him.

One aeronautical inspector and one aeronautical radio inspector were appointed, one laborer was hired and eight caretakers assigned to different landing fields under the supervision of the Aeronautics Division.

Fourteen landing fields were acquired, the same number constructed and nine were improved. Expropriation proceedings were instituted in connection with five landing field projects. Data regarding landing fields were compiled and distributed to airline companies, pilots, and aviation schools. Through the initiative of the Aeronautics Division, Executive Order No. 73, establishing a classification of airports and landing fields, was promulgated by His Excellency, the President of the Philippines. The Aeronautics Division was able to have provisions inserted in Commonwealth Act No. 67 appropriating ₱300,000 for the Central National Airport and ₱100,000 for the construction, improvement, and maintenance of National Airports.

Initial steps in connection with the research and experimentation regarding the possibility of aircraft construction were taken. Experiments were made on manggachapi with the end in view of having same replace spruce spars.

Sixteen theoretical examinations and thirteen flight tests for pilots, sixteen theoretical and eight practical examinations for mechanics were given and forty-three airplane inspections were made during the year.

A serious accident occurred when the Stinson tri-motor airplane, bearing license No. NCP-12, of the Iloilo-Negros Air Express Company, sank at a point about one and one-half miles off the coast of Capiz in the Sibuayan Sea on May 29, 1936. It was thoroughly investigated. The manner in which the crew of this ill-fated airplane acted after the accident was commendable, and it was through their behavior that no life was lost.

Flights by two Royal Air Force Squadrons and by an airplane of the Netherlands East Indies Air Lines to the Philippines were made. They were extended the necessary facilities.

It was in this year that the famous Arnacal Manila-Madrid flight took place. The successful termination of this flight was partly due to the Aeronautics Division for the thorough examination of the equipment used and the helpful suggestions and advices given to the flyers.

Creation and Organization of the Bureau of Aeronautics

As the activities and functions of the Aeronautics Division increased with the ever-increasing amount of civilian flying, the National Assembly passed a bill, which was approved on November 12, 1936, by His Excellency, the President of the Philippines, as Commonwealth Act No. 168. It took effect on the same date.

Under said Act, the Aeronautics Division was abolished and the Bureau of Aeronautics was created instead. On November 25, 1936, Major Harvey W. Prosser, United States Army Air Corps, was designated Acting Director of Aeronautics by His Excellency, the President of the Philippines. Dr. Zara was appointed Assistant to the Director of Aeronautics. However, the organization of the Bureau of Aeronautics was not completed until March, 1937.

Functions of the Bureau of Aeronautics

The Bureau of Aeronautics supervises all civil air activities in the Philippines. Among its specific duties are: to designate and establish civil airways; to acquire and maintain landing fields and other air navigation facilities; to conduct research and experimentation regarding the possibility of aircraft construction and the use of local products in such construction; to make available for public use civil air navigation facilities owned by the Government; to publish and issue rules and regulations; to investigate aircraft accidents in civil air navigation in the Philippines; to acquire and operate such airplanes and other navigation facilities as may be necessary in carrying out its functions; to issue pilots' and mechanics' licenses; and to examine and rate civilian aviation schools as to the adequacy of the course of instruction, suitability and airworthiness of equipment and competency of instructors.

In addition to its routinary functions of licensing airplanes and airmen, inspection of aviation schools, investigation of accidents, etc., the Bureau of Aeronautics purchased an airplane for inspection purposes; inaugurated an air commerce intelligence service; established an aeronautical radio station in Makati, Rizal; inspected aircraft and aeronautical ground radio stations; designated four civil airways; and continued to acquire and develop more landing fields.

The issuance of the so-called "Fortnightly Notices" to airmen, which contain principally latest information regarding conditions of landing fields throughout the Philippines, was inaugurated. It was also during this year that the Snipe, the first airplane to be manufactured in the Philippines, was licensed by the Bureau of Aeronautics after its having successfully passed the necessary tests. Four aeronautical radio stations were opened during the year under the supervision and control of the Bureau of Aeronautics. Researches on the feasibility of using Philippine woods for aircraft and propeller construction were continued.

Through the initiative of the Bureau of Aeronautics, the Aeronautical Association of the Philippines came into being. Also at the initiative of the Bureau of Aeronautics, an airshow was held at the Nielson Airport.

On March 7, 1938, Captain Alden R. Crawford of the United States Army Air Corps relieved Major Prosser, who returned to the United States. On November 1, 1938, Dr. Zara, by directive authority of His Excellency, the President of the Philippines, was ordered to take charge of the Office to relieve Captain Crawford, who had been recalled to regular duty with the United States Army Air Corps. It will not be amiss to state in this connection that all past chiefs of the Bureau of Aeronautics—from Captain Maughan to Captain Crawford—are not only excellent pilots, but also competent executives. All of them have rendered creditable services to the Philippine Government. They worked toward one common goal—the development of civilian aviation to the fullest extent.

Program for 1939

As the year 1939 opened, the Bureau of Aeronautics continued to acquire, develop, and maintain more landing fields. The completion of the twelve aeronautical radio stations of the Bureau is being speeded up. Equipment for these stations are being carefully selected, with the view to giving the best of service, and it is expected that sometime in August of this year all these stations will be in operation, thus making a network of aeronautical radio stations in this country.

In April, 1939, the writer was designated as Acting Director of the Bureau of Aeronautics. He will continue the work which has been auspiciously begun by his predecessors.

Status of Aviation Development

About seven years ago there was not, in the strict sense of the word, any established landing field in the Philippines. Now, several provinces have first-class airports and almost each province has at least one satisfactory landing field. Many a life has been saved from untimely death by the use of airplanes. One may travel by air from Manila to Iloilo in less than three hours and from Baguio to Legaspi in about two hours. Even Batanes, the northernmost province in the Philippines, which is visited by ships from Manila only once in two months, can be reached by airplanes in a few hours, Basco, its capital, being provided with a landing field.

From 1933 to 1938 the percentage of completed scheduled trips is approximately 97% in spite of unfavorable weather conditions during certain periods of the year. In 1936 the Philippines led twenty countries in the number of passengers carried in commercial airplanes. Lastly from 1932 to the present, not a single passenger fatality occurred in the operation of the local scheduled airlines.

ARNACAL IN SPAIN AFTER CONQUERING SEAS AND MOUNTAINS

Philippines Placed On Aviation Map By Two Intrepid Flyers

Brief Resume of Flight Given

BY THE PHILIPPINES HERALD
Manila, Philippines, Monday, July 13, 1936

ARNAIZ and CALVO have arrived in Spain. Flying the "Commonwealth of the Philippines", the two aviators thus graciously pay back the courtesies Spain paid to the Philippines several times when good-will Spanish flyers flew to Manila. Antonio Arnaiz and Juan Calvo returned the call made here years ago by Gallarza and Loriga and two times by Fernando Rein Loring.

Sponsored by the DMHM newspapers and inspired by the faith of the Filipino people, Arnacal placed the Commonwealth on aviation history by their epic adventure which began on the Afesa Airport in San Pedro Makati, Rizal, early in the morning of May 29, 1936. In a little more than a month, the two air ambassadors made good their promise to their sponsors and their people, achieved victory, fame and glory, both for themselves and the Filipino nation.

Shortwhile ago, Arnaiz and Calvo were known only to their families and circle of friends. Today they are international figures with the governments of many countries taking official notice of their flight. They have already written the greater part of a history of aviation, every chapter of which pulsates with courage. From the start, it was fated to be dramatic.

Shortly before sunrise on May 29, 1936, at the Afesa airport, Arnaiz called out, "Contact"! Calvo took his place at Arnaiz' right, tended the navigation instruments. Cheers broke out from the large prayerful throng which waved "Mabuhay" to the departing plane. Three hours afterwards, Arnacal were in Laoag, Ilocos Norte, being greeted by the biggest crowd ever assembled in the history of the town. An overcast sky cleared, and in two hours more, in glorious sunshiny weather, the plane bravely pointed its nose northward in the direction of Hongkong.

A slight drizzle and poor visibility in crossing the China Sea slowed the plane down, it landed at the Hongkong airfield 4:30 in the afternoon, half an hour behind schedule, and the welcoming crowd including many Filipinos heaved a sigh of relief, shouted themselves hoarse in greeting. Lucio Ildefonso, head of the Filipino community there; Ricardo Arnaiz, brother of Antonio; Miss Pacita de los Reyes, and many other countrymen intensified the cordiality of the vociferous acclaim.

The conquest of the China Sea for the first time by Filipino flyers, was the first in a series of victories for the intrepid birdmen. The achievement had all the quickness, the simplicity of high drama. So thrilled were Harold M. Bixby and J. P. Van Zandt, of Pan American Airways, by the triumph of the two Filipinos, they cabled the following congratulations to the DMHM: "We have been privileged to witness the arrival of Antonio Arnaiz and Juan Calvo, two courageous Filipino aviators, upon the successful completion of the first crossing of the China Sea by Filipino pilots. . . . Please accept our congratulations on this latest demonstration of Filipino courage" and initiative, and the expression of our cordial regards."

In Hongkong occurred the first of several delays which were to cause anxiety in the aviators' homeland, heartache and impatience to themselves. The permit of the French Government in Indo-China for the landing in Hanoi, the next station of the flight, took almost ten days getting. At the Kaitack air-drome, the flyers were inspecting their plane daily; they fretted, cabled inquiries from Manila where, meanwhile, the U. S. High Commissioner's office was negotiating with the French Government for the permit.

Finally this was secured, and on June 8, with clouds shutting out a 10 o'clock sun, Arnacal took off for Hanoi. The weather was bad. Fitful winds rocked the plane even before it had gained altitude. But the pioneers could no longer contain their impatience. Besides, a breakfast of adobo, and scalding coffee, prepared by Mrs. Ildefonso had warmed their flagging spirit. Quickly, they scaled the clouds, flew at a ceiling of 4,000, then 5,000 feet. It was no use; the banks of clouds were thicker in the upper layers. It was blind flying, the riskiest predicament any aviator can meet.

To make matters worse, the gasoline tank developed a leak. The two flyers, mutely exchanged looks. "Was this to be the end?" Still flying blindly, they scaled down. In the dim, foggy twilight, they discerned the hazy outlines of Fort Bayard. Expert maneuvering brought down the plane and repairs were made in the tank. Aviators and mechanics at the fort advised the flyers to stay overnight, but Arnaiz decided it was better to go on. They made Hanoi at 6:00 p.m. just before pitched darkness had set in.

Making up for lost time, Arnacal took off for Vientiane the following morning, made a brief stopover at Vientiane and dashed to Rangoon, a distance of 400 miles. In that 400 miles, however, the two flyers fought every inch of the way, a savage southwest monsoon, the usual May-June weather over Siam. On June 11, just after sunrise the Commonwealth of the Philippines pointed its nose westward in the direction of Calcutta, taking only a few hours to refuel at Akyab, and then over the simmering waters of the Bay of Bengal to Calcutta, the "city of palaces." That 600-mile flight was the first respite from danger Arnacal enjoyed since Demon Bad Weather started dogging them in the hop across the China Sea.

It was excellent weather when they landed at the airfield in Calcutta, to the cheering of a cosmopolitan crowd composed of Europeans and Hindus. Suddenly, however, the skies darkened again and a three-day down-pour marooned the pioneers at Calcutta. Arnaiz was restive; Calvo no less impatient. "We have been extra careful so far," Arnaiz challenged, "why don't we take a chance this once and take off for Allahabad?" And Calvo countered, "Okay by me, if you are game."

At 12:45 p. m., June 14, the Fairchild monoplane flew into the teeth of an Indian monsoon, veered its nose northward to escape a 5,000 ft. wall of sharp-edged rock formed by the Parsanath mountains. Calvo maneuvered the plane at an altitude of 8,000 feet, followed the dimly visible course of the Ganges River, and finally landed the craft safely at Allahabad, 4:15 in the afternoon. It was breathing spell. Arnacal slept soundly. The weather was fine in the morning.

At ten o'clock, the Fairchild plane was skimming lightly across thin sun-flecked clouds, passed over Jorhpur and then 200 miles from Karachi, the next station, the spark plug failed. The engine balked. Another forced landing, the second since Fort Bayard. They landed at Chore, repaired the damage, and then took off again. Scarcely had they reached a ceiling of 5,000 feet when the plane misbehaved again. It dipped, slanted, wavered, returned to even keel, then dipped again. The birdmen exchanged looks of alarm. Both suddenly understood: airpockets! With slightly damaged engine they made Karachi, just after dark. They gambled with death; they beat him no less than three times.

In Karachi they were stalled 10 days. Ten days of agonized waiting, waiting, homesickness, twiddling thumbs. It was the Persian landing permit that delayed them this time. Exchanges of frantic cables between Manila and Washington, between Karachi and Manila, between Karachi and Teheran. The verdict of the Shah of Persia came at last: Arnacal could not land on Persian soil.

Arnacal studied the maps frantically until their eyes bulged from strain. They finally set their course through Baluchistan. One fine morning they took off from Karachi, made a swift dash for Gwadar where they stopped overnight, and then through sand-storm and another nest of airpockets, the monoplane coasted the border of Persia, played hide-and-seek with the peaks of the Koh-rand mountain ranges, rising sheer 10,000 feet above sea level, and then landed at Jask for the night. Another short dash to Bushire and then they crossed the broad Mesopotamian Plains, peered into the blue waters of the Persian Gulf, and the flyers were at Bagdad. Another restful evening.

On June 29, the "Commonwealth of the Philippines" was almost scorched to cinders by the burning air of the Syrian desert. Yet Cairo was reached, with the aviators' throats thoroughly parched. Gulping down gallons of iced beverages at Cairo, the aeronauts made a brief hop to Alexandria, taxied at last on the ancient historic soil on the nether edge of the Mediterranean.

Here delay threatened again. Shell officials whose carnet had provided the flyers all along the way so far with the gas and oil they needed, advised Arnacal they had to take an extra load in the hop to Brindishi, Italy. "Mussolini's oil sanctions almost halted us. We have no money to buy fuel and oil," they cabled the DMHM. The money was cabled, and in midforenoon of June 29, the flyers headed for Brindishi, across the Mediterranean.

They miscalculated their fuel supply, and early that afternoon, they were beached at Almyras, Crete, checking up on their gas. It was enough to make the dash to Athens and dashed they did, landing at Tatoi airdrome, at 7:57 by the clocks of ancient Attica. The Mediterranean was vanquished. And Arnacal celebrated the victory with 20 hours' sleep.

On July 2, they were about to take off for Brindishi when the right landing gear of their Fairchild monoplane flew off, caught the propeller and bit off the tip of the right wing. They took time at Athens repairing the damage to their undercarriage, finally taking off for Brindishi the morning of July 6. They made Brindishi at 6.20 in the afternoon.

Resting for the night in the famous Mediterranean Port, the two flyers took off shortly after mid-day for Rome, landing at the Littorio airdrome in midafternoon. The dash was made in the record time of three hours and twenty minutes. In Mussolini's capital, Arnacal were entertained at a well-appointed dinner at the American Embassy.

Reporting from Rome, they expressed gratitude to the Italian authorities and to the Italian Consul in Manila for the courtesies given them on Italian soil. Their dispatch read:

"Rome, Italy, July 9.—We arrived here yesterday afternoon after an eventful flight from Brindishi.

"We are most grateful to the Italian authorities, especially to the Italian consul in Manila, R. Staurenghi, for his valuable co-operation.

"We had absolutely no trouble when we landed in Brindishi, the airport officials having been notified in advance by the air ministry in Rome of our arrival. Neither did we have any trouble when we took off for Rome from Brindishi.

"Upon our arrival in Littorio airport, we were honored with an invitation to dine at the American embassy. An embassy attaché met us and last night we were entertained at a well-appointed dinner at the American embassy.

"Tomorrow, Friday, early in the morning we will take off for Marseilles."

BARCELONA, July 9 (1936).—Antonio Arnacal and Juan Calvo, Filipino aviators bound for Madrid from the Philippines, are scheduled to arrive in Barcelona at 10:00 a.m. Saturday, according to radio dispatch received from the flyers to the director of the Philippine Tobacco Company.

THE FIRST TWO FILIPINO HEROES OF THE AIR.

"INAEC" BUYS NEW WINGS FOR FILIPINO AIRLINE LINKING ALL
KEY PHILIPPINE CITIES

With the formal inauguration of the much-improved airline service between Manila and Davao via Iloilo, Cebu and Surigao in an early date, the Iloilo Negros Air Express Company will be regarded as the most complete and most up-to-date commercial aviation enterprise in the Philippines. This advancement has been climaxed by the arrival on the S.S. Silver Walnut last Thursday of the 16-passenger Sikorsky-43, modern amphibian purchased by the INAEC from a leading plane factory in the United States for the net sum of P280,000 plus P80,000 for spare parts. Prominent businessmen and commercial enterprisers are of the opinion that the New INAEC airline service inauguration is an unprecedented progress in Philippine air transportation.

In a press statement issued by Doña Maria Lopez, president and "First Lady of the Air," several months ago when negotiation for the purchase of the air liner was then going on, it was gathered that temporary suspension of the southern airline service had afforded period within which to introduce further improvements in line with the directors' policy of rendering up-to-date service to the passengers and patrons. The new amphibian will be furnished with modernized facilities in every detail. The airship itself is provided with radiophone which can contact the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company and with the INAEC stations which are now being established in Davao, Cebu, Iloilo, and Manila. In fact, the new plane is similar in almost every respect to the giant airliners of the Pan American Airways, now in Florida-South American Line.

The formal inauguration of the new air service will be announced in the latter part of the present month by the company, after numerous test flights which will be held in Manila and as far as Iloilo and Davao. The plane is now at Camp Nichols where it is assembled by expert engineers in the army airfield.

The unprecedented progress made by the INAEC is a very important factor in the country's progress in air transportation. Only three years in its existence, the Iloilo Negros Air Express Company has already contributed an important chapter in the commercial aviation history of the country, and have linked Manila in only three or four hours' time to the southern provinces. The so-called commercial bird of the air have assured general safety and dependable rapidity of transportation so that a passenger, who eats his breakfast at Grace Park before boarding the airship, and takes comfortable nap during the trip, can have his merienda at Cota, Iloilo, without suffering possible indigestion or ordinary airsickness.

The INAEC, which follows the PATCO in period of service, was inaugurated with the encouragement of prominent American and Filipino businessmen, on February 3, 1933, under the sponsorship of Governor-General Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Aurora Quezon, Secretary Rafael Alunan and Mrs. José Zulueta amidst throngs of people that gathered both at Grace Park in Manila, and Fort San Pedro in Iloilo. The opening of the epoch-making air line service was realized after the granting of the 50-year franchise by the Philippine government through the intermediation of Representative Jose Zulueta and Senator Gil Montilla.

It is significant too, and adds to the INAEC's merit, that the establishment of the ambitious company was attempted in a period where public indifference toward its possible success could be heard from known and unknown quarters. This general indifference was perhaps inspired by the considerable failure of previous attempts to begin similar service, like the Baguio-Manila service which made the public so discouraged that the regular service then was only maintained during summer resort season.

High government officials, prominent citizens of Manila and Iloilo, were however justifiably enthusiastic over the opening of the air service between Manila and Iloilo, and Negros and Iloilo. Among those who hailed the big project were Governor-General Roosevelt, Senate President Quezon, Governor Jose Yulo, Governor Miguel Cuenco, and various business men in the Visayas. The board of directors, composed of Dr. Rafael Santos, president; Atty. Salvador Araneta, first vice-president; Nicolas Lizares, second vice-president; and Eugenio Lopez, secretary-treasurer, was optimistic over the venture.

After three years of continuous service, the INAEC has already assumed a reputation of national proportion that it has become a self-subsidizing enterprise.

After wading out general indifference towards its success, and surmounting the great difficulties of complying with the rigid conditions imposed by the government before the granting of its franchise, the INAEC has made its way toward the position of ranking air service line in the Philippines. It has now branches in different parts of the country that afford ample facilities for the line, and plans are again underway in various big cities.

The present executive officers of the company are: Doña Maria Lopez, president; Salvador Araneta, first vice-president; Nicolas Lizares, second vice-president; and Eugenio Lopez, secretary-treasurer. It is an All-Filipino enterprise as you see, and deserves the country's congratulations for its courageous steps in the direction of modern travel and communication.—Monday Mail, Feb. 8, 1937.

PATCO'S PIONEERING HAS HELPED TO MAKE PHILIPPINES AIR CONSCIOUS

By A. L. Valencia

ember 29, 1935, it was not the novelty of the flight that caused some 100,000 cheering persons to greet the air conquerors. It was the result of the growing air-mindedness of the Philippines.

Up until six years ago, before the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company, or Patco, started commercial flying to Baguio, it is safe to say that no more than 100 Filipinos had ever flown. But now, about 20,000 people have traveled by air, and at least half of that number are Filipinos. Six years ago there were only three privately owned planes in the Islands and two of these were out of commission. Today there are at least a dozen, and all of them flying. Then, there were six civilian landing fields. Today there are a hundred different places where planes can land. Six years ago a trip to Baguio by airplane was a high venture. Today it is part of the daily routine of business.

During the past year, the other local aviation company, the Iloilo Negros Air Express, has confined its activities to running a taxi service between Iloilo and Bacolod. A new Sikorsky cabin plane has been ordered from the States and by March 1 it is expected to start a scheduled service between Manila and Davao three times weekly.

PIONEERING

The pioneering work which has resulted in widespread air consciousness was undertaken by Patco under conditions which would have discouraged a less courageous organization. There were no fat government subsidies, no government entity authorized to license planes and flyers. The job required the tilling of virgin soil. It required brains, money and an enormous amount of patience. Despite these handicaps, Patco at the end of six years of service has gained the confidence of the public and has established a record for safety and dependability of scheduled operation comparable to the best in the world.

The past year brought marked progress in Philippine aviation. Earlier efforts on the part of the two local airlines having found recognition at the close of 1935 in the granting of permits for continued operation in the shape of 25-year franchises, the government took steps in 1936 to encourage further the development of this flying arm of national transportation.

GOVERNMENT AID

Under the leadership of Juan L. Luna, chairman of the committee on aviation, the national assembly passed acts providing funds for carrying mail by air and authorizing the bureau of posts to enter into such contracts, and for raising the old division of aeronautics to the rank of bureau of aeronautics and giving it funds to develop landing fields, radio weather reporting stations and other aids to aerial navigation in order that the airways over the Islands may be as safe as the seaways around them.

Government has provided harbors, piers, breakwaters, dredges, lighthouses, buoys, etc., so long for water-borne commerce that these immense expenditures are taken for granted, even though private shipping concerns may be the only ones directly to benefit while receiving a government mail subsidy as well. The same is true of land commerce through the vast sums spent annually for roads and bridges and for speeding the posts between cities and towns. It is all a part of the national transportation network on whose efficient functioning depends the very existence of a modern nation.

Quite naturally the development of our present infant air commerce industry looks for aid to the commonwealth government to supply airways and air harbors and air navigation aids as well as a chance to carry the posts by the swiftest means available. Taking to the air has given a flexible, third dimension to transportation and allowed it to travel the straight-lined, shortest distance between two points at the greatest possible speed, unhindered by natural surface barriers such as seas, mountains, rivers, swamps, etc. For the government to have ignored the potentialities of such a weapon of commerce and defense would have retarded national development by many years.

INCORPORATION

That the Philippines has an aviation industry capable of securing the government recognition accorded it the past year, is due to the pioneering effort of a few farsighted businessmen of Manila and the Philippines, coupled with an almost philanthropic donation of funds on their part and that of various business concerns in Manila, through the years of early struggle. A group of 52 of these men, among them William J. Shaw, L. Weinzheimer and Andres Soriano, who were to carry so much of the financial burden in the years to come incorporated, on December 3, 1930, the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company.

The original board of directors was composed of R. B. Lockwood, L. D. Lockwood, N. E. Mullen, J. E. H. Stevenot, E. M. Bachrach (also first president), H. P. L. Jollye, Vicente Madrigal, Tirso Lizarraga, Angel Elizalde, K. Gronke and Max Kummer. William J. Shaw was elected president in November, 1931, and served until March, 1936, when he relinquished the job he had carried on with great business and financial courage, to J. H. Marsman, now president, who with a generous and farsighted application of flying to mining, had become Patco's best customer.

WORK STARTED

Under Mr. Shaw, the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company started the first commercial scheduled air line in the Philippines, the route between Manila and Baguio, on December 24, 1931, and this line is now in year-round daily operation carrying a yearly average of over 3,500 passengers between the two cities. New equipment in the shape of three Bellanca Skyrocket airplanes was also purchased, air mail and air express built up and a new line opened up bi-weekly to Paracale at the instance of Mr. Marsman. Privately owned airplanes were sold to Mr. Marsman, Jose McMicking, Roxas and Company, and Sorox and Company, and more recently to the bureau of aeronautics and, working under a constant financial drain, Patco was slowly built up through the untiring efforts of these backers and the efficient operating personnel.

PERSONNEL

W. R. Bradford, brought out early in 1931, had become general manager and senior pilot; B. H. Hall and L. G. Heston and later Harry C. Claiborne, all expert army trained pilots, had joined Patco's personnel as well as T. Tolman, traffic agent, together with C. J. Smith, O. E. Swanson, L. Peck and other thoroughly trained mechanics with army and civil experience. Tools and shop fixtures were added to until the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company was completely organized to rebuild and overhaul every item of flying equipment.

Under the leadership of J. H. Marsman during the past ten months, Patco has steadily increased its business. The Paracale schedule has been stepped up to five times weekly and air mail and express business built up. T. Tolman has been moved to Manila in charge of traffic and Conrad Weinzheimer placed as traffic agent in Baguio.

Flying more miles through the air over the Islands than any previous year in its history, while carrying more passengers per mile flown, the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company ended 1936 with its record for safety at 100 per cent and with its reliability record for schedules completed, at about as high a figure. Patco now schedules 3,000 miles per week and actually flies an average of around 5,000 miles weekly. A total of 264,123 sky miles (a distance equal to more than ten times around the world) was covered during 2,068 flight hours last year by Patco pilots, while safely transporting 5,936 air passenger over the Philippines. A total of 3,627 passengers was handled between Manila and Baguio while 1,632 customers flew over the Paracale airline. Charter flights to various points accounted for the remainder.

STEADY GROWTH

Up to January 1, 1937, the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company had flown 1,244,752 (approximately one and one quarter million) air miles since the start of operations in February, 1931, and carried over 20,000 passengers without injury. Air mail and air express shipments have increased during the past year. Started more as a convenience to a few steady patrons some years ago, the air mail and express business has grown to sizeable proportions. With the contemplated lowering of air mail rates under the new mail contracts more and more people will use this speedy method of written communication and it should soon become a necessity in the daily business intercourse between Manila, Baguio, Paracale and other Philippine cities.

During 1936, Patco substantially increased facilities for maintenance and overhaul of engines and airplanes. Few people realize the constant care and expense involved in upkeep of flying equipment. Proper maintenance is equally as important as expert piloting in keeping the record of an airline free from accidents. Many new tools and items of machine equipment have been added to the Patco shops during 1936, not to mention large quantities of spare parts. These shops are thoroughly geared to maintain overhaul and rebuild the airline units so that no planes or engines at Patco are ever really old.

OVERHAULS

One of the few steam heating plants in the Islands is installed at Grace Park in order that the proper finish may be put on airplane surfaces. A motor overhaul shop is essential and the Philippine Aerial Taxi Company has complete facilities for this work. Each make of engine has an expensive list of special assembly and disassembly tools together with precision instruments for determining the wear on all moving parts. An engine test stand house has also been constructed by Patco during the past year where newly overhauled engines are run in for some ten hours before they are put back in the planes. This is just one of many precautionary measures which all go to help eliminate luck in the job of keeping the company's air planes properly functioning while they are in the air.

A battery shop is maintained for serving storage batteries. A propeller room is in constant use equipped with all the special tools and machines necessary in balancing, tracking, etching and overhauling propellers. Magnetoos, carburetors, starters, etc., all require special overhaul tools, spare parts and specific maintenance and repair procedure, all provided by Patco in its shops and all adding to the total provisions that must be made in order that the record of completed scheduled flights may be maintained at its present high standard.

Generous pioneer backers plus highly trained efficient personnel have carried the Philippine Aerial Taxi through the struggle of the past six years and has created an airline that is capable of providing regular and safe transportation to the public.

The new Boeing Clipper of the Pan American Airways landing at Cavite air base.

NEW "FLYING HOTEL" WITH BRIDAL SUITE LANDS IN CAVITE

March 2, 1939

After circling over the city like a silver eagle and flying low along the Luneta and the Dewey Boulevard, Pan-American Airways' new 83,000-pound "Flying Hotel" Boeing Clipper NC-18602, landed at Cavite at 2:00 p.m., Thursday afternoon, March 2, 1939, completing its 9,000-mile trans-Pacific test flight from the new PAA Treasure Island base on San Francisco Bay. She made her first stop at Honolulu, where a storm center in Midway kept her for three nights. She spent a night each in Midway, Wake and Guam; and covered her last 1,500-mile hop to Manila in a record of time of 10 hours.

Manned by a crew of 11, headed by Captain W. A. Cluthe, who has been here several times as flight commander of the China Clipper, and carrying 14 observers, the "Flying Hotel" was first sighted at 1:45 p.m. at Cavite. Four U.S. Army and Navy escort bombers, among the biggest types in the service, were dwarfed by the airliner and looked like sparrows trailing an eagle.

William T. Miller, assistant chief of the U. S. air carrier inspection division, who headed the observers said that the clipper is undergoing test flights before the ship could accept passengers.

Some 500 gathered at the PAA base at Cavite, among them AHC and Mrs. McNutt and daughter, Louise; Rear Admiral and Mrs. George J. Meyers; Wayne Coy; and Lt.-Commander J. P. Rockwell.

This largest airliner in the world, whose 150-foot wings hold four 1,500 horse-power twin-row Wright Cyclones engines, has a capacity for 72 passengers on long daylight flights and 50 on overnight flights; is equipped with a kitchenette, navigation officers cabin, room passenger cabins, lounge, standard cabins with berths, toilets, a bridal suite, and sound proof apparatus, enabling passengers to speak without raising their voice.—The Sunday Tribune Magazine, March 5, 1939.

The SAMOA CLIPPER burned and exploded early in 1938.

The HAWAII CLIPPER was lost near Samar on July 29, 1938.

QUEZON-SUMULONG CONTROVERSY ON NEUTRALIZATION AND NAVAL BASES

THE IDEA OF NEUTRALIZATION

By

Hon. Manuel L. Quezon

President, Commonwealth of the Philippines

"The idea of neutralization, I must confess, has lost its attraction for me. For the time being, at least, it seems meaningless.

Unless within the next four or five years, the attitude of the great powers towards their accords changes, I cannot believe that such a neutralization treaty would mean much to the Philippines.

I would not, however, object to a neutrality agreement, provided it was merely a declaration of principles to the effect that the Philippines was to be considered as neutral.

This would not involve a guarantee of neutrality; such a guarantee by any power might furnish the excuse for interference. A treaty of this nature would not be incompatible with retention by the United States of naval stations. Naturally, the areas which these stations embraced would be outside the normal effectiveness of such agreements...." *

AT THE CROSSROADS

By

Judge Juan Sumulong

President, Allied Minorities

On December 19th, last (1936), certain statements of President Quezon opposing the proposed neutralization of these Islands and favoring the establishment here of permanent American naval bases appeared in the local press. These statements were relayed to the United States by the correspondents in Manila of American newspapers and news agencies. I shall have occasion to refer specifically and in detail to these statements of Mr. Quezon when I come to explain why I sympathize with the idea of neutralization.

It is not possible to discuss understandingly the question of neutralization without first doing away with erroneous notions regarding it disseminated among us by anti-independence propagandists. A favorite objection which has found currency among the uninformed masses is premised on the assumption that the nations guaranteeing neutralization ipso facto acquire the right to interfere in the affairs of the neutralized state. The truth, however, is that the right of intervention of the signatories to a neutralization treaty, if such right is ever exercised, arises only when the political sovereignty or territorial integrity of the neutralized state has been violated, or, is in imminent danger of being infringed upon. An intervention of this sort has for its prime object to prevent the violation of, or to restore, as the case may be, the independence and territorial integrity of the neutralized state. The neutralization of Switzerland was recognized in the declaration of Vienna of March 20, 1815, but since then up to the present time the guaranteeing nations have intervened not even once, directly or indirectly, in the affairs of Switzerland. During the European war France and England entered Belgium, whose neutralization was guaranteed by the treaty of November 15, 1831, only after the invasion of that country's territory by German troops.

The much controverted violation by Japan of the Nine-Power treaty of 1922 has been frequently mentioned as a practical demonstration of the doubtful value of neutralization agreements. The contracting powers to that treaty bound themselves, among other things, to "respect the sovereignty, the independence, and the territorial and administrative integrity of China", as well as to "use their influence for the purpose of effectually establishing and maintaining the principles of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China." The principal signatory nations to the treaty enjoyed and still enjoy in China exclusive privileges, special concessions, and spheres of influence which, besides undermining the prestige of the Chinese central government in the eyes of its citizens, provoked them to stage anti-foreign demonstrations usually accompanied by violence. These anti-foreign outbursts were almost always quelled by the armed forces of those governments whose citizens or whose properties and interests had been affected. In fact, in 1926, four years after the conclusion of the nine power treaty, when English products were being boycotted by the Chinese, the British Government landed troops in China which put an end to the boycott. The Japanese punitive expeditions which destroyed Chapel in 1931 and gave rise to an undeclared war between Chinese and Japanese forces, was mainly an act of reprisal for the Chinese boycott of Japanese goods. Bearing these facts in mind, it is unlikely that the nine-power treaty was regarded by the signatory powers as a neutralization treaty. They must have foreseen the probable repetition of foreign interventions in China—interventions, which, if the nine-power treaty were regarded as neutralization agreement, would constitute flagrant violations of the sovereignty and illegal invasions of the territory of China. In view of the considerable area already in the hands of these powers in China at that time, the provision that the contracting powers shall respect the territorial integrity of that country means nothing more than a promise not to further extend their acquisitions. The nine-power treaty has for its main purpose the maintenance of the status quo in China, and contains none of the characteristic features of a neutralization treaty.

The passage of the Tydings-McDuffie Act did not quite clarify whether the Philippine policy of the United States is for complete independence or for some form of retention of these islands. This law provides that the President of the United States "is requested, at the earliest practicable date, to enter into negotiations with foreign powers with a view to the conclusion of a treaty for the perpetual neutralization of the Philippine Islands", while at the same time it reserves to the United States the right to retain naval bases and fueling stations within the two years following the proclamation of independence. The practical effect of these two incongruous provisions is to delay for ten years more the determination of whether the United States shall establish a fully independent Philippine Government or some form of an American protectorate here. President Hoover, in vetoing the Hare-Hawes-Cutting Act, aptly termed this uncertainty of American policy an evasion and he suggested that "before any plebiscite should be held we (the American people) should honestly and plainly declare our intentions." The holding of a plebiscite on independence as prescribed in the law has given the impression that the Filipinos were granted the right to determine their own political future, when in truth and in fact the United States has reserved to herself the right to determine what that political future is to be eleven or twelve years thereafter.

This incongruity notwithstanding, we decided to accept the Tydings-McDuffie Act for several reasons. As the law provides that the conclusion of a treaty for perpetual neutralization shall be taken up before independence has been achieved, we thought that when the United States negotiates such a treaty she will have to renounce the establishment here of permanent naval bases, as it cannot be expected that the other parties to the treaty will agree to guarantee the neutrality of a country which is subject to the military influence of another. Moreover, the Filipinos realized that the United States has to correlate the final solution of the Philippine question with America's general policy in the Far East, and it was not deemed advisable to embarrass in any way the American government in choosing the date which it may consider propitious for the negotiation and conclusion of a treaty.

It is, therefore, only natural that the announcement by Mr. Quezon of his objections to the plan of neutralization precisely when such a plan was being favorably and sympathetically discussed in important sectors of American public opinion, should evoke amazement and surprise. Because of the high position he occupies, his statements could be taken in the United States as correctly representing the real sentiments of the Filipino people,—something which, I believe, is far, very far from being the case.

Mr. Quezon said that he would not object to a neutralization treaty which, while recognizing the neutrality of Philippine territory, does not involve the guaranty by any nation, as in his opinion such a guaranty would only give the guaranteeing states an excuse to meddle in our affairs. But the principle of non-intervention in the domestic and foreign policy of the neutralized state, except for defending its sovereignty and its territory against external aggression, is precisely the predominating idea in a neutralization agreement. The neutralized state has the right to arm itself and even to enter into defensive alliances unless the treaty requires that it be demilitarized. For the benefit of those who, like Mr. Quezon, seem to oppose neutralization and to favor an American protectorate for commercial reasons, may I be permitted to state that a neutralized state is at liberty to conclude commercial treaties without restrictions.

On the hypothesis that neutralization without any guaranty is feasible, it is evident that such a form of neutralization does not meet the requirements of our situation. The advocates of neutralization of these islands have undoubtedly in mind two indisputable facts. The first is that our country will not be sufficiently strong in a military sense to organize an adequate defense, particularly during the first years of its independent existence, until our potential resources and energies have been fully developed—hence, neutralization without guaranty would be unserviceable to us.

The second is that the maintenance of the balance of power in the Pacific in order that no nation may acquire the strategic advantages and the increase in power and material resources incident to the possession of these islands, demands that there be a powerful collective guaranty to insure the effectiveness and stability of a neutralization treaty. What shall it profit us if other nations recognize the neutrality of our territory without their assuming the obligation of guaranteeing it? Such a recognition would be of no more avail to us than a unilateral declaration on our part that our territory is neutral. Such a declaration, in fact, is voluntarily made in times of war by non-belligerent countries to proclaim their intention of observing the duties of neutrality. We should not confuse, however, that neutralization and neutrality are two entirely different things.

The other idea of Mr. Quezon that neutralization will be compatible with the existence of American naval bases which according to him, would be outside the scope of the treaty, arouses even greater amazement and surprise. This idea is so unusual as not to require an elaborate refutation. Under such a strange arrangement, American naval and military bases would use our territory or part of our territory as a base of operations against enemy forces, and we could still claim immunity against any attack by these enemy forces on the false and hypocritical pretext that our country is neutral. It is incredible that the prospective signatories to a neutralization treaty would agree to this extraordinary proposition, but the statement of Mr. Quezon on this point may be considered in the United States as an acceptance of the plan to establish permanent naval bases, that is to say, to establish an American protectorate here. It goes without saying that the Filipino people would regard any final solution of the Philippine question other than complete independence as a revocation of the promise embodied in the Jones Law and strengthened with the enactment of the Tydings-McDuffie Law.

The people of the United States, complying with what they consider to be their moral duty as a responsible nation, desire to see the future Philippine independent government begin its existence under reasonable conditions of security. The plan most generally favored to attain this result is that of neutralization. This plan, besides giving Filipinos certain assurances of security, has the advantage of relieving the United States of the obligation of shouldering the prohibitive cost of defending these islands. A protectorate, if established, would naturally imply the obligation of the United States to defend and protect us. The United States can, of course, if she so desires, bear the cost of our defense and protection—but what would be the compensating benefits and advantages? In this connection, it is worthy of note that a distinguished American publicist, Mr. Stoddard, recently stated that a conflict between the United States and Japan on account of the Chinese problem is not altogether beyond the realm of possibility, but that a collision between these two countries because of the Philippines, after the latter has become independent, is inconceivable.

We would not be any nearer to a workable solution of the Philippine problem by expecting too much of the United States. Such an attitude may prove to be as inadvisable as it is annoying. Since the military plans of Gen. MacArthur were suspected in the United States as tending to convert the new Philippine Army into an auxiliary force of the American army with a view to perpetuating American sovereignty in these Islands, instead of providing us with a system of defense for our own purposes, American reaction has been one of general alarm and disapproval. If this alarm and disapproval gain ground in America, the final determination of the Philippine question in an atmosphere of disgust and irritation, which surely will not redound to our advantage, is not at all unlikely. An early abandonment of this military plan for offensive purposes is imperative, not only to allay apprehensions here and in the United States, but also to give way in our reconstruction program to the more urgent and important task of economic promotion and readjustment. An armed force sufficient to preserve internal order, susceptible of expansion at the proper time for the defense of our neutrality is, in my opinion, all that we need.

In conclusion, it must be admitted that for Americans and for Filipinos alike, or at least for a majority of both peoples, the most acceptable solution, or to put it in another way, the solution least open to serious objections, is the organization of a fully independent Philippine government whose security shall be guaranteed, temporarily or permanently, by a treaty of neutralization.

In 1915 Secretary of State Bryan, in protesting against some of the twenty-one demands made by Japan on China, particularly against those which, if accepted, would have meant the establishment of a Japanese protectorate in China, admitted that "territorial propinquity creates special relations between countries, and consequently, the government of the United States recognizes that Japan has a special interest in China particularly in that part to which her possessions are contiguous".

Subsequently, on November 2, 1917, during the Great War when the United States was predisposed to accede to the wishes of Japan as one of the Allied powers, an exchange of notes took place between Secretary of State Lansing and Viscount Ishi, reiterating their adherence to the principle of the "Open Door" or of equal opportunity for commerce and industry in China, and declaring themselves opposed to any nation obtaining "any special rights or privileges that would affect the independence or territorial integrity of China or that would deny to the subjects or citizens of any country the full enjoyment of equal opportunity in the commerce and industry of China." By way of preamble or preface, there was incorporated to these notes the admission made by Mr. Bryan that territorial propinquity creates special relations among nations, and that the government of the United States recognizes that Japan has special interest in China, particularly in that part contiguous to her possessions. An American author, referring to this Lansing-Ishi agreement, said that it has created in China and Japan among the people that learned of the statement embodied in its preamble "a belief that the United States had acquiesced in a dominant Japanese position in Manchuria." The Americans contend that the Lansing-Ishi agreement was cancelled by the nine-power treaty of 1922 by virtue of which, as we have said, the contracting powers bound themselves to respect the sovereignty, the independence, and administrative and territorial integrity of China. In support of this contention, it was pointed out that the signatory powers to the nine-power treaty also agreed to "provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government."

The Japanese are apparently of a different opinion, and they call attention to the fact that the obligation to guarantee the independence and territorial integrity of China was also included in the Lansing-Ishi agreement, and that assertions of political hegemony, like the Monroe doctrine and the dominant position of Japan in China, may be made by unilateral declarations with or without the consent of the other powers. These questions may be argued without end, both sides supporting their respective views with reasons more or less plausible. Needless to say, I am not taking sides in this controversy one way or the other, and that my only object is to explain briefly the issues involved.

Secretary of State Stimson, during the last Sino-Japanese crisis in Manchuria and in Shanghai, vigorously upheld the American attitude. As it was not possible for the American Government to base its protest against the action of Japan on the Covenant of the League of Nations, Secretary Stimson invoked on several occasions the nine-power treaty as well as the so-called Paris Pact, also known by the names of its authors as the Kellogg-Briand Pact. The most important act of the American Government with respect to the Manchurian crisis was a formal notice served on January 7, 1932, on the government of China and Japan that "it would not recognize any situation, treaty or agreement entered into by those governments in violation of the Covenants of these treaties", namely the nine-power treaty and the Paris Pact. In this way, the American government committed itself to a non-recognition policy of the situation created by Japan in Manchuria. Shortly thereafter, the Assembly of the League of Nations, following the initiative of Secretary Stimson, adopted a resolution in which it made a declaration almost identical to that made in the communication sent by the American government to the governments of China and Japan.

Major General Rivers of the American Army has lately written certain articles supporting the independence and the neutralization of the Philippines. In one of these articles and, referring incidentally to American-Japanese differences of opinion, he openly declared himself in favor of the recognition of Manchuria by the government of the United States. General Rivers intimated that Japanese occupation of Manchuria and of Northern China has for its object to avoid the conversion of China to Russian Communism and the eventual combination of Russian and Chinese forces against Japan. If this is so, the occupation of Manchuria and of Northern China by Japan, besides its commercial objectives, is unquestionably of vital political importance to Japan. In passing, it may be said that while Japan is engaged in this colossal undertaking, Japanese expansion in other directions, if such plans of expansion exist, may be considered as postponed for a long period of time. This should be a source of relief to those who fear that these Islands are in imminent danger of being absorbed by our energetic and powerful neighbors.

In making a statement of conflicting Japanese and American interests, the ticklish question of naval parity must not be overlooked. Nathaniel Peffer, author of the book "Must we fight in Asia?", recalls that opposition to naval equality claimed by Japan comes not so much from England as from the United States.

Much has been said and written of the difficulties incident to the United States retaining the Philippines, but as far as I know the other side of the question has never been presented, that is, no exposition, however imperfect, of the risks that we would run during our connection with America has ever been made. It is hoped that this review of the accumulating causes of friction between the United States and Japan has served to fill this void, thus completing the gloomy and disquieting picture which the questions of the western Pacific offer to our eyes. Considering the nature of the American-Japanese differences, great optimism would be required to enable one to predict that such differences would necessarily be adjusted or settled by peaceful means.

Be this as it may, I would not consider this reminder as altogether fruitless if it could in some measure contribute to convince the Filipinos that in the present state of affairs in this part of the world the most ordinary sense of caution and prudence demands our detachment as completely as possible from such disputes. The modesty of our position does not permit us to exert much influence one way or the other in the decision of this question, and should we be so foolhardy as to fall into the temptation of meddling in it, we would only reap by this conduct our own ruin and destruction. These ideas bring me into disagreement with Mr. Quezon who supports a form of American protectorate for commercial considerations, and with Professor Duran who sponsors a Filipino-Japanese alliance for reason of racial affinity and geographic proximity,—an alliance which under present conditions would necessarily result in a Japanese protectorate.

Nobody can reproach us of selfishness if, as a small and weak nation, and later, as an independent nation, we should prefer to concentrate our attention and our efforts to the solution of our internal problems, striving at the same time to convince others that while our main concern is to achieve happiness and prosperity for ourselves, we shall also scrupulously avoid incurring the ill-feeling of other peoples, for whom we have nothing but sentiments of good will.

PRESIDENT QUEZON ANSWERS HIS CRITICS

GENTLEMEN OF THE RESERVE OFFICERS TRAINING CORPS:

You have made me very happy today. You have given me one of the greatest thrills of my life. On the eve of my departure on an errand abroad which will be of far reaching consequences to our people, you stand before me 15,000 strong, the very pick of our colleges and universities wearing the distinguished uniform of the soldier and receiving your military training in accordance with the directions of the first legislative enactment of the government of the Commonwealth.

I am not here to convince you that the first and most important duty of our Government and every one of its citizens is the defense of the State against foreign aggression, internal rebellion, or domestic lawlessness. That is clearly stated in the declaration of principles, Article II, Section 2, of our Constitution. That is a principle which every Filipino today, with very few and dishonorable exceptions, has well ingrained in his mind and his heart, and none more than you as evidenced by the fact that you are receiving with enthusiasm your military training in preparation for the performance of your duty to defend your country if and when the necessity shall arise.

Rather I am here to voice my indignation at the attempt that has been made to misrepresent what this Government is doing and its objectives in the preparation of its national defense. Not that I have the slightest idea that such misrepresentations will have any effect upon the public mind in our country, or that it may deter our Government from carrying out its most important task, for the world may rest assured that the Filipino people are determined to become an independent nation and rely upon their own resources and man power to maintain their territorial integrity and national rights of their country.

No organization in the United States whatever sounding name it may bear, no man or group in the Philippines under any guise whatsoever, can stop us from going ahead with our plans to insure the safety of our country and to uphold its dignity and self-respect.

But it is well that our purpose be properly understood. We are a new nation soon to take our place in the international brotherhood of independent States. It is our privilege, indeed, it is our duty to reveal and make known to the world our ideals and aspirations as a people.

We are peace-loving. Our Constitution is the first modern constitution which condemns war as instrument of national policy and adopts the generally accepted principles of international law as a part of the fundamental law of the land. We have no desire, therefore, now or ever in the future to use the armed forces of our country for purposes of aggression, but only in defense of the national territory and for the maintenance of peace and order within our borders.

In good or in bad faith, through ignorance or malice, allegations are being made that we are "militarizing the Philippines," that we are "sabotaging Filipino schools," that our national defense program "amounts to a covert conspiracy to keep the United States in the Islands" or is "intended to strengthen the military power of America in the Western Pacific in the event of war with Japan."

On the other hand, it is also alleged that neither the Philippines nor the United States nor both countries combined, can ever successfully defend this country, and we are told that we should rely upon the neutralization of the Philippines guaranteed by international agreement for the defense of our independence.

The present strength of the Philippine Army, including the Constabulary, is 7,048 enlisted men and 439 regular officers. Of these 4,551 are Constabulary soldiers and only 2,497 are doing other regular army service. The present military strength of the United States Army in the Philippines consists of 10,251 enlisted men and 529 officers, including Filipinos in the service of the United States. Our plan when realized will give the regular Philippine Army force, including the Constabulary, a maximum strength of only 10,000 enlisted men.

You can readily see that our maximum regular army force will not exceed, even after the attainment of independence the present strength of the United States Army in the Philippines. How can any one who is not a fool or a downright liar say that the national defense plan, as provided in Commonwealth Act No. 1, is militarizing the Philippines?

In the past, when the charge was made that a nation was militaristic, the indictment was based upon the fact that there was in that nation a big regular military force constituting a privileged class which absorbed or attempted to absorb, the supreme direction of the policies of the State.

Who can seriously contend, that in our rapidly growing nation, now already of at least fifteen million people a mere ten thousand regular soldiers—some engaged in police duty and others in ordinary military task—can ever constitute a special privileged class that can rule the country?

Under the National Defense Act, and under every law of the land, the Army is subject to civil authority and the supreme command of the armed forces of the nation is placed by constitutional mandate in a civilian elected by the people every six years and without right to reelection—the President of the Philippines. The Philippine Army is fully conscious of its duty to obey the direction of civil authority. The Philippine Army knows that its paramount duty is to uphold the law and to maintain peace and order under the direction and command of the Chief Executive of this Government.

Is it perchance—and evidently it is—the compulsory military training of our youth that is being branded as militarizing the Philippines? Our system of military training for our youth has been in general terms patterned after the system which for many years has been adopted by a small country in Europe—Switzerland—the country which, despite its small territory and population has maintained its national integrity and has gained the respect of the most aggressive and militaristic nations of the world. No one has ever called Switzerland militaristic; in fact she is the most democratic country in Europe and perhaps in the whole world today.

It is not a regular military force of tremendous size that we are building. It is a citizen army,—an army that in time of peace will be devoted exclusively to the arts of peace, to agriculture, to industry, to trade, to letters and sciences, to every activity that makes for progress, for harmony, for goodwill, for human advancement and well-being. The military training we are giving our youth is intended, not only to fit them to use arms effectively in the defense of the motherland, but also to indoctrinate them with those civic virtues which make better soldiers in time of war and better citizens in time of peace.

We need to make our people, especially our youth, conscious of their oneness, jealous of their nationality, lovers of their country, proud of their race and their democracy—so conscious of their oneness, so jealous of their nationality, so proud of their race and their democracy that they will die fighting for it.

SABOTAGING THE SCHOOLS

Instead of sabotaging our schools by preparing our youth to defend their country we are actually giving them fuller and more comprehensive training. We are training them in the arts of peace and in the science of war.

Here again we are complying with the mandate contained in Article XIII, Section 5, of our Constitution.

Under the National Defense Act, as soon as a boy reaches the age of ten he begins to receive training in the duties of citizenship, in addition to his vocational instruction. It is scarcely one year since we began the military training of our youth and already the wholesome effect of this training is being felt in every household where a member of the family is receiving military instruction. Rich parents have told me how their sons, who heretofore have never cared to do anything for themselves but have always expected their servants to attend to their clothing now get out of bed early in the morning, shine their shoes and their brass buttons and press their clothes so that they may appear presentable at their scheduled military parades and exercises. The bearing and behaviour of these young men are more assertive and dignified. Indeed, the whole country, within the brief expanse of one year, has been electrified by the realization of our new obligation to rely upon ourselves entirely for the protection of the motherland.

We are charged with diverting school funds for military purposes. Almost coincident with the establishment of the Commonwealth, we have provided additional revenue from a new source, to be used exclusively for school purposes. Some two million pesos cedula tax will be turned over to our schools this year in addition to the usual annual appropriation of more than fourteen million pesos.

The wisdom of this tax lies in the fact that as the school population increases with the growth of our people, this revenue also increases.

COVERT CONSPIRACY TO KEEP THE UNITED STATES

The most ridiculous charge made against our National Defense plan is that it is a covert conspiracy to keep the United States in the Philippines. On what ground? Upon what sound logic, may it be inferred that training the Filipinos to defend themselves is a covert conspiracy to keep the United States in the Philippines? Is it not, on the contrary, the best evidence that we are getting ready to depend upon ourselves for our protection and not upon the United States? In other words, is not our Defense Plan positive proof that we are preparing the nation to assume all the responsibilities of independent statehood? Was not the main argument propounded against Philippine Independence the fact that the Filipinos had no army, had no means to defend themselves against foreign aggression? It would certainly be more logical to say that those who are against carrying out of the National Defense plan are the ones conspiring to keep the United States in the Philippines. They are the covert enemies of Philippine Independence, because they want to perpetuate our present helpless situation and thus depend upon American protection forever.

The selection of Field Marshal Douglas MacArthur as Military Adviser to the Government of the Commonwealth is being pointed out as proof that our National Defense plan aims to give the United States a big army in the Philippines with which to wage war against Japan.

Gentlemen of the Reserve Officers Training Corps: Upon my word of honor I want to say to you that the idea of making Field Marshal MacArthur a Military Adviser to the Government of the Commonwealth in the preparation of our National Defense came originally from me and no one, whether American or Filipino, has ever suggested the thought, much less Field Marshal MacArthur himself.

On a previous occasion I have stated how the selection of General MacArthur as Military Adviser came about but it bears repetition at this time. When I saw that the Tydings-McDuffie Law was about to be passed by Congress, and the Philippine dream of independence thus converted into a reality, my immediate concern was how to maintain that independence once we have achieved it. So I went to the office of General MacArthur, then the Chief of Staff of the United States Army, and asked him pointedly this question: "General, do you think that the Philippines, once independent, can defend itself? If you can not give me an honest and direct answer, please ignore the question." The General said: "I don't think that the Filipinos can not defend themselves; I know they can. By this I mean," he proceeded to explain, "that you can organize such defense as will make the conquest of the Philippines so expensive and so costly in lives and money that no nation in its senses will attempt to do it."

Then I asked the General again: "Would you be willing, General, to undertake the study, preparation and execution of a plan of national defense for the Philippines? And do you think you can do it within the limited resources of the country, bearing in mind the other important and unavoidable obligations of a progressive modern government?"

The General then asked me before answering my question: "Can you spend yearly nine million pesos more than you are now spending for the Constabulary?"

Upon giving him an affirmative answer to his question, the General then said:

"I am willing to undertake this task of preparing your people to defend themselves alone against foreign invasion and I shall be very glad to undertake it as a duty to my own government and people. America is committed to grant the Filipino people their independence. To my mind, this duty involves not only the granting of that independence, but it also implies the duty of giving you every assistance so that you may make that independence secure in your hands for you and for every succeeding generation."

This is the conversation which, with the consent of the President of the United States and under authority given the President by Congress through an Act which was passed upon my request, brought General MacArthur to the Philippines and gave the Commonwealth as Military Adviser one of the greatest soldiers of our time.

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE PLAN "INTENDED TO STRENGTHEN THE MILITARY POWER OF AMERICA IN THE WESTERN PACIFIC"

The charge that our National Defense plan is "intended to strengthen the military power of America in the Western Pacific in the event of war with Japan" is not only groundless in every respect but also mischievous.

It presupposes, of course, that the idea of adopting a National Defense plan has originated from American sources, that is to say, that wittingly or unwittingly we have been induced by the Government of the United States to give military training to our male population in order that America may be in a better position to fight Japan in the event of a war between them.

The first question that comes to my mind is this: Is the alleged strengthening of America for purposes of aggression or for defense? Even a lay mind can see that no amount of army training or military organization in the Philippines can make of this country an effective instrument for attack against Japan. The Japanese Navy lies between America and the Philippines and before America could send to the Islands transports to carry the Philippine army to invade Japan, the Japanese Navy would have to be destroyed. Once destroyed, it would be cheaper, easier and quicker if America used its own army to invade Japan than if she had to send her transports to the Philippines to pick up our army and then carry it to Japan. And America, be it remembered, is not so lacking in man power as to have need of our soldiers. On its face, the absurdity of using the Philippine citizen army to attack Japan is evident.

If, on the other hand, the implication is that our National Defense program will make it less difficult for America to defend the Philippines in the event of a war with Japan, the answer is that if the Philippines are to be attacked and invaded by any army, it is the duty of the Filipinos to defend their own country.

The fact that America is still the sovereign in the Philippines does not relieve us from the duty of defending our own country especially after the United States has proclaimed to the world that the Philippines will be independent on the 4th of July, 1946.

Every Filipino should bear in mind that in the Independence Act, America has unqualifiedly decreed that her sovereignty over the Philippines will be withdrawn and Philippine independence recognized on the 4th of July immediately following the expiration of a period of ten years from the date of the inauguration of the Commonwealth. Morally and legally then the United States can not regain her sovereignty over the Philippines after the 4th of July 1946, except with the consent of the Filipino people. And every Filipino should realize that if prior to our independence there was war between the United States and any other country, and as a consequence thereof the Philippines were to fall in the hands of the enemy, the latter might repudiate the grant of independence made by America. Our National Defense program is not, therefore, intended to strengthen America but to strengthen the Philippines.

Now let us look at this charge that our National Defense program aims at the strengthening of America as against Japan from another angle. If America has in mind to use our men power for purposes of attack or defense against Japan, why is America "militarizing the Philippines only after she had made up her mind to give us independence on a certain fixed date and not at some time during the last thirty-five years? And why does the complexion of the adopted National Defense program coincide precisely with the establishment of the Philippine Republic nine years hence?

Furthermore, and since Japan is pointed out by our critics as America's objective in this program, what is there in the air that may give serious apprehension as to the future relations of America and Japan? If our National Defense program has been prepared before or soon after the anti-Japanese immigration law, or during the controversy regarding the interpretation of the Nine Power and Washington treaties perhaps, an extremely suspicious mind may say that America was preparing the Philippines against Japan, but now that American-Japanese relations are friendlier than they have been in many years, what is there to justify the suspicion that America has planned the Philippine National Defense to strengthen herself in case of war against Japan? Nothing, of course, except the fact that some imaginations are hopelessly wild or certain minds are born dishonest.

On the one hand our critics cry against the alleged tremendous military program which is likely to endanger the peace of the Orient and in the same breath make the positive assertion that the Philippines cannot be defended against Japan either by the Filipinos alone, by the United States, or by the combined strength of both countries.

In the first place, let me say right here and now that we are not preparing the Philippines to defend themselves against Japan, or any other country in particular. The Japanese people are our friends. Their government has never done anything in the past that would indicate its desire to interfere with us in the future. Why should there be the constant suspicion that once we are independent Japan will attempt to conquer us?

The Japanese menace is the bugaboo with which opponents of Philippine Independence tried to convince America to stay indefinitely in the Islands in violation of her solemn pledge, and to frighten the Filipinos into renouncing their most sacred right to be a free and independent nation.

We are preparing ourselves against no one country in particular and against each and every country in general. This is our duty more than it is our right. That is the duty of every self-respecting and freedom-loving people.

Now, we are told that the Philippines are indefensible, and upon this theory our national defense program is branded as a waste of money, time and energy.

I am no professional soldier and therefore in no position to assert, as my own earnest and strong conviction, that our National Defense program offers a complete guarantee of peace and security both from internal disorder and external aggression.

I do not know enough of the science and art of war to be able to come to any conclusion of my own on this question. All I can say in this regard is that I have sought the opinion of the most competent man to give me advice thereon,—Field Marshal MacArthur. I believe in him and his opinion I accept fully. He told me and he told our people that when our National Defense program has reached full fruition that the cost of conquering the Philippines in men and money would incomparably be greater than the possible advantages and benefits derived from its conquest. That's enough for me to go ahead undisturbed with our Defense program. Conquest in our materialistic age is only motivated by national self-interest. We are then amply protected if our defense is sufficiently strong to give no inducement to the greedy.

But I will go further and say: Admitting that the Philippines can not protect herself with all our defense program and that sooner or later our country is destined to fall into the hands of a first-class military power, even then I would go ahead and spend the money and time and energy we are now spending to give our youth military training. I would go ahead with our present program, because I would not renounce, voluntarily, our birth-right to be free and independent. This right I deem the greatest, the most sacred right of every people, and would not abjectly surrender it. I would fight a desperate, a losing fight to defend it. We might be vanquished but would keep our self-respect; we would at least show that our people deserve to be free because they love freedom and love it enough to accept the supreme sacrifice for it. The history of our country has taught us this lesson.

Our fathers—and some of them still living, did exactly the same thing. We fought Spain and we fought America for our national freedom. We lost to America, but we won her respect and admiration; we established in deeds writ in blood our right to independence. And America—a lover of freedom herself—has recognized our right to be free.

I am ready to follow the footsteps of our fathers. But I want to do better than they did. I was in the war against America. That was no war; that was slaughter, pure and simple. We had no weapons to speak of and did not know how to use the few that we had. Our army had no discipline, no organization. We had men willing to die and thousands upon thousands died heroically, others only through miracle, survived. We fought only to die for we were not trained and equipped to kill. If again we are ever to fight for our homes and our families and our beloved fatherland, we must fight not only willing to die, but also able to kill. No nation will again have the Philippines except after it has paid a tremendous toll in life and treasure. No army will ever again land on our shores unmolested and in parade formation, meeting almost no resistance, take possession of our towns. That is a thing of the past. It will never be repeated as long as in Filipino veins runs blood and not water.

I will go still further and say more. Supposing I knew positively that no country will ever attempt or care to attack the Philippines, suppose that in my sleep it was divinely revealed to me that the Filipinos are the chosen people of the Twenty First century who, unlike the chosen people of the Old Testament, will be free from conquest and war. I would yet go ahead and give our schools from the age of ten, exactly as it is provided in the National Defense Act. Because with this training we would have in time of peace more efficient workers, more capable professionals, more law-abiding and patriotic citizens.

This is indeed what military training will do for our youth. It will primarily give our country better and more capable citizens and only if and when necessity arises, efficient and gallant soldiers. That is why we are not building a big professional army but a citizen army—an army of peace and for peace—for progress, for civilization, for the improvement of our people.

NEUTRALIZATION

Some Filipinos who are in the habit of acting as our National mentors have come out lately to tell us what to do. "Give up" they say "the National Defense Program and rely only for our security upon the neutralization of the Islands guaranteed by international agreement."

There are men who believe they are born to speak ex cathedra. They live above the clouds and occasionally come down to us, appearing in glory on the mount of Sinai. They are oblivious of what is going on in our world of mortals. They derive no lesson even from contemporary history.

The fact that nations whose neutrality was guaranteed have been attacked wantonly and laid to waste; that others, independent for millenniums, have been conquered and subjugated by a stronger military power; that territories have passed from the hands of a weaker to that of a stronger, makes no impression whatsoever on these men, but leaves them exactly where they were: in a fool's paradise. The fate of our nation, the liberty and well-being of our people, this blessed land of ours, they would entrust to the safe keeping of other people, never to their own.

Thank God, our people have never allowed such men to guide us in our struggle for National emancipation or accepted their judgment as sound and safe to be followed. Otherwise it is hard to say where the Philippines would be now; what the political status of our country would be today.

It is false, as has been publicly stated, that I have expressed myself unqualifiedly as being against neutralization and in favor of American protectorate and naval stations. I am against American protectorate because I am for full and complete Philippine Independence. Independence that is not complete is no independence except in name. And I care nothing for names—I am for the substance and the reality of things.

Nor have I declared myself unconditionally for American naval stations in the Islands. This is a matter which under the Independence Act is left for future negotiations between the Government of the United States and the Government of the Philippines. I am not, I can not be committed on this question one way or another at this time. I shall not express myself before the negotiations are started and without the advice of the National Assembly. Private individuals have the privilege to speak for themselves at any time and can claim they speak the mind of our people, even though their past experience at the polls fails to justify their boast.

Neither am I altogether against the neutralization of the Philippines; but I place very little value to the guarantee of neutrality which may be given by the nations to the world. Let no one be so naive as to think that any nation will ever fight for the Philippines unless it is to that nation's own interest to do so, even though it may have guaranteed our independence. And if it be to the interest of some nation to prevent another from taking the Philippines, that nation will fight the power attacking us—if she can do it successfully, guarantee or no guarantee. Let me add further—that if and when a nation does fight for us, she will not do it just for love.

It is well for any man who has no sworn public duty to perform, who is not bound by his office to make sure that a future independent Philippines will not be lightly insulted or attacked, to be visionary and write articles and preach doctrines that make for interesting debates in a social or academic club. The President of the Philippines can not do that: he has a solemn obligation and he must meet it conscientiously and realistically, to the best of his ability and in the safest way for his people.

My friends, I shall detain you no longer. I want to express my great satisfaction and pride in your excellent appearance this evening. No other group of men ever face a greater opportunity to grow in the service of their country than you men of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. I congratulate you. The country is proud of you. Our people can look to the future with confidence. The enthusiasm with which you are receiving your military training is indicative of your set resolve to live for your country and to die in defense of it if necessary.

FOR A MESS OF POTTAGE

By

Judge Juan Sumulong

When I sat down to write my previous article commenting on the statements of Mr. Quezon concerning neutralization and naval bases, my first thought was to censure severely his erratic political views. As will be seen later, I had then and still have more than one reason to be on guard against his highly equivocal attitude on the Independence problem.

But after a short reflection, I thought otherwise. Nothing was to be gained by engaging in a polemic. A controversy with Mr.

Quezon would only lead to an interchange of disagreeable diatribes and unseemly epithets, whereas the importance of the questions under discussion demanded a spirit of great composure and moderation. Moreover, it was my intention not to hinder, with acrimonious exchanges, a non-partisan and impartial consideration of problems which pressingly call for solution. Nevertheless, I was determined to provoke a discussion of the questions relative to neutralization and naval bases, so that everyone may express himself one way or the other on the statements of Mr. Quezon, and in this way bring to the knowledge of the authorities in Washington points of view of the entire country, and not only those of a single man.

In the latter part of the year 1934, the Tydings Senatorial Commission came to the Islands at the invitation of Mr. Quezon. To our surprise, the members of the Senatorial Commission spent most of their times forecasting the unfavorable economic and political effects which independence would bring about, and added that they sorely regretted to have voted in favor of the adoption of the Tydings-McDuffie Act. As only a few months had passed since that act was approved, and as the Filipinos did not know of any fact or circumstance to justify a change of front, our surprise naturally knew no bounds. Was there any fact or reason unknown to the members of the Senatorial Commission at the time they voted for the Tydings-McDuffie Act which later came to their knowledge shortly before their visit to these Islands? These distinguished gentlemen were unable or were unwilling to tell us the reason for their sudden and incomprehensible volte-face. All of us had our attention focussed on Mr. Quezon, the recognized champion of our liberties and rights. That was an occasion in which a true leader, sincere and unafraid, identified with the sentiments of his people, could have promptly put an end to such a painful uncertainty by taking a clear-cut stand. Days passed, and meanwhile rumors circulated among the American and foreign communities that Mr. Quezon would launch an anti-independence pronouncement, placing himself openly on the side of the Senatorial Commission. At that time Senators and Representatives of the former bi-cameral legislature and members of the Constitutional Convention, who were then gathered in Manila, began to show signs of disapproval of the suggestions of the Senatorial Commission. Mr. Quezon closed the episode by declaring at a farewell banquet given by him to the American Senators that he favored a commercial partnership between the United States and the Philippine Islands, but he carefully avoided making any statement or giving any impression that he was opposed to the proposition of the Senators of replacing the Tydings-McDuffie Act with another measure establishing local autonomy or some form of American protectorate.

In the meantime at Washington, the then Resident Commissioner Mr. Guevara was openly sponsoring in and out of Congress the plan of establishing an American protectorate over this country. I do not remember Mr. Quezon having expressed disagreement at that time with the movement supported in the United States by Mr. Guevara. Knowing as I do his impetuous temperament, Mr. Quezon would have emphatically disclaimed sympathy for Mr. Guevara's idea, and perhaps would have relieved him of his post in Washington, had he not secretly shared with Mr. Guevara the latter's point of view regarding protectorate. Only once, as I remember now, did Mr. Quezon say that he was not in favor of Mr. Guevara's proposal.* Shortly before the elections for the presidency of the Commonwealth, Mr. Guevara returned to the Islands and on several occasions repeated here his adherence to the idea of an American protectorate. We were then, as I said, on the eve of a presidential election, and Mr. Quezon said that even if the Filipinos should unanimously ask for an American protectorate, the United States would not assume the high cost of defending these Islands. It must be noted that Mr. Quezon said that he did not favor a protectorate, not because he supports independence unconditionally and to the exclusion of any other solution of the Philippine problem, but because it seemed to him improbable that the United States would accept the heavy burden of defending these Islands. The effect of this statement is that if the United States, through any change in circumstance, should be disposed to assume the defense of this country, Mr. Quezon would be at liberty to espouse the cause of an American protectorate without being guilty of any political inconsistency. I would like to take advantage of this opportunity to express my respect and admiration for Mr. Guevara who had the courage to come out in the open with his protectorate proposal, regardless of consequences, and without resorting to subterfuge and political juggling.

Shortly after the inauguration of the Commonwealth government, Roy Howard, an intimate friend of Mr. Quezon and distorter par excellence of Philippine public opinion, paid us a visit which turned to be memorable. In a famous article published in the local papers and disseminated afterwards in the United States by the American press, Mr. Howard made three assertions, which were as reckless as they were entirely unfounded, to wit: that we, the Filipinos, had definitely renounced our desire for national independence; that we were prepared to accept, instead of independence, an unorganized territorial government, that is, our annexation to the United States as a mere dependency; and that should we fail to obtain these from the United States, we would ask England to establish her sovereignty here. Roy Howard spent almost all his time visiting certain islands to the south in company with Mr. Quezon, before giving publicity to these astounding affirmations. That was another occasion for a truly national leader, who is in a position to choose his course of action free from embarrassing commitments to come out vigorously against such unfounded assertions, and to defend the truth and the liberties of his people. Has Mr. Quezon by any chance denied the statement of Roy Howard that we had abandoned for all time the ideal of national independence? No. Has Mr. Quezon denied in any manner whatsoever the other allegation that we were resigned to accept an unorganized territorial government? No. Has Mr. Quezon rejected directly or indirectly the offensive charge of Roy Howard that our aspiration as a people has been reduced to making a choice of the sovereign under whose power we would prefer to live? No. Mr. Quezon, again to our disappointment, was content to make an evasive answer, saying that he had sworn to comply and to execute the constitutional mandates of the Government of the Commonwealth.

Bearing in mind his baffling and ambiguous behavior, in the past, the air of injured innocence with which Mr. Quezon now attempts to cover his political feats cannot by any means have any effect on me, and when a month ago I came across his statements indirectly attacking the plan of neutralization and directly suggesting the permanent retention of American naval bases, what were formerly misgivings on my part proved to be incontrovertible facts.

In the speech which he delivered at the campus of the University of the Philippines, Mr. Quezon's opposition to the plan of neutralization was couched in clearer and less hesitating terms. Praising himself without a qualm as a political ultra-realist and picturing me as an inveterate visionary, he assured us that a treaty of neutralization is not only unnecessary but also dangerous. Inasmuch as the Tydings-McDuffie Act recommends the conclusion of a treaty guaranteeing the perpetual neutralization of these Islands, Mr. Quezon will necessarily have to include the members of Congress and the President of the United States who passed that act within his classification of visionaries and theorists. As Mr. Quezon himself later accepted that Act, without any reservation as to its provision on neutralization, no amount of scholastic sophistry can place him outside the group of visionaries and theorists alluded to by him.

The important thing, however, or to put it after the manner of Mr. Quezon, the practical aspect of the question before us is that the people and government of the United States are of the opinion that the conclusion of a treaty of neutralization should precede the proclamation of independence. Whatever, therefore, we may think as to the effectiveness or inefficacy of the guarantees of a treaty of neutralization, we cannot lightly disregard this opinion of the government and people of the United States, and unless we can propose a more efficacious method of guaranteeing our independence and territorial integrity, mere opposition to the plan of neutralization can have no other effect than to block or to delay the grant of independence. Mr. Quezon has not proposed an alternative.

In his speech Mr. Quezon said that he had not declared himself unconditionally in favor of permanent American naval bases, and that he could not have committed himself definitely on this question because the moment for negotiating thereon will come within the two years subsequent to the proclamation of independence. In fairness to Mr. Quezon, before commenting on his statement regarding naval bases, I shall copy textually his statements as published in the press.

In the Tribune of December 19th last, Mr. Quezon was quoted as follows:

"Such treaty would not be incompatible with the maintenance by the United States of naval stations here. The part where the naval station would be established would be outside the scope of the treaty.

"Now, whether it would be to the interest of the Philippines to have an American naval station here would depend on the attitude of the United States. If the establishment of a naval station would be made a part of or be coincident with the maintenance of special trade relations, it would indicate a close association, at least an economic one. Such a position would justify the maintenance of naval stations here by the United States, and would be to the interest of both the Philippines and the United States, for the latter will be in a position to protect its trade routes.

"But if the United States is to have no further connection with the Philippines, I do not see any justification for naval stations, even from the American standpoint.

"I am not in a position, however, at this juncture to speak of the position we may take. This is a matter to be considered when the question comes up."

In the Manila Daily Bulletin of the same date, the statement of President Quezon was reported as follows:

"A treaty of the character as this would not be incompatible with the retention by the United States of naval stations in the Philippines. Naturally the areas which these stations embraced would be outside the normal effectiveness of such agreements. What other nations would wish or suggest in this connection, naturally, I cannot know.

"Would such an arrangement be to the advantage of the Philippines? Naturally, I cannot say definitely. That would depend in part on the attitude of the Philippines toward the establishment of such stations. This naturally brings up the broader question of our future economic relationship to the United States.

"If coincident with the establishment of such naval bases in the Philippines there were established some special trade relations with the United States, indicative of a future close association, such a retention would not be unreasonable. It would be, indeed, not only in the interest of the Philippines, but also of the United States since it would mean the protection of established trade routes.

"If, on the other hand, the United States undertook no such special relationship, there would be no justification for the retention of American naval bases here.

"Nevertheless, the final fixed attitude of this government toward the naval base question must come up at a later date when the proposals are actually made and we are ready to determine policy."

These quotations speak for themselves. Amidst an abundance of circumlocution and byplays, two ideas of Mr. Quezon stand in relief. The first is that in the impending trade conference not only economic relations will be considered, but also the question concerning the permanent retention of naval bases and the possible establishment of an American protectorate. For this reason, the remark of President Quezon that he has not committed himself definitely on the question of naval bases, because such question will be discussed after the period of transition, cannot be taken at its face value. The second idea of Mr. Quezon is that, when commercial relations are discussed he will accept the establishment here of permanent American naval bases in return for special commercial concessions on the part of the United States. Now, has Mr. Quezon the right to agree to an American protectorate by means of the establishment of permanent naval bases in exchange for commercial advantages? What are those commercial advantages? What special concessions will be asked for Philippine sugar? I therefore feel quite justified in demanding as I did in a recent newspaper interview the disclosure of the plan, if the government has any, which the Filipino delegation will submit in the coming trade conference. The systematic concealment from the public of the findings and recommendations of the various committees appointed to submit proposals on future Philippine-American trade relations, cannot be too strongly condemned.

The excuse that the government cannot publish those findings and recommendations without weakening its position at the conference in Washington, is, I believe, nothing more than a flimsy pretext.

I deny the right of any one, including President Quezon, to renounce in the name of the people our national independence for a mess of pottage. I deny Mr. Quezon's right to do so for two reasons. The Coalition did not ask the people for authority to enter into such a repugnant negotiation. If in the program of the Coalition there was included a plank to abandon independence in return for commercial concessions, I am sure that President Quezon, despite the electioneering machinery of which he always speaks so boastfully, would have received such a rebuke from the people as he could never forget for the rest of his life. Furthermore, it is a matter of history that during the controversy between those who favored and those who opposed the Hare-Hawes-Cutting Act, the latter obtained the votes of the majority of the people principally because they objected to the establishment of permanent military and naval bases. This being so, the idea of forsaking national independence in order to obtain material advantages would be to trample upon an unmistakable decision for our people.

I am convinced that a more militant vigilance over the problems of our government, particularly while our future political status has not been definitely settled, is a duty, both patriotic and inescapable. The false and presumptuous doctrine that public officials are always better qualified than private citizens to pass judgment on public questions is a part of the nefarious program of suppressing independent criticism and of permitting only the publication of pro-government propaganda. In certain cases, government officials are undoubtedly in possession of more ample information, but more often than not, impartial opinions come from independent private citizens who, unlike officials in the government service, are not bound to defend a preconceived policy.

In spite of claims to infallibility noticeable in Mr. Quezon's acts and statements, criticism of his administration, which he sought but was unable to suppress, has not been altogether unproductive of results. One of these results is the reduction made by the government, undoubtedly against its own wishes, of the personnel of the army, from the proposed 20,000 to 10,000 men. Official sources will probably say that this reduction was brought about voluntarily, but those who are not unaware of what is going on will ascribe this sensible action to external pressure which the government was unable to disregard.

The very action of Mr. Quezon of organizing a meeting at the campus of the University of the Philippines in order to render a public report, little satisfactory though it be, of the acts of his administration was in great measure due to the necessity of answering certain criticisms which could not be stifled and which he feared might sooner or later find acceptance in the popular mind. Mr. Quezon should be required, in some form or another, to appear before the people with more frequency to explain his plans before their execution, as well as for the purpose of giving the people the chance of expressing their minds thereon, as to keep Mr. Quezon from forgetting that despite his high position he is no more than a public servant, the highest in rank undoubtedly, but none the less a servant.

SUMULONG—THE ADMINISTRATION'S No. 1 KIBITZER

By Vicente Albano Pacis
Editor, The Philippines Herald

FRANKLY speaking, I admire the studiousness manifest in the articles of ex-Senator Sumulong in which he argues against the establishment of permanent American naval bases in the Philippines and advocates perpetual neutralization of the Islands as "the most acceptable... the solution least open to serious objection..." Thoughtful and stimulating discussion of our problems is never amiss, and Mr. Sumulong seems to be one of the very few Filipinos who have the inclination to engage in such a pursuit. On this basis, I believe that he is not doing a disservice but a distinct service to the country.

But there are discussions and discussions. When one arrays arguments for the sake of opposing a policy; when one utilizes his leisure in order to formulate hypotheses that were never meant; when one bases his entire research and dissertation on gratuitously or wrongly assumed premises—then one may indulge in his favorite, life-long pastime of inordinate opposition, but he also pollutes public opinion and unwarrantedly embarrasses those that he may criticize.

Not only does the former senator read in the statements and policies of the administration meanings that were never meant, but he also formulates contradictory theories and reach conflicting conclusions that one would never expect of him. But so naive is his language and so perfect his sophistry that the ordinary reader will fail to discover in his reasoning the monstrosities of logic he creates and lets loose. So intent on proving a point rather than in helping to discover a wise ideal, he is entitled, it seems to us, to the title of No. 1 Kibitzer of the administration.

SUMULONG TWISTS MLQ'S STATEMENTS

Before putting to the test the broader conclusions of the Sumulong article, let us pause a moment to examine his assumptions and premises. "On December 19," Mr. Sumulong starts off his thesis, "certain statements of President Quezon opposing the proposed neutralization of these Islands and favoring the establishment here of permanent American naval bases appeared in the local press." About the middle of the article, he declares, "The other idea of Mr. Quezon that neutralization will be compatible with the existence of American naval bases . . . arouses even greater amazement and surprise."

It is worthy of attention that Mr. Sumulong deliberately chose not to quote President Quezon directly, although the press reports reported his statements on these matters in direct quotations. The following is what the President really said on the occasion, according to Senator Sumulong's own sources:

"The idea of neutralization, I must confess, has lost its attraction for me. For the time being, at least it seems meaningless. Unless within the next four or five years, the attitude of the great powers towards their accords changes I cannot believe that such a neutralization treaty would mean much to the Philippines. I would not, however, object to a neutrality agreement, provided it was merely a declaration of principles to the effect that the Philippines was to be considered as neutral. This would not involve a guarantee of neutrality; such a guarantee by any power might furnish the excuse for interference. A treaty of this nature would not be incompatible with the retention by the United States of naval stations. Naturally, the areas which these stations embraced would be outside the normal effectiveness of such agreement . . . " (Italics are ours.)

Any fair minded person will admit that President Quezon does not "oppose" neutralization, as Mr. Sumulong would have us believe, but that he has lost some of his enthusiasm for the proposition. His reason for this altered view is that in our day and time, some powers wantonly disregard their treaty obligations, as Germany, a signatory to the declaration of 1831 recognizing the perpetual neutrality of Belgium, did in 1914 when she invaded Belgium; as Japan did when it took Manchuria; as practically all the powers are now doing in abetting or harassing one or the other faction in Spain in the face of their solemn declarations to adhere to the contrary policy.

NEUTRALIZATION IS ANTIQUATED; BELGIUM QUILTS IT

President Quezon, contrary to Mr. Sumulong's allegation, did not say that "neutralization will be compatible with the existence of American naval bases." The President most distinctly differentiated between neutralization and simple neutrality, then stated that the latter "would be compatible with the retention of the United States of naval bases."

Mr. Sumulong himself takes great pains to distinguish between "neutralization and neutrality, two entirely different things," yet he has no scruples in accusing the President of confusing them. Be it noted also that the President was speaking in the conditional mood, was merely supposing, was not stating a conviction, but was discoursing on topics forced upon him by newspaper reporters and correspondents. He was speaking hypothetically.

The ex-senator seems to imply that neutralization or neutrality within a sovereignty, or neutralization co-existing with the retention by an alien power of partial or complete jurisdiction, an arrangement which he calls a protectorate, is unknown or does exist in international law. He is mistaken. Corfu and Paxos, two of the Ionian Islands, when they were handed over to Greece in 1840, remained neutralized within the un-neutralized Greek empire. The West African Congress of Berlin in 1885 declared the neutralization of the territories comprised in the conventional basin of the Congo, some of which belong to various European states, that is, in the event of war, considered as "belonging to a non-belligerent state, the belligerents henceforth abstaining from extending hostilities to the territories thus neutralized, and from using them as a base for war-like operations." (Article II, Final Act of the Conference, signed Feb. 26, 1885.)

In his address before 15,000 college and university students the other day, President Quezon clarified his previous statement and completely repudiated the overly-free Sumulong interpretation. He said:

"It is false, as has been publicly stated, that I have expressed myself unqualifiedly as being against neutralization and in favor of American protectorate and naval stations. I am against American protectorate because I am for full and complete Philippine independence . . . Nor have I declared myself unconditionally for American Naval stations in the Islands. This is a matter which under the Independence Act is left for future negotiations . . ."

All thoughtful people, however, might well revise their assumptions on neutralizations as an aid to weak nations. Today, wars are often undeclared, and invasion by air may take place with the suddenness of lightning. How will the guaranteeing powers, taking for granted that they are willing to perform their obligations, effectively protect a neutralized country, after invasion is an accomplished fact as was the case in Belgium in 1914? Relentful powers may eventually dislodge the enemy, but the harm will have been done. If there is a more practical and more effective means of national security than neutralization—and the National Defense Plan is proof that not only is there an alternative but that we prefer the alternative for the present—then, by all means, let us choose that alternative.

In the light of present-day facts, neutralization is almost antiquated, impractical. What could be a more conclusive proof of this than the fact that Belgium, which had been under neutralization since 1831—fully ratified in 1839—and Luxemburg, following the great tragic lessons of the World War, chose to terminate the unfeasible arrangement in the Treaty of Versailles (1919)?

Since then, Belgium has been building a war machine comparable to those of the Great Powers. It is now upon this machine alone that it relies for territorial integrity and security. And Switzerland, the foremost example of a neutralized state still extant, is not only constantly enlarging its professional army but it has a universal military training system so successful and effective that we have copied and adopted some of its basic features in our National Defense Plan.

When neutralized states themselves either relinquish neutralization voluntarily or place greater reliance on their own armies shall we be so foolish as to clamor for neutralization alone, the discarded ideal of small-nation safety about a century ago?

ARTICLE FULL OF CONTRADICTIONS, ASSUMPTIONS

Now, just a few of the contradictory or gratuitous statements of which the Sumulong thesis is full.

Early in his article, we find this claim: "The passage of the Tydings-McDuffie Act did not quite clarify whether the Philippine policy of the United States is for complete independence or for some form of retention of these Islands." About five paragraphs later he actually admits that the promise of complete independence is "embodied in the Jones Law and strengthened with the enactment of the Tydings-McDuffie Law."

Just one more colossal contradiction will suffice to show the brain storm that must have raged during the writing of the article. "The maintenance," Mr. Sumulong declares somewhere in the middle of his article, "of the balance of power in the Pacific . . . demands that there be a powerful collective guarantee to insure the effectiveness and stability of a neutralization treaty. What shall it profit us if other nations recognized the neutrality of our territory without their assuming the obligation of guaranteeing it." Here, he insists that signatory nations must assume an obligation, and it is presumed that the United States cannot be omitted in any treaty of neutralization.

Yet, farther toward the end of his thesis, he says without as much as an apologetic cough: "This plan (neutralization), besides giving the Filipinos certain assurances of security, has the advantage of relieving the United States of obligation of shouldering the prohibitive cost of defending the Islands." He would simply relieve the United States of the burden of defending the Philippines and pile the same burden on the vicarious war chase of the guaranteeing powers and, presto, the obligation disappears. Mr. Sumulong forgot that while the hands may be quicker than the eyes, thought is faster than words.

RECOMMENDS EX-EMPEROR SELASSIE MILITARY ADVISER

Not satisfied to deal in twisted statements and contradictory conclusions the former senator, lost but reckless in his detachment from the strict truth, next indulges in gratuitous statements. Here are some of them:

"American reaction (to the National Defense Plan) has been one of general alarm and disapproval." He probably only meant Harold Fey and Popper-Topper of the Foreign Policy Association. In fact, in the very next statement he suddenly doubts his own assertion saying "if this alarm and disapproval gain ground in America . . ."

"An early abandonment of this military plan for offensive purposes is imperative . . ." referring to the Defense Plan. Offensive purposes according to whom? To Fey and Popper-Topper? Certainly, according to the people who most know about the plan—the President, the members of the National Assembly, and Field Marshal MacArthur—the Plan is strictly and entirely defensive in nature.

"An armed force sufficient to preserve internal order, susceptible of expansion at the proper time for the defense of our neutrality, is in my opinion, all that we need." In other words, the ex-senator is proposing ex-Emperor Selassie as military adviser to the Philippine Commonwealth!

"Because of the high position he (Quezon) occupies, his statements could be taken in the United States as correctly representing the sentiments of the Filipino people—something which, I believe, is far, very far from being the case." And, for once the former senator is right. What he himself foisted as the statements of President Quezon do not correctly represent the sentiment of the Filipino people.

NEUTRALIZATION IS ONLY BAD SECOND CHOICE

If we had wished, we could have done as briefly as President Quezon in summarizing Mr. Sumulong's article. The President's summary: "Give up the National Defense program and rely only for our security upon the neutralization of the Islands guaranteed by international agreement." This is an excellent summary in that it is about the measure of the article's substance and, at the same time, it bares to nakedness the ridiculous idea which it expands to scholarly respectability with quotations of and citations from international treaties and diplomatic notes. But, like the idea of having something bigger to chew on.

Let us detach ourselves from America, he advises, because war between America and Japan is as sure as the coming of tomorrow. We do not want to be dragged into the bloody affair. We run numerous risks, he claims, by prolonging our special relationship with America. Yet, in the same breath, he frantically urges us to place ourselves in the safe-keeping of the powers. How the former senator can easily make out dangers arising from Philippine-American association and at the same time can completely fail to discern the infinitely greater dangers of a helpless Philippines even under neutralization is not a mere problem of argumentation—it is a problem for the oculist and the optometrist.

Mr. Sumulong believes that military competence can be achieved as easily as digging up proofs from musty books for a pre-determined thesis. No wonder he speaks of neutralization as something that can be had simply for the mere asking. But, again, he is mistaken. Under established international practices, neutralization must be truly an international agreement.

"A power," says Dr. T. J. Lawrence, "is incapable of neutralizing its own territory by its own mere declaration, because the rights and duties of other powers, as conferred and imposed by International Law, would be considerably altered thereby. Similarly two or three powers cannot neutralize the territory of one of their number, for they have no authority to legislate for the civilized world. . . . The common law of nations cannot be overridden by one of the communities subject to it, or by a small group of them. A change of status, if it is to be internationally valid, must be the result of general agreement. At the very least it must be accepted by all the important states concerned in the matter. . . ."

Philippine neutralization, under the circumstances, must be supported or acquiesced to by the United States, Japan, China, Great Britain, Holland, France, Russia, and perhaps a few other powers. Neutralization of the Philippines being such a big undertaking, no wonder Congress merely requested the President of the United States to enter into negotiations with foreign powers towards the conclusion of a treaty neutralizing the Philippines. The American President is not directed to do so, and certainly we have no international personality to initiate the negotiations ourselves.

But ponder upon the list of powers that must participate in a declaration neutralizing the Philippines and you will see trouble already in ferment. It is an established precedent that inviting a nation to join a neutralization treaty automatically elevates that nation to the rank of a Great Power. Thus Italy first attained to this rank when she was invited to the Conference of London in 1867 which negotiated the neutralization of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg. (See Lawrence, pp. 594-595). Will Japan consent to an invitation with this implication to China? Will the powers recognize Holland as such? At the very start, neutralization of the Philippines will provoke a major diplomatic crisis.

Mr. Sumulong seems to hold to the idea that a nation participating in the declaration of neutralization invariably undertakes to guarantee the safety and integrity of the neutralized state. This view is erroneous. "At the very least," says an authority on International Law, "it (neutralization) must be accepted by all the important states concerned in the matter, and it should be remembered that their consent can be given by tacit acquiescence as well as by formal stipulations."

Without resorting to the overly-free method of Mr. Sumulong, it is impossible to hold that Japan and Great Britain, by merely indicating tacit acquiescence to the neutralization of the Philippines would thereby feel themselves obligated to go to war to protect the Philippines.

All in all, therefore, neutralization is a second choice as our means to security, its accomplishment is entirely beyond our power to do or direct, and its protective advantage problematical. On the other hand, the National Defense Plan is within our means and our authority to carry out, and it is more practical, more reliable, and more effective guarantee to national security and integrity. The disparity between the two is so great that to advocate neutralization as against the National Defense plan is as stupid as to keep the dross and throw away the gold.

AGUINALDO AND SUMULONG ISSUE A JOINT STATEMENT ON NEUTRALIZATION AGREEMENT

General Emilio Aguinaldo and Judge Juan Sumulong, in a joint statement issued to the press on April 23, 1937, hailed the news from Washington about a preliminary agreement for the initiation of an international pact guaranteeing the neutrality of the Philippines.

They reiterated their stand that the primary task of Filipino leaders is to dispel all fears and doubts as regards the political future of the Islands, and that commercial agreements and defense questions should be subordinated to the political problem.

The Aguinaldo-Sumulong statement reads as follows:

"We are glad to hear the news from Washington that a preliminary agreement has been reached between the United States and the Philippine governments 'reaffirming the provisions of the insular independence act calling for United States initiation of an international pact assuring neutrality of the Philippines.'

The need of making it known in an authoritative manner at the outset of the work being undertaken by the joint committee of Americans and Filipinos appointed by President Roosevelt to study certain phases of the Philippine problem, that the American government has no intention of repealing the provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie law regarding neutralization of these islands will be easily understood if it is remembered that the activities here as well as in the United States of some anti-independence groups, which though few in number are ably and efficiently organized, have caused no little uneasiness and anxiety among the numerous supporters of real and complete Philippine Independence and of the faithful observance of the clauses of the Tydings-McDuffie Act agreed upon by the two Countries.

It is both proper and practical to dispel as completely as possible all fears and doubts as regards the political future of these islands before delving into the economic questions, new commercial arrangements, and the military defense of the islands, not only because the fundamental question as to our political future is entitled to receive preferential attention of the governments of the two countries, but also because the economic questions, proposed commercial arrangement, and questions related to our national defense, should be subordinated and adapted to the requirements of our future political régime, instead of allowing such questions to determine, as some persons desire, the nature of our political régime.

It is sufficient for us now that the American government has reiterated her adherence to the neutralization plan in principle. The details of a neutralization pact must naturally vary according to the exigencies of each case, but these variations are after all merely of form, the essential point being that by virtue of the neutralization agreement the guaranteeing powers will be bound to respect the political independence and territorial integrity of the neutralized country."

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE IN THE PHILIPPINES

By

I.T. RAFAEL AURE-ANLOAGUE, LL. B.

R. Aure-Anloague

Although from time immemorial, the Filipino woman's influence in the social makeup of the nation has been indispensable, yet her political rights as a voter did not lend glorious colors to her dream until the propitious year

1898, when the sublime-paralytic, Apolinario Mabini, included woman's suffrage proviso in the famous draft of the political Constitution of the Philippine Republic. Thru the tedious years, however, she has ever played the heroic role of an adviser, side by side with the man for the attainment of Philippine national consciousness and progress.

While the idea of woman's suffrage was not early given a paramount importance in the life of Philippine politics, yet constant mention of woman's suffrage and other privileges were aired by Bishop Nozaleda, a Spanish Dominican friar, whose movement to enfranchise the fair sex dated as far back as the historic year of 1837.

From the outset, there has been no formal organization among the Filipino women to support woman's suffrage openly, yet their constant efforts to help men indirectly in the seemingly eternal struggle for the attainment of important national political concessions tending to the realization of our common ideal, have made them well-versed in politics, so that, to them, woman's suffrage was certain to come in due time.

The constant devotion to duty of the Filipino woman, her patriotic fervor, her loyalty to our common cause, and her indispensable advices timely given to the man, has made her an idol and an ideal, a companion and an aid, nay, above all, a heroine in Philippine politics, truly symbolic of liberty, justice, fraternity and equality, worthy not only of the suffrage of the nation, but also of her honor and fame.

In 1912, a bill providing for the grant of woman's suffrage was introduced in the Philippine Legislature, but the said bill did not prosper. During the same year Mrs Carrie Chapman Catt of the United States, and Dr. Aletta Jacob of Holland, who were known internationally to be urgent supporters and champions of the woman's suffrage movement, arrived in the Philippines, and in spite of the fact that a formal organization for the enhancement of woman's suffrage counting with cosmopolitan members gave birth to a new impetus, nay, to a new era in the history of the laudable movement, yet no significant headway was remarkably gained because of the preconcerted opposition that certain powerful group showed, and thus, by force of cruel destiny or fate, and in fine, by mere failure of the ardent supporters of the idea to devote more time to purposes of propaganda, no definite progress to finally seal the movement in order to spell success rather than disappointment had been attained. Painful years of anxious waiting had to be met with before the goal of ambition of Filipino women was arrived at, and so for more than two decades since the launching of formal desire of the nation to legislate in favor of woman's suffrage, the indefatigable women had to struggle incessantly in order to see that their meritorious efforts were crowned with the laurels of triumph.

As early as 1918 the office of the Governor-General favorably recommended to the national Legislature the enactment of woman's suffrage law for the enfranchisement of Filipino women, and during the next year the Philippine Senate passed the woman's suffrage bill, although the lower house did not support the said bill, and thus again the movement met with open failure.

The culmination of the woman's suffrage movement came in the hopeful year of 1933, when Governor-General Frank Murphy signed the bill as approved by the Philippine Legislature. While the law was truly only 300,000 women voters; thus, finally, the women demonstrated successfully that they were really entitled to the enfranchisement, inasmuch as they gave 150,000 votes over and above the said quota set by the famous framers of the Philippine Constitution. By the national movement for woman's suffrage, by acts and deeds, and by all means available rationally, an unprecedented triumph in the history of Philippine politics for the enfranchisement of the women had been recorded throughout the entire length and a perfect instrument definitely approving the rights of Filipino women to participate in the elections, yet because of certain proviso, the women had to wait until the historic year of 1937 before the final definite right to vote was to be had. And that was realized after 450,000 Filipino women voted in the plebiscite for woman's suffrage, where the necessary quota had been set by the members of the Constitutional Convention to be breadth of the country.

Woman's suffrage in the Philippines gave the women voters their hearts' desire as far as participations in national as well as local affairs of the women are concerned. In the elections of December 14, 1937, the Filipino women numbering nearly 600,00 qualified voters, went to the polls and voted for their candidates without fear or favor. That election was the first national election for provincial and municipal offices where the women, according to the new law, participated and their participation met with creditable victory.

The signal victory of Carmen Planas for a seat in the Municipal Board of the city of Manila during the elections of December 14, 1937, astounded not only the political tycoons of the country but the entire Philippine electorate as a whole. She had proven beyond the shade of a doubt that the Filipino women are a force in the social and political make-up of the country, decisively indispensable in the great task of making the Commonwealth a success. Representing the Young Philippines Party, she had demonstrated triumphantly the capacity of the modern Filipino woman in the delicate art of politics by leading some of her most able contenders for the post of councilor in the city of Manila.

We need more women in the Philippines of her dynamic personality. She has the intelligence and the force of youth which led her to success. Her radiant beauty and disarming personality in a way contributed to her unprecedented triumph.

Women of the country have always invoked the names of famous women, such as Joan of Arc, the heroine of France; Queen Victoria of England; Julia Ward Howe of the United States, and Nightingale of Crimean War fame, but in the coming years the name of Carmen Planas will be added to the intrepid galaxy of world successful women, past and present, and thus her success would be a fountain source of genuine inspiration for all.

Miss Carmen Planas

OTHER FILIPINO WOMEN HOLDING APPOINTIVE OFFICES UNDER THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE PHILIPPINES

Hon. Natividad Almeda-Lopez, Judge, Municipal Court of Manila, and the first woman to hold the office of Assistant Fiscal, Bureau of Justice.

Atty. Milagros Llerena-Telmo, Justice of the Peace of Cainta, Rizal.

Atty. Anatolia Reyes, former Auxiliary Justice of the Peace of San Juan del Monte, Rizal, and candidate for Assemblywoman, first district of Rizal, in the November, 1938, elections.

Cagayan has also one woman justice of the peace; Ilocos Norte, two; Iloilo, one; and Pangasinan, one. There is one woman municipal treasurer in Ilocos Norte, and also one in Ilocos Sur.

In addition to the above-named posts, there are two women municipal secretaries in Abra, two in Albay, one in Bohol, one in Camarines Sur, two in Cavite, two in Ilocos Sur, one in Iloilo, one in Isabela, two in Leyte, three in Pangasinan, one in Rizal, one in Sorsogon, and one in Nueva Vizcaya.

There are, besides, thousands of women teachers employed by the Bureau of Education in the public schools, not to mention other responsible positions being occupied by professional Filipino women in the university, bureaus and other government offices and institutions, as well as in private concerns.

Second Anniversary of the Commonwealth of the Philippines

PRESIDENT MANUEL L. QUEZON, inset, addressing the masses on the Luneta during the celebration of the Second Anniversary of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, Monday, November 15, 1937, said:

"IN AN AGE when defenseless nations are in constant dread of their very existence, America's withdrawal stands as a beacon light... Our first thought is of America... We are building a government that will not try to make the rich wealthier, but will seek to improve the lot of the poor... The government should see to it that the masses get what is due them... President Quezon himself should never forget his social justice policy..."

AFTER WHICH, shovel in hand and while the world looked at him, Speaker Gil Montilla, of the first National Assembly under the Commonwealth, planted a two-year old molave tree behind the Legislative Building that it might grow up into a sturdy tree.

THE DAY FOLLOWING (November 16), the President dined with his former colleagues in the defunct Philippine Senate to sound their opinion on the proposed change from the unicameral legislature to a bicameral form, as in the good old days... also the plan to reduce the President's term from six to four years, but allowing a re-election for a second term.—The Sunday Tribune, Nov. 21, 1937.

One and a half years later, or, more specifically, about the middle part of May, 1939, President Quezon reiterated the above-mentioned plan in a speech he delivered before the members of the second National Assembly, as follows:

SPEECH

By His Excellency, Manuel L. Quezon,
President of the Philippines
On the Proposed Amendments to the Constitution of the Philippines

MR. SPEAKER, GENTLEMEN OF THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY:

I have come on an errand that may seem unusual, namely, to address the National Assembly, upon a subject which, I am informed, will be discussed by you in accordance with the decision reached at a caucus held by the members of this body last Saturday, the 13th instant. I have decided to ask your leave that I may lay before you frankly my views on the matter, for silence on my part might be misunderstood and place me in a false light before the people.

According to my information, you have decided, by an overwhelming majority of votes, to pass during this session a resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution which, if approved by the Philippine electorate and, subsequently, by the President of the United States, would permit my reelection as President of the Philippines.

It is no secret to anyone who had closely followed the proceedings of the Constitutional Convention that framed and adopted the present Constitution of the Philippines, that it was I who conceived the idea of no reelection for the President, and that it was largely because of my personal appeal to the members of the Convention, that the section prohibiting the reelection of the President was inserted. I had not been long in office when the talk about my reelection commenced to be heard, and I promptly gave out the statement that I would not be induced to seek reelection. Unless my memory fails me, one of the members of the National Assembly who first expressed to me his opinion that I should be reelected, is the gentleman from Batangas, Hon. Eusebio Orense. I remember that I discussed the subject with him at length, and I think I was able to convince him that the matter should be dropped. From time to time, and as the occasion arose, I reiterated publicly my determination not to be a candidate for reelection.

In all candor I must say, however, that it was not displeasing to me to learn that there was a sentiment in the country in favor of my reelection. I would not be human, if I felt otherwise. The resolution favoring my reelection, especially when they came from non-political sources, gave me the deepest satisfaction and happiness. I considered such resolutions as evidence that the people were pleased with my administration, and they served to spur me to go and carry out the policies I had enunciated. But despite these resolutions, I remained firm in my stand that I would not be persuaded to be a candidate to succeed myself.

But when I learned that the National Assembly was considering the question of proposing amendments to the Constitution so as to permit my reelection, I felt it my duty to weigh carefully the reasons advanced in support of the proposition. The argument frequently heard that there is at present no other Filipino who could step in and take my place and carry on the work I have started, has made the least effect on me. Even if I were vain enough to want to think that no Filipino today would make as good a president as myself, I could not close my eyes to the fact that there are many amongst our countrymen who are possessed of exceptional qualifications to head our government. I do not care at this time to mention any names, for I have not come to advocate the candidacy of anyone. However, when your Speaker, in discussing recently with me this question stated that independently of whether I should be reelected or not, he felt that the Constitution should be amended by reducing the term of office of the President from six to four years and permitting his reelection, his reason being that six years is too long for a bad President and too short for a good one, he created a grave doubt in my mind as to whether it was wise for me to attempt to oppose the consideration by the people of the question raised by the Speaker. So I told Speaker Yulo that if the National Assembly shared his views on the subject, I would not interpose any objection to a measure that would call for a constitutional convention for the purpose of considering this question, and such other questions as the convention might deem advisable to take up. I further told the Speaker that if a convention was called, and there was a consensus of opinion that the Constitution should be amended so as to fix the term of office of the President at four, instead of six years, and permit his reelection, I would recommend to the convention that not more than one reelection be allowed, and that, in any event, no person shall be permitted to remain in office as President for more than eight consecutive years. I would also recommend, I added, that such an amendment be given a retroactive effect, so that, although I have been elected under the Constitution as it now stand, the amendment would affect my own tenure of office.

Concerning the question of my reelection, I informed Speaker Yulo that I had not changed my mind on the subject, but that if the Constitution was amended in the manner above stated, I would give the matter further consideration, since my reelection would in that case mean only two more years over my present term. I let Speaker Yulo as well as Floor Leader Paredes understand clearly that under no circumstances would I be willing to serve more than eight years altogether, counting from the date of my inauguration in November, 1935.

Gentlemen of the National Assembly, I understand you have agreed not to call a constitutional convention, but to propose the amendment by direct action of the National Assembly. Under the Constitution, you have the power and authority to do that, but it is my hope that you may still be persuaded to adopt the other method and call a constitutional convention.

I have several reasons, which I shall presently mention, why I think you should call a convention if you are convinced that the Constitution should be amended so as to shorten the term of office of the President and permit his reelection. And if you should insist on the National Assembly itself acting on the proposed amendment, I deem it my duty to declare before you on this solemn occasion that even if your resolution is approved by the Philippine electorate and, subsequently, by the President of the United States, I shall not be a candidate for reelection. But while I am reluctant to serve as President longer than my present term of office, I might be willing to serve for more than six years if the amendment to the Constitution was adopted by a constitutional convention called for the purpose, and the delegates elected to the convention had stated in their platform or certificate of candidacy that they would vote for an amendment to the Constitution reducing the term of office of the President from six to four years, and allowing one reelection. An amendment adopted in this fashion would in effect originate from the people, and I might feel obligated to heed their command. Let me repeat, however, that in no case would I consent to hold the office for more than a total of eight years.

George Washington was as great a patriot as any man ever born. He certainly was endowed with far superior qualifications to lead his people than I can ever hope to possess. Yet he did not consider it his duty to be the head of his nation for more than eight years. That precedent is enough for me.

Let me now give you the other reasons why I think you should call a constitutional convention.

In my opinion, there are several important amendments to the Constitution that should be proposed. These amendments are even more necessary than the change in the term of office of the President, although I fear that, at least in one case, it would be futile to induce you to propose the amendment. I am referring to the revival of the bicameral legislature. Since it is only human that you should not look with favor to the creation of another body which would share equally with the National Assembly the legislative powers of the government, thus reducing by half the Assembly's present authority, I shall not attempt to tax your patience by vainly discussing the subject. It is only fair, however, that I advance to you the information that I intend to recommend at the next convention of our party the adoption of a plank in its platform in favor of a constitutional amendment to revive the Senate, making each Senator elective by national suffrage, instead of by Senatorial districts as before.

The other amendments to the Constitution which, I think, should be adopted are:

1. The Electoral Commission should be abolished and in its place the power to decide election contests affecting seats in the legislature should be vested either in the courts of justice exclusively, or in the legislature alone.

2. If we are to continue to have a unicameral legislature, the power to try impeachments, except in the case of members of the Supreme Court, should be vested in that court and the power to impeach left to the National Assembly. In cases involving members of the Supreme Court, the power to impeach should be given to the Executive, while the power to try impeachments should remain in the National Assembly. Under this system, when the highest officials of one branch of the government are impeached, the other two branches, and not one of them only, would participate in determining the guilt or innocence of the parties under impeachment.

It is vesting in the National Assembly a most dangerous power when it is allowed to act as prosecutor and judge at the same time, as is the case at present. The mere fact that the power to impeach is given to a commission of the National Assembly—the Commission on Impeachment—and the power to try impeachments is left to that Body itself, does not alter the situation, since the Commission on Impeachment is chosen by the National Assembly from amongst its own members.

Lastly, according to my latest information from Washington, there is some hope that Congress may approve the recommendations of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs in so far as they affect the trade provisions of the Independence Act up to 1946. If the Congress should pass legislation to this effect, an amendment to the Constitution will become imperative.

Mr. Speaker, Gentlemen of the National Assembly—I hope it is not necessary for me to assure you that I am touched to the very depth of my soul by the action you have taken at your caucus last Saturday. Nothing I can say, nothing I can do, will adequately express the extent and intensity of my grateful sentiments. Whether I leave my office at the end of my term of six years, as it is my expectation even as I now address you, or at the end of eight years, as it may possibly be, your action in that caucus will forever constitute the greatest and most cherished compensation for my long and, I humbly believe, devoted service to our common country.

REALISTIC RE-EXAMINATION OF PHILIPPINE-AMERICAN POLITICAL RELATIONS

An address broadcast over the radio in the United States Monday night, March 14, 1938 (10:30 P.M.)—Manila Time: March 15, 1938, at 11:30 A.M.

By the Hon. PAUL V. McNUTT

*Then U. S. High Commissioner to the Philippines (See pp. 725-727)
Now, Federal Administrator of Social Security.*

(Inaugurated July 13, 1938)

First of all I wish to express my deep appreciation to the National Broadcasting Company for its extension of its facilities to Manila in order that I may greet my family and friends in the Philippine Islands.

My Fellow Citizens: History is a strange thing; its events pass with the seeming finality of a gun shot; but the consequences of each event continue so long as the world turns and man lives. For nearly a year I have been serving you and our President as your representative in the far off Philippines. These 7,000 of the world's most beautiful and fertile islands do not often intrude upon your attention—not often enough. One writer has it, "When Dewey took Manila Bay in 1898, you could almost hear the snap of geographies opening all over the United States." I hope you will open them again and put your finger on the bold little archipelago which juts out at the southeast corner of Asia. And it's not so little. Its arable land is probably greater than that of Japan proper and its total area is about equal to that of Great Britain.

The 7,000 islands are inhabited by 15,000,000* people who owe allegiance to our nation, salute our flag, most of whom speak our language, sing our "Star Spangled Banner", and, what is most important, worship our Christian God. And their number is growing rapidly. Population has twice doubled since they came under our flag nearly 40 years ago.

We took over the Islands through no real choice of our own. Their acquisition was the consequence of a war waged with Spain on another issue. Perhaps it was not wise; perhaps it was not altogether fortunate for us, but it is a fact of history and we cannot shun its consequences. When the Treaty of Paris confirmed our proprietorship, we undertook a very noble experiment—one which was new to the world of colonies and empires.

CHRISTIANIZATION, SPAIN'S WORK

Spain had accomplished little else than the Christianization of the great majority of the people: Nothing creditable in the way of schools; no marked improvement of health and sanitation; no improvement in the people's standard of living; nothing of what we call political liberty; no substantial participation in government. She had ruled harshly amid big and little rebellions and without the affection or understanding of her wards. Our policy was the reverse. The bugles of war had not quieted and the acrid smoke of gun powder still clouded the rice fields when, wonder of colonial wonders, corporals and sergeants shared their rations with famished

Granted the Philippines is an outpost and a distant one in miles—but today it is only five days by transpacific clipper.

But, the Philippines is an outpost of decency and peace—the only safe outpost for Christianity in the Orient—the only sure outpost for Americanism in the Orient. And whenever have we not had outposts? Our entire history has been one of pushing the frontier; of setting distant points to be reached and distant aspirations to be achieved. Outposts have been the milestones of American progress.

Neither this American generation nor any other American generation should falter on its onward path. We cannot scuttle. We must not shirk.

REALISTIC RE-EXAMINATION URGED

Without too great a loss of time and with the cooperation of the leaders among the Filipinos we should proceed to a realistic re-examination of the needs of these people and the long-range interests of ourselves. If this study results in a policy favoring a permanent political and economic relationship with the Philippines, it shall be, I trust, because the Filipinos want it and because it is in aim of our national purposes. America will not impose her sovereignty by force upon any people. The enduring welfare and safety of both countries are to be the paramount consideration.

It is my conviction that they are not far apart and that they can be harmonized—harmonized for the salvation of the Philippines, for the larger interests of America, and for the peace of the Pacific.

AMERICA'S ALTRUISM IN THE PHILIPPINES

Address Delivered after the Mammoth Parade at the Luneta, Manila, upon the Commemoration of the 40th Anniversary of American Occupation, Aug. 13, 1938

By the Hon. MANUEL L. QUEZON

MR. HIGH COMMISSIONER, HONORED GUESTS,
MY FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN:

We have assembled in this setting of tranquility and peace to celebrate reverently great events and heroic action; to commemorate deeds whereby a new culture was implanted in our land; to memorialize a great nation for its beneficent altruism.

Forty years ago, this day and hour, an American Army stormed to the attack of the beleaguered Spanish City of Manila. I was a witness to that epoch-making event. In memory's eye, I can see them now, forming grimly for the advance in the hazy mists of the morning's glow, tight lipped, covered with sludge and mud, sweated and seared by tropical heat, driving home to their objective, and for some of them, to the judgment seat of God. Green's Brigade sweeps over San Antonio Abad* and along the beach while over to the east General MacArthur drives up the Singalong Road to be met by a hail of fire from Block House 14. He calls for an officer to volunteer to lead a close assault and clear the way, and history writes its first chapter in the career of the future American World Chief of Staff—Peyton C. March. By nightfall the town is theirs.

Many in this audience contributed their services to their Government that day. For such, one of the special purposes of these particular public proceedings is to express to you some small degree of appreciation for your many acts of good soldiership. You no doubt recall vividly the spirit of adventure that animated you as young soldiers on mobilization, when mirth and romance beckoned and the vision of the world was decorated with wonder and ambitious hopes. You remember, too, how you entered into the service with cheerful hearts and fervid patriotism; how you rejoiced when the war was over and victory attained, and how you made your way home amidst the joyful acclamations of a grateful nation. In memory of those days, millions of people, bound together by an impulse of sympathy, turn with love and devotion not only to the graves of the dead, but they cling to and cherish with reverential awe the living remnants of those former armies and navies. In your youth and strength, your love and loyalty, you gave all that mortality can give. You need no eulogy from me or from any man. You belong to history as furnishing one of the greatest examples of successful and disinterested patriotism. You belong to posterity as the instructor of future generations in the principles of liberty and right. You belong to the present, to us, by your virtues and by your achievements. I think it safe to assert on your behalf that you feel amply repaid for all that you suffered and for all that you did.

The angry passions of those warlike days are now calmed and soothed. The sense of personal misfortune has passed away and we live far enough from those times of trial and test to know that the honesty and sincerity were not all on one side; and reflective minds recall with pleasure that the efforts of the genius, courage, and virtue of those heroic periods are now our common heritage. Feelings of reciprocal respect unite the warring factions in bonds of understanding and reverence for our mutual dead.

But poignant as are the sentiments I have expressed, the main purpose of this gathering is not to extol the actual incidents or participants in the conflict of that eventful day but to express the boundless gratitude of the Filipino people to the United States for the measureless benefits she has bestowed during the four decades that have passed since then.

As I saw in that late afternoon of August 12, 1898, the sun set in the clouds that crown Mariveles with purple and gold, in the gathering darkness of the Pacific, the royal flag of Spain came down and for the first time in my life I saw the Stars and Stripes run to the fore. Little did I realize then that I was witnessing what in ultimate result may prove to be the greatest event of modern civilization in the Orient. Little did I know in my immaturity that I was beholding the birth of a new ideology in Asia—an ideology based upon what was then a strange, new conception in this part of the world—a conception that government is, "of the people, by the people, and for the people"—a conception based upon the magic words—liberty and freedom. I did not dream then that the first pangs of Philippine nationhood were in their beginnings, that forty years later I would be speaking as I am today.

Strange the hold that a national flag has upon its people. The mystery of symbols lies deep in human nature. It is probable that almost as soon as men began to gather together for common purposes, some kind of conspicuous object was used as an emblem or symbol of the common interests. Impulses to that end rise spontaneously in the hearts of men. They do not issue from any pre-arranged culture of sentiment but by process of instinctive fervor spring from the honest and simple-hearted simplicity which prompts mankind to cherish and to stand by kith and kin; which engenders those sentiments of devotion to home and fireside upon which the perpetuity of nations depends. Symbols in all ages have played a large part in human affairs by stimulating the actions of men, through their sentiments and through their imaginations. All written forms containing injunctions and rules of action and duty are precise and appeal strongly to the understanding but are destitute of the warmth and color that awaken the immeasurable emotions of the heart. The signs and emblems of great movements have always laid hold of their followers with more vigor and tenacity than the history and written rescripts of the movements themselves. Attachment to the flag has been quite as potent as loyalty to the law as a factor of national stability.

What manner of flag then was this Stars and Stripes I asked myself as I saw it for the first time fluttering from Santiago's ramparts in the gathering gloom. History has taught me:

It was more than a century and a half ago, on June 14, 1777, that the flag of the United States was formally adopted by official resolution. It began in all the sobriety of an act of the Continental Congress. It ended in one of those rare bursts of poetry which occasionally distinguished the Revolution. It provided that the union should be "thirteen stars, white, in a blue field, representing a new constellation." The fathers of the struggling republic were under no illusions; they knew they had shaken the foundations of an already crumbling world, and they hung that constellation definitely in the western sky with all the superb confidence which illuminated the opening years of the modern era.

The world has turned over more than once since June 14, 1777, but the constellation has never set. It pictures the vision of a people whose eyes are turned to the rising dawn. It represents the hope of a nation for posterity. It speaks with the sanctity of revelation. It has a meaning unrivalled; a message which gladdens all races; a strength and power of influence which inspires people to bravest thoughts and deeds. The struggle for human rights and liberty gave it birth; battles for freedom scarred it with holy markings; and the spirit of sacrifice, service and devotion has made it blessed.

It symbolized two great acts of national statesmanship—the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

The first proclaimed a philosophy of government new to the world of that day. It was based upon the thought that the rights of men—life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—are of supreme concern. It ascribed their origin and sanctity not to the tolerance of society nor to the benevolent whim of any monarch, but to the august gift of the Divine Creator of the Universe. It declared man's title to his estate of freedom to be self-evident, no longer to be debated or denied, and therefore no longer to be gainsaid by any majority of his fellowmen, however overwhelming. And it grounded the claim to national existence upon the ultimate predicate that "it is to secure these rights that governments are instituted among men." The regimen of democracy is rule of the majority. But it is the great contribution of the American Revolution that these fundamental, essential human rights became the purpose and prime concern of government; that it took them out of the category of things debatable where the will of the majority may prevail, placed them in the fellowship of things unchangeable because eternal.

Woven into the very warp and woof of the Constitution were the principles of the Declaration of Independence.* But now, instead of being an announcement of a philosophy of government, they were enacted into immutable law. In its wise distribution of governmental powers and the establishment of effective checks and balances, insofar as human sagacity can control human nature, it shut the gates of power against the intrusion of tyranny, corruption and selfish ambition. Creating a strong central government, adequate to the common defense, to the securing of domestic tranquillity and to the fulfillment of international obligations, it taught the world that democracy may be made safe for mankind. But more than all this, more than had as yet entered into the mind of man save in his fond dreams of a coming Golden Age, it solved the great problem of the reconciliation of government with liberty. In England the doctrine of the omnipotence of Parliament was fully established. But here the omnipotence of the legislative body was emphatically denied. Over and above the power of the law-makers was set the higher power of the Constitution. And in confiding to the federal judiciary the final interpretation and application of the Constitution and the laws, the founders of the Republic placed upon them the supreme duty and responsibility of refusing to give recognition to enactments violative of the organic act. Other free and popular governments there are,—constitutional monarchies or republics, where the rights of the people are more or less definitely respected. But there, liberty and justice, even the sanctity of the constitution itself depends upon the good will of the legislators or their fear of political consequences. But here, let but the least attempt be made to thwart or deny what is written in the organic law, let but the meanest citizen be stripped of the rights which this great charter of liberties guarantees him, and it is the voice of justice, unimpassioned but inflexible, which interposes the categorical negative of the Constitution.

All this and more was written on that flag as it unfurled above the Pasig before my uncomprehending eyes that fateful afternoon. All this and more it was to transcribe, to implant, to bequeath to me and mine. Under its folds peace and prosperity have come to this favored land. Materially we have developed education, sanitation, agricultural and industrial enterprise. Security and happiness, freedom from financial pressure, a higher mode of life all are ours. A new and progressive outlook upon the modern problems of life is in the making. All of this we owe to that starry flag and to the great people it represents. When it finally comes down from Santiago in 1946 it will find somewhere in its folds the grateful hearts of a people—a new and vibrant republic facing with optimistic hope its rising dawn—No words can adequately thank you, great American people—We can only hold you in the reverence of our hearts and pray for you as we render homage to the great guider of all destinies. Our Father who art in Heaven.

Occupation Day—forty years ago—We will not forget: We can not forget.

Mr. High Commissioner: As a symbol of the endless chain of friendship which binds together our two peoples, I wish to present to you, Sir, for your exalted leader, the President of the United States, these two flags—that of your own country and that of the new country to which it has given birth. The tie that binds us together which they represent, does not depend upon an alliance, nor a declaration, nor a treaty. It consists of those eternal, spiritual kinships and relationships which defy all quarrels, all oppositions, all aspirations. It is that extraordinary indefinable longing for the same sort of things. Our aims, our hopes, our appreciations, are the same. In the great moral causes the great causes of righteousness, of liberty, of peace, the great causes which mean the perpetuation of the higher and nobler aims and purposes of life, the United States and the Philippines are in complete unison, not dominating nor conspiring against each other, but going on in perfect accord because in the essential things, we are in absolute and hearty agreement.

SYMBOLIC FLOAT—Philippines receiving the Philippine flag from Uncle Sam—symbolizing the return of sovereignty to the islands. The one and only float in the Parade. It was designed by sculptor Guillermo Tolentino.

THE PHYSIOLOGY OF FREEDOM

By

Dr. CARLOS P. ROMULO

Publisher of D-M-H-M Publications

I

The greatest enemy of freedom, it has been said, is prosperity. For freedom is a thirst and a hunger, and prosperity is meat and drink.

As soon as a nation becomes absorbed, almost to the exclusion of other things, in economic pursuits, so soon must it, in corresponding degree, relax its pursuit of liberty.

For the pursuit of liberty arises from a sense compounded of want and yearning. It is a desire aching to be appeased, and prosperity is its anodyne.

The desire to be free springs from a consciousness of servitude. When the consciousness of servitude is obliterated by the opiate of well-being, the desire for freedom must die.

When the same consciousness is displaced by an awareness of a full and satisfied belly, the heart begins to put on layers upon layers of contentment and folds upon folds of satisfaction.

The hot flame that once burned the leanness of the body is extinguished. The ideals of the nation may then be symbolized by a tepid quivering substance that is a mixture of honey, jelly, and grease.

Man has been metamorphosed into swine.

II

This is the physiology of freedom on the basis of which I propose to draw the body and the spirit of Philippine independence.

It has been said by the wisecracks and the smart that independence is one thing and freedom another. It is a clever distinction but it is a distinction without a difference.

Let it be admitted that freedom is an individualistic concept while independence implies a notion of necessity and longing in the mass. Let it be admitted also that freedom, like happiness, is a personal matter, and that it rests not upon any external condition but only upon an inward state of the soul.

But when you have admitted these things, there still remains to be considered the important matter of environment. For the essence of freedom is pervasive. It is not what

Milton calls a "fugitive and cloistered virtue." Rather is it a part of the air we breathe, of the water we imbibe, of the food we eat, of the good solid earth that sustains us and holds us firm upon our feet.

For freedom, like happiness also, doubles in value in the sharing of it with others. Man, as an individual, is born free. As a member of the group there are restraints which must limit his freedom.

Dr. Carlos P. Romulo

Man, therefore, considered in isolation from his fellows, can have no real concept of freedom. It is a condition inherent in his aloneness. It is when he settles down to live with his fellows that he begins to realize what freedom means. To maintain then an unwavering allegiance to the principle of liberty by the remarkable process of conferring upon the group the needs of his own individual nature—in this consists the true understanding of freedom.

III

It follows that no man, so long as he does not consider himself a participant in the life of the community, can have a true understanding of freedom. It is necessary for him to relate his personal liberty to the liberty of the people.

When a man has become enfranchised into a group, or into society, the twig of his personal freedom is thereafter grafted upon the one common tree of liberty. He must draw sustenance therefrom. His freedom can have no reality apart and by itself. If he is cut off he withers upon the barren ground.

If a man says that there is no chain that can bind the sinews of a free mind, and that we can be free in the spirit though the devil have a lien upon our body, then I say: Don't listen to him. He is passing on to you a second-hand half-truth all rigged up in the glittering new attire of a meretricious romanticism.

For the body must not only be free in truth. The mind must know that the body is free. It must be convinced that nowhere in the whole scheme of its freedom is there the most subtle suggestion of enslavement or the possibility of enslavement. It is not enough that there are no chains visible upon our hands and feet. The mind must be satisfied that there are really no chains hidden somewhere that can be tightened when necessary; no, not even of that type so tenuous which the jealous Vulcan forged to ensnare Venus and Apollo.

IV

The pendulum of the Filipino mind is swinging across a wider and wider arc towards materialism. This is easily explained by the philosophy which has been dominant here for the past two or three centuries.

As with an individual, so it is with nations in the matter of fluctuations in philosophic allegiance. Age, background and condition—all exert a powerful influence upon the direction and the tendencies of the mind. Through youth, maturity, and senility a man's philosophy oscillates through a wider range of prejudices and opinions: from faith to reason, from rationalism to dogmatic acceptance, from idealism to materialism.

As the fibers of the body harden and acquire consistency under the onslaught of experience, there come changes over the mind that, whether imperceptible or violent, are called for by the medium in which a man lives.

The Filipino people have been subjected during the past three decades to an unrelenting propaganda in favor of independence. In a sense, it was necessary to encourage such propaganda. The tide of idealism in regard to the ultimate independence of the Philippines has been flowing all the while from the Revolution to the present. The dikes of national reason were ineffectual in holding back the waters of sentiment.

Thus, from the very inception of American sovereignty in the Philippines, the one subject of talk and aspiration here was independence. This situation was abetted on the one hand by the overflow of nationalistic feeling from the tumultuous streams of the Philippine Revolution, and on the other by the encouraging attitude with which America regarded the aspirations of the Filipinos for freedom.

Neither the Filipinos nor the Americans who had the power to modify this attitude if they so wished, took any steps to swerve the direction of the people's thinking. The memory of the Revolution was too recent to make oblivion of independence possible among the early Filipino leaders, and the Americans who came here as soldiers or as teachers were of an idealistic and liberty-loving stock.

Under the circumstances, only one thing could have happened. Independence, immediate, complete and absolute, was set before the eyes of the people as the goal of their common endeavors.

Thus was the tempo of Filipino life set according to the beat of this idealism. Oblivious of many other essential things, the attention of the people was fixed upon this almighty god that thenceforth ruled their hearts and their consciences. By the mystic sign of independence they were to have eternal life, while the few smart politicians were to find an easy living by the same happy and fecund symbol.

Then came the reaction. Sane people began to raise the issue of economic development, and some of the more courageous spirits even went so far as to advance the then blasphemous assertion that political independence would be impossible without economic independence.

The voice was small at first, but it gathered force and momentum with every year. Then, the great economic debacle overtook most of the countries of the world, shaking to their foundations such powerfully entrenched nations as England, America, and France.

Here in the Philippines we heard only distant detonations of the mighty economic catastrophe. But that was enough. A cautious and panicky America, thinking to appease her hungry and unemployed millions, took measures to protect her citizenry. One of the by-products of this great endeavor to cure the weaknesses of American economy was the independence law of the Philippines.

A belated American materialism had joined hands with an outmoded Philippine idealism.

There is no better proof of the teachability of the Filipinos than the rapidity with which they had assimilated the materialistic tenets of American civilization. They did not have to learn the love of liberty from America. The history of the Spanish regime in the Philippines was also the story of a race groping on its way toward the light and fighting its way to freedom.

Children of the easy-going and abundant tropics, there was one thing the Filipinos needed to learn, and in this none could have surpassed America as teacher. This one thing was the cult of the material life looking toward a general preoccupation with economic pursuits.

In this way, the Filipinos have been mentally prepared for a new philosophy which, without discarding the goal of ultimate independence, has tended to overemphasize the purely physical, material and worldly aspects of the Philippine question.

It is here, precisely, where we need to go back to the fundamentals of our national philosophy. I am convinced that there is a dangerous drift towards physical comfort, financial security, and well-being all around, to the utter neglect of the ideals without which no self-respecting nation can survive.

There is a smug, self-satisfied attitude which is gaining popularity even among those who should know better. It consists in saying, with an expressive shrug of the shoulders: "What more can we desire? We are free now. When we get our independence, what shall we do with it? What can we have under independence that we cannot have now?" And so on.

This is a dangerous frame of mind to develop in a country which, like the Philippines, needs to have a goal to strain forward to achieve.

We must guard against that specious fallacy, which is more commonly lived by than expressed in words, which would interpret liberty to mean simply the freedom to make money and spend it.

Freedom is a necessary condition of progress. And if progress means "any sequence of human achievements, the total result of which is to improve the conditions of living," then by all means, it is our duty to have the ideal of liberty fixed steadily before our eyes.

This is not to inveigh against wordliness and materialism as such. The testimony of life is still predominantly physical, and he who disregards the needs of the body must soon be compelled to give up the spirit, too.

But I do say that freedom is a necessary aspiration for the Filipino people. Contented and satisfied they may be under the protection of the most benevolent power on earth, but only in a state of freedom, knowing themselves to be really free and sovereign in their own land, can they know true happiness.

It is our duty to keep the fires burning on the national altars. For when we have permitted bovine complacency and swinish content to extinguish them, we shall have doomed ourselves to live forever in an eternal night unmitigated by the hope of dawn.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE IN 1946

The JPC Report Submitted to Sayre

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 20, 1938.—American and Filipino members of the joint preparatory committee of experts on Philippine affairs today officially signed their report and recommendations.

Informed sources said that recommendations covered political independence for the islands in 1946, as provided by the Tydings-McDuffie Act, and economic independence in 1961, as advocated by President Roosevelt.

Quintin Paredes, Philippines resident commissioner in the United States, signed the report on behalf of Commonwealth Secretary of Justice José Yulo and J. M. Elizalde, the two absent Philippine members.

The joint committee, headed by Ambassador John Van A. MacMurray, general chairman, submitted its report to Francis Sayre, assistant secretary of state. The report first will be considered by the inter-departmental committee and later referred to President Roosevelt.

While the report was not made public state department officials asserted the basic plan underlying the recommendations was that "instead of assessing full tariff duties on each other's products beginning in 1946 the countries will then assess 25 per cent of the prevailing rates of duties thereafter annually increasing the rates by five per cent of the prevailing duties until the complete elimination of preferences is brought about at the close of 1960."

It is possible the report and recommendations will not be made public until it is submitted simultaneously by President Roosevelt and Quezon to the United States Congress and the Philippine National Assembly, respectively, during their next sessions.

Commissioner Paredes announced that in company with José Romero and Benito Razón, two other Filipino members of the committee, he will sail for Manila from Vancouver, B.C., on May 28, aboard the s.s. Empress of Canada.

REALISTIC RE-EXAMINATION PROPOSAL TO BE DISCARDED

By Associated Press

Washington, August 19.—Officials of the state, war and treasury departments, working on a plan to give the Philippines complete independence in 1946, said that they were ignoring High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's statement that "the Philippines will become bloody ground if the American flag comes down."

They said that Mr. McNutt's proposal for a realistic reexamination of the independence problems has been thrown overboard.

Members of the legal sub-committee studying the proposed legislation in order to ef-fectuate the recommendations to the preparatory committee said that some recommendations must be negotiated by treaty with the Philippines after independence because "American legislation is not binding on the Philippines after 1946."

Officials explained their rejection of McNutt's re-examination proposal, saying they had to follow either the commissioner's ideas or the recommendations of the joint committee "which already spent more than a year on the reexamination of the Philippine problem."

NEW PLEBISCITE ON P. I. LIBERTY IS URGED IN U. S.

Judge Haussermann Submits Proposal for New Vote by Fillipinos to Tydings Committee; Osmeña Files Statement

By JULIUS C. EDELSTEIN
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 13, 1939—The outlook for Philippine economic adjustment legislation was drastically altered tonight as hearings by the Senate insular affairs committee neared their end.

Two proposals caused a sensation during today's hearing:

1. A statement by Judge John W. Haussermann urging Congress to provide an independence plebiscite for the Filipino people before 1946.

2. A suggestion for permanent retention of Philippine-American trade preference.

Judge Haussermann, insular gold magnate, said the Filipinos should "have an opportunity to express themselves again before the final act of separation."

Senators Millard Tydings, William H. King, Ernest Gibson, Gerald P. Nye and Bennet Champ Clark said they were paying "close attention" to press reports that President Manuel L. Quezon favors the holding of a plebiscite on independence.

Eugene P. Thomas and Creswell Micou, representing the Foreign Trade Council, attacked Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre's stand for liquidation of Philippine-American trade preferences.

They said it is essential to restrain the Philippines from "falling prey to dictator nations" because the insular raw materials would attract Japan and Germany which would use discriminatory trade practices in dealing with the Philippines.

Members of the insular committee said they were "interested" in both these proposals, although were contrary to the administration's program.

Senator King hinted strongly he might urge inclusion of a plebiscite provision in the present bill.

Major-General William H. Rivers, retired, former chief of the Philippine Constabulary, told the committee that insular independence should be granted immediately in order to avoid Far Eastern hostilities.

Commonwealth Vice-President Sergio Osmeña submitted to the committee a statement bristling with surprise, including revelations regarding his suggested sugar amendments.

His statement was introduced to the record but not read before the committee. It contained copies of a letter from Sayre to Chairman Tydings, disclosing that Sayre, fearing the effects of a disagreement between Philippine and American officials, gave his unqualified support to Osmeña's proposed amendments.

The Philippine vice-president stated that asserted criticism of his sugar proposals was "unfounded and unjust". He referred to a statement made recently by representatives of American cane-growers and refiners to the insular affairs committee through H. Beach Carpenter, spokesman for American sugar interests in Washington. Carpenter strenuously attacked Osmeña's proposed economic modifications of the existing independence act, would have changed the definition of unrefined sugar to include all sugar testing below 99.8 polarization and thus would have included turbinado sugar.

Carpenter charged Osmeña's proposal was an attempt to flood the United States market with turbinado sugar which would compete with United States refined sugar. He said that if the Osmeña proposal were adopted, and if the 1937 Sugar Act were not renewed, the Philippines would be able to ship to the United States 350,000 tons of turbinado sugar.

Osmeña declared that this was not the intention of his proposal. He said his modification merely aimed at preserving the "status quo" of present practices, adding that the Tydings-Kocialkowski measure as it now stands would permit entry of only 50,000 tons of direct-consumption sugar from the Philippines, including both refined and turbinado.

He said the Treasury Department now permits entry of 17,000 tons of turbinado "in addition to the Tydings-McDuffie refined quota."—The Phil. Herald, March 14, 1939.

III. ECONOMICS

TO MAINTAIN ECONOMIC TIES WITH U.S. UNTIL 1960

Roosevelt-Quezon Agreement Paves Way for JPC Experts to Reach Accord

By Associated Press
(The Tribune, April 7, 1938)

WASHINGTON, April 6.—An agreement to postpone Philippine economic independence until the end of 1960 has been reached between President Roosevelt and President Manuel L. Quezon, of the Philippine Commonwealth, the state department announced here today.

It was learned some time ago that Paul V. McNutt, United States high commissioner in the Philippines, recommended to President Roosevelt abolition of the idea of Philippine independence, either political or economic. In case the commissioner's proposal is adopted the plan of the joint preparatory committee for economic independence in 1960, as announced in the Roosevelt-Quezon agreement, would be dropped.

The state department made public the outline of a program providing for gradual elimination of trade preferences now existing between the United States and the Philippines. The program was the result of a year of investigation by the joint preparatory committee of experts headed by Ambassador John van A. MacMurray. It does not change the date of Philippine political independence—July 4, 1946—but provided that the economic ties shall not be severed until nearly 15 years later.

The program probably will be presented to Congress but is not expected to be ready in detail for the present session. Congressional approval will be required to put the proposal into effect.

Members of the joint preparatory committee said the agreement between the two presidents would end the deadlock existing between the American and Filipino committeemen since the committee visited the Islands last year. They predicted the committee's report would be finished "by the end of the month" but added there would be no time for it to go through the inter-departmental committee to President Roosevelt in time for submission to Congress before adjournment of the present session.

In general the program calls for an annual reduction of five per cent in the trade preferences now given Philippine products shipped into the United States—that is five per cent of the American duties which would apply to the products if they came from foreign country, would be applied each year to Philippine products beginning 1941. In 1946, the year set for political independence, this percentage would consist of export taxes imposed and retained by the Philippine government.

In 1946, having reached 25 per cent, the levy would be imposed by the United States when the products arrived in America and the money would be retained by the United States government. Each year thereafter another five per cent would be added. In the ordinary course of events this would lead to complete elimination of trade preferences in 1961. However, there would be an adjustment of fiscal dates in the meantime so that elimination actually would occur in 1960.

Up to 1946 the program would be virtually the same as that contained in the Philippine Independence Act of 1934. However, the 1934 law calls for termination on July 4, 1946, of all trade preferences between the two countries.

State department officials contended that if the Philippines were made to stand wholly on their own feet in 1946 the shock to insular economy might be too great. They said a period of gradual adjustment was necessary.

The text of the state department's announcement today follows:

"The President of the United States and the President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines have approved for publication the following summary of a recent exchange of telegrams between them in regard to the work of the joint preparatory committee on Philippine affairs which is engaged in an effort to find a mutually satisfactory solution of the problems of future economic relationships between the United States and the Philippines.

"On March 22 President Roosevelt telegraphed President Quezon an expression of his feeling that the work of the committee should be pressed to an early and mutually satisfactory conclusion. The president recalled he already had made publicly known his own readiness, with a view to affording the Philippines ample opportunity to adjust their economy to a non-preferential status and political independence, to approve a general plan by which elimination of trade preferences would proceed by uniform annual accretions of five per cent to 25 per cent on the date of independence but he indicated that except for certain alleviations which he understood the committee would be prepared to recommend, the export tax provision of the Independence Act should remain substantially intact as constituting a necessary part of the program of Philippine economic adjustment.

"The President furthermore suggested that President Quezon join with him in making public their common desire to have the committee proceed along those lines with a view to reaching an agreement upon recommendations which would have the wholehearted support of both sides.

"In a telegram dated March 25, President Quezon replied he was sending to the Filipino members of the joint preparatory committee a radiogram to the effect he had, after considering all the attending circumstances, come to the definite conclusion that the best interests of the Philippines would be promoted by their concurring with the American members of the committee in the plan outlined in the president's telegram."

WASHINGTON, April 6.—President Roosevelt's assumption of active leadership in formulation of a Philippine-American economic program put the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs over its highest hurdle today.

A radio agreement between Mr. Roosevelt and President Manuel L. Quezon guaranteed the formation of a unanimous committee report soon and paved the way toward fulfillment of the U. S. president's plan to give the Philippines a 14-year economic transition period to set its business house in order after independence.

The plan was for the "Elimination of trade preferences... by uniform annual accretions of five per cent (duty on Philippine goods shipped to the United States) from 25 per cent at the date of independence."

President Roosevelt's leadership indicated his strong intention to keep economic relations from partisan controversy.

Observers understood the two presidents concurred in a desire to establish a sound economic basis for effective independence in 1946, before involvement in subsequent discussion of the projected re-examination of political relations.

The interchange of views resulted in solution of a troublesome committee deadlock and removed the possibility the experts might submit a divided report which might be used as a political football either in the Philippines or the United States.

Some officials intimated the presidential concurrence on this program within the framework of the Tydings-McDuffie Independence Act did not affect the possible advocacy by either executive of U. S. High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's plan for realistic re-examination of political relations.

They pointed out, however, that Mr. McNutt's suggestion was aimed at modification of the present political basis of Philippine-American relations on which the joint commission's report must necessarily be based.

Mr. Roosevelt evidently wished for an entirely separate economic program from any report—to be submitted next session to both Congress and the National Assembly at Manila as a non-partisan economic finding bearing the broad endorsement of both the Philippines and American chief executives.

Insular sources believed President Quezon was convinced a non-controversial committee report was the only solution of the present situation in view of the impending discussion of political relations.

Informed persons said the Filipino experts undoubtedly conceded the most for the settlement. But the Americans face the major task in securing Congressional approval, hence they required minor concessions.

Informed quarters confirmed the committee's report will be finished soon. It was understood Chairman John Van A. MacMurray will start for Turkey sometime next month to resume full-time duties as ambassador.

HIGHLIGHTS OF JPC'S RECOMMENDATIONS

The joint committee was constituted on April 14, 1937, by an arrangement between the president of the United States and the president of the Philippines for the purpose of studying trade relations between the Philippines and the United States and making recommendations as to means of terminating existing trade preferences on the earliest practicable date consistent with affording the Philippines a reasonable opportunity to adjust its national economy.

The American members of the committee were appointed by the president of the United States upon recommendation of the inter-departmental committee on Philippine affairs, and the Philippine members were appointed by the president of the Philippines.

Sayre acted as chairman of this group until July 13, 1937, when Ambassador John Van A. MacMurray was detailed to act as chairman of the committee.

The basis of the plan underlying the recommendations of the committee is that instead of assessing the full tariff duties on each other's products in 1946 the two countries will then assess 25 per cent of their prevailing rates of duty and thereafter annually increase the rates 5 per cent of the prevailing duties until complete elimination of the preferences is brought about at the year 1960.

The Report recommends substantially:

FIRST.—Political independence for the Philippines in 1946 (July 4), as provided in the Tydings-McDuffie Act.

SECOND.—Complete economic independence in 1961, as advocated by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

THIRD.—Retention, with slight alleviations, of the graduated export tax provisions of the Independence Act as a necessary part of attaining economic independence for the Islands.

FOURTH.—Gradual elimination of Philippine trade preferences in the United States market by increasing the export taxes five per centum annually.

FIFTH.—The Commonwealth to use the $40,000,000.00 annual refunds on coconut oil imports for "readjustment of Philippine economy" in accordance with the committee's recommendations.

SIXTH.—Diversification of Philippine agriculture and the establishment of the long-range industrialization program to utilize native man-power and products in developing new industries to supplant present imports. This program will emphasize the development of such Philippine industries as textiles, candy, tobacco, cordage, dairy, canning, poultry, soap, patent medicines, and distilling industries utilizing surplus coconut oil, sugar, etc., in setting up new home manufactures.

SEVENTH.—The Commonwealth to continue to use all tax refunds from the United States (including those on coconut oil and sugar) for adjustment to economic independence; and EIGHTH.—To authorize the United States government to suspend the refund if the funds are used for other purposes.

INTRODUCTION

1. ORGANIZATION AND PURPOSE OF THE COMMITTEE

The Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs was created on April 14, 1937, pursuant to an arrangement between the President of the United States and the President of the Philippines. The functions of the Committee were announced on March 18, 1937, in the following joint statement of President Manuel L. Quezon and the Honorable Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State:

Arrangements are being made for the appointment shortly of a joint preparatory committee of American and Philippine experts. The committee is to study trade relations between the United States and the Philippines and to recommend a program for the adjustment of Philippine national economy. This announcement followed conferences between President Quezon, of the Philippine Commonwealth, and the Interdepartmental Committee on Philippine Affairs, which is acting on behalf of President Roosevelt in the preliminary discussions. Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre is Chairman of this Committee.

In as much as the Independence Act provides that complete political independence of the Philippines shall become effective on July 4, 1946, and in as much as Pres. Quezon has suggested that the date of independence might be advanced to 1938 or 1939, it was agreed that the joint committee of experts would be expected in making its recommendations to consider the bearing which an advancement in the date of independence would have on facilitating or retarding the execution of a program of economic adjustment in the Philippines. It was further agreed that preferential trade relations between the United States and the Philippines are to be terminated at the earliest practicable date consistent with affording the Philippines a reasonable opportunity to adjust their national economy. Thereafter, it is contemplated that trade relations between the two countries will be regulated in accordance with a reciprocal trade agreement on a non-preferential basis.¹

The American members of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs were appointed by the President of the United States and the Philippine members by the President of the Philippines. The Honorable Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, acted as Chairman of the Committee until July 13, 1937, when the Honorable J. V. A. MacMurray, Ambassador to Turkey, was appointed Chairman.

The membership of the Committee as originally constituted on April 14, 1937, was as follows:

The Honorable José Yulo, Vice Chairman of the Committee, Chairman of the Phil-

¹ Department of State Press Release dated Mar. 18, 1937.

The Chairman and Members of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs in session.

Philippine Group, Secretary of Justice of the Philippine Commonwealth;

Mr. Joseph E. Jacobs, Vice Chairman of the Committee, Chairman of the American Group, Chief of the Office of Philippine Affairs, Department of State;

Dean Conrado Benitez, College of Business Administration, University of the Philippines;

Mr. Louis Domeratzky, Chief of the Division of Regional Information, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce;

Dr. Lynn R. Edminster, Chief Economic Analyst, Division of Trade Agreements, Department of State;

Mr. Joaquin M. Elizalde, Member of the Philippine National Economic Council;

Colonel Donald C. McDonald, Assistant to the Chief, Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department;

The Honorable Quintin Paredes, Resident Commissioner for the Philippines;

Dr. Carl B. Robbins, Head Agricultural Economist, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Department of Agriculture;

The Honorable José E. Romero, Floor Leader, Majority Party in the Philippine National Assembly;

The Honorable Manuel Roxas, Floor Leader, Minority Party in the Philippine National Assembly; and

Dr. Frank A. Waring, Chief Economic Analyst, United States Tariff Commission.

Subsequently, two members of the Committee, Dr. Lynn R. Edminster and Dean Conrado Benitez, because of the pressure of other duties, resigned. They were replaced by two new appointees who, prior to their appointment, had been advisers to the Committee, namely:

Dr. Ben D. Dorfman, Chief Economic Analyst, United States Tariff Commission, appointed alternate for Dr. Edminster on July 14, 1937, and a member on January 19, 1938; and

Mr. Benito Razon, Financial Adviser to the President of the Philippines, appointed January 27, 1938.

The Committee has been assisted in its work at different times and for varying periods by a number of advisers and others, namely: Dr. Ben D. Dorfman and Mr. Benito Razón, who subsequently became members of the Committee, as mentioned above; Major Myron J. Conway, Infantry, United States Army; Mr. Owen L. Dawson, United States Agricultural Commissioner at Shanghai; Mr. William A. Lloyd, Senior Agriculturist, Department of Agriculture; Dr. George F. Luthringer, Assistant Professor in Economics, Princeton University; Dr. Julius Matz, Pathologist, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture; Lieutenant Colonel Arsenio Natividad of the Philippine Army; Dr. Lloyd P. Rice, Professor of Economics, Dartmouth College; and Mr. Hilarion S. Silayan, Chief of the Philippine Bureau of Plant Industry. In addition, the Committee was assisted in various ways by numerous other individuals connected with the administrative departments of the Government of the United States and the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

In connection with its works, the Committee conducted public hearings in Washington (June 16, 17, 18, 22, and 23, 1937), in San Francisco (July 21 and 22, 1937), and in Manila (September 15, 16, 17, 20, 21, and 22, 1937). Briefs were filed not only by those who appeared at the public hearings but also by other interested parties. The transcript of the public hearings and texts of the briefs filed will be found in volumes II and III of this report. During its three months stay in the Philippines¹ the Committee spent about a month visiting 34 of the 50 provinces and covered approximately 4,000 miles, by motorcar, steamer, and railway.

The findings and conclusions of the Committee are discussed in parts II, III, IV, V, and VI, and its principal recommendations are set forth in part VII, of the Report.

2. POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE PHILIPPINES²

The United States acquired sovereignty over the Philippines under article III of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, concluded at Paris on December 10, 1898, and proclaimed April 11, 1899. The United States began the organization of a civil government in the Philippines with the appointment, on April 7, 1900, of the Second Philippine Commission, composed of five Americans. Civil government was fully established on July 4, 1901, when the Honorable William Howard Taft was inaugurated as the first Civil Governor³ of the Philippine Islands, and the Commission was reconstituted to consist of five Americans and three Filipinos.

On October 16, 1907, when the first elective Philippine Assembly was convened, the legislative authority in the Islands was placed in the hands of the Philippine Legislature, which consisted of the Commission as the upper house and the Assembly as the lower house. The Commission was abolished by the Jones act of August 29, 1916,⁴ which provided for a Philippine Senate as the upper house in the Legislature; thus placing legislative functions completely in the hands of the representatives of the Filipino people. The Governor-General remained the chief executive officer of the Insular Government.

On November 15, 1935, the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, possessing almost complete autonomy in internal affairs, was inaugurated under authority of the Independence Act of March 24, 1934 (the Tydings-McDuffie act).⁶ On the same date a Constitution, drafted and adopted by the Filipino people and approved by the President of the United States, came into full effect. Under the provisions of the Constitution, the legislative authority was placed in the hands of a unicameral legislature, known as the National Assembly, and executive power was vested in the President of the Philippines. Under the Independence Act, the representative of the United States in the Philippines was entitled the "United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands."

Since the earliest days of the American occupation, there has been a progressive enlargement of the autonomy granted to the Philippines, with complete political independence as the ultimate objective. In contrast to this development in the political sphere, the economic ties, based on trade preferences, have steadily become stronger.

From August 13, 1898, until March 8, 1902, trade between the United States and the Philippines was on a non-preferential basis. Under the act of March 8, 1902,⁷ Philippine products were accorded a reduction of 25 percent from rates specified in the United States tariffs, but no preferences were accorded American products entering the Philippines until after the passage of the United States Tariff Act⁸ and the Philippine Tariff Act,⁹ both dated August 5, 1909. That legislation marked the beginning of free trade between the two countries, subject only to minor restrictions. Reciprocally preferential trade would not have been possible prior to that year because of a provision in the Treaty of Paris which guaranteed for a 10-year period (commencing April 11, 1899) to Spanish ships and merchandise entering the Philippines the same treatment accorded those of the United States. The United States Tariff Act of October 3, 1913, removed the few remaining restrictions on free trade between the Philippines and the United States. Thereafter no important change occurred in the laws governing trade relationship until the passage of the Independence Act on March 24, 1934.

The Independence Act, while imposing no restrictions upon United States products entering the Philippines, placed restrictions upon the quantities of Philippine sugar, coconut oil, and cordage which could enter the United States free of duty; it required, in addition, the imposition by the Philippines, beginning November 15, 1940, of export taxes upon Philippine products shipped to the United States; and it provided that upon the attainment of independence, Philippine products should pay the full United States customs duties. The act also provided for a trade conference to make recommendations concerning trade relations after independence. Following the passage of the Independence Act, other restrictions in the form of excise taxes and quotas were placed on sugar and coconut products, but the proceeds of these taxes have been and are being remitted to the Philippine Government.¹⁰ The provision in the Independence Act with regard to cordage was superseded by the Cordage Act of June 14, 1935,¹¹ which although it increased the duty-free quota, made it an absolute quota.

3. OBJECTIONS TO THE PROVISIONS OF THE INDEPENDENCE ACT

Section 17 of the Independence Act provided that the act was not to take effect until accepted by concurrent resolution of the Philippine Legislature. Although the act did not authorize the Philippine Legislature to make its acceptance conditional upon reservations, that body, in its resolution of May 1, 1934, accepting the Independence Act, included the following passages:

"WHEREAS, although the Philippine Legislature believes that certain provisions of the said Act need further consideration, the said Legislature deems it its duty to accept the proffer of independence thus made by the Government of the United States; . . .

(b) And because the President of the United States in his message to Congress on March second, nineteen hundred thirty-four, recommending the enactment of the said law, stated:

"I do not believe that further provisions of the original law¹² need to be changed at this time. Where imperfections or inequalities exist, I am confident that both can be corrected after proper hearing and in fairness to both peoples."

a statement which gives the Filipino people reasonable assurances of further hearing and due consideration of their view;¹³ . . .

Provisions in the earlier Hare-Hawes-Cutting act, to which the Philippine Legislature had taken exception in rejecting that act, and which it had hoped to have changed in the Tydings-McDuffie act, related to "immigration, military, and other reservations, powers of the high commissioner, and trade relations between the Islands and the United States."¹⁴

With regard to the Independence Act, the Honorable Manuel L. Quezon, then President of the Philippine Senate and Chairman of the Philippine Independence Delegation, in a letter dated March 22, 1934 (two days before the passage of the act), to the Chairman of the United States Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, Senator Millard E. Tydings, stated as follows:

There are, of course, other provisions of the bill to which we object, but we are willing to take it as it is now, and we have given up any attempt at this time to have it in any way amended, because we are relying upon the statement made by the President in his message to Congress, March 2, 1934. . . .

Furthermore, we have seen the attitude of the chairmen of both committees of Congress toward the Filipino people's freedom and welfare, and we have no doubt that upon further investigation, when they shall have found that independence can be granted in a much shorter time and that other provisions of the bill need improvement, they will so recommend to the Congress.¹⁵

Moreover, Vice President John N. Garner, in his speech at the Joint Session of the Philippine Legislature on November 12, 1935 (three days before the inauguration of the Commonwealth Government), stated:

Our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in sending the last independence bill to Congress, accompanied it with a recommendation that where there were inequalities in our trade relations, they should be adjusted by a Commission representing both peoples who could arrive at an equitable decision which would prove advantageous to our 120,000,000 people and to your 14,000,000 people.¹⁶

The statements quoted evidence a recognition by responsible authorities in both countries that certain "imperfections or inequalities" might be found in the Independence Act, and, if so, that they should be adjusted.

STEPS TAKEN TO REMOVE OBJECTIONS

In the light of these statements, steps were taken, even before the inauguration of the Commonwealth Government, to investigate what, if any, "imperfections or inequalities" there might be in the provisions of the Independence Act. United States Senator Carl Hayden visited the Philippines and prepared a report of his findings in the form of a letter, dated August 6, 1934, addressed to the Honorable Millard E. Tydings, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.¹⁷ Four others, United States Senators Tydings, McKellar, McAdoo, and Gibson, appointed on June 16, 1934, as a special committee to study the question of "imperfections or inequalities" of the Independence Act, also visited the Philippines for about three weeks, beginning December 9, 1934; as a result of which, Senator McKellar and Senator Gibson submitted reports to the United States Senate.¹⁸

ORGANIZATION OF THE INTERDEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEE ON PHILIPPINE AFFAIRS

The Congressional Committee referred to in the preceding paragraph, while in the Philippines, suggested to President Roosevelt in a telegram dated December 31, 1934, that the Interdepartmental Committee on Philippine Affairs, which was then in the process of being organized, should study United States-Philippine trade. The Interdepartmental Committee has, since the close of the year 1934, directed studies of Philippine problems in an endeavor to coordinate the activities of the various administrative departments and agencies of the United States Government concerned with Philippine affairs. The Committee is not an administrative organization of the Government, but representatives of the Departments of State, War, Navy, Treasury, Agriculture and Commerce, and the Tariff Commission have participated in its deliberations. It was this committee that recommended the setting up of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs.

STEPS TAKEN IN PREPARATION FOR A TRADE CONFERENCE

On April 4, 1935, at a meeting which was attended by the Honorable Frank Murphy, then Governor-General of the Philippines, the Interdepartmental Committee decided to recommend to the President of the United States that he should make public his intention to call a Philippine-American trade conference as soon as practicable after the inauguration of the Commonwealth Government. Acting upon this recommendation, the President, on April 10, 1935, made public the following letter:

MY DEAR GOVERNOR-GENERAL:

As you know, consideration is being given by this Government to the question of future relations between the United States and the Philippines. These relations have been the subject of conferences which you and I have had during your visit in Washington. As a result of these discussions I contemplate calling the joint trade conference provided for in section 13 of the Tydings-McDuffie act at as early a date as practicable after the inauguration of the Commonwealth Government, in order that effective measures for promoting mutual trade advantages between the two countries may be given early consideration.

To facilitate the work of the conference I have asked our Interdepartmental Committee to continue studies already begun so that the necessary basic material will be available when the conference convenes. I trust you will also be able to inaugurate similar studies in the Philippine Islands which will provide pertinent data, for consideration by the conference.

Sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

REPORT OF THE UNITED STATES TARIFF COMMISSION

In keeping with the President's announcement, the Interdepartmental Committee, on July 13, 1935, designated three experts to prepare material for the contemplated trade conference: Dr. Frank A. Waring and Dr. Ben D. Dorfman, Senior Economic Analysts of the United States Tariff Commission, and Mr. J. Bartlett Richards, U. S. Trade Commissioner in Manila. As a result of their studies, the United States Tariff Commission, in January, 1937, published a report under the title "United States-Philippine Trade, with Special Reference to the Philippine Independence Act and Other Recent Legislation."¹⁹ This material has been freely drawn upon by the Joint Preparatory Committee for incorporation in the present Report.

PHILIPPINE TECHNICAL TRADE COMMITTEE'S REPORT

While studies were being conducted by officials of the United States Government, similar preparations were also being carried on in the Philippines. The Governor-General of the Philippines, on July 9, 1935, appointed for this purpose the Philippine Interdepartmental Economic Committee, and a Technical Trade Committee under the chairmanship of Mr. Benito Razón.²⁰ The Technical Trade Committee created under this Executive order submitted to the President of the Commonwealth on February 17, 1936, a report on Philippine-American trade. This report has also been used by the Joint Preparatory Committee.

ORGANIZATION OF THE JOINT PREPARATORY COMMITTEE ON PHILIPPINE AFFAIRS

In December 1936, on the eve of relinquishing his post, High Commissioner Frank Murphy came to Washington to discuss with the President and other officials of the United States Government plans for a reconsideration of the United States-Philippine relations. Following these discussions, President Quezon arrived in Washington in February 1937; and, at the request of the President of the United States, entered into discussions of United States-Philippine problems with the Honorable Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State and Chairman of the Interdepartmental Committee on Philippine Affairs. These discussions led to an agreement between President Quezon and Assistant Secretary Sayre, which was later approved by President Roosevelt, that a committee, to be known as the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs, should be created to study trade relations between the United States and the Philippines and to recommend a program for the adjustment of the Philippine national economy. This committee was constituted on April 14, 1937. Certain details in regard to the setting up of the Committee and the nature of its duties will be found in an identic letter which Assistant Secretary of State Sayre addressed on May 24, 1937, to Senator Millard E. Tydings and Congressman Leo Kocialkowski.²¹

4. COMMITTEE'S TERMS OF REFERENCE ²²

In its approach to the question of the trade relations between the United ¹⁹ United States Tariff Commission Report No. 188, second series, 1937.

²⁰ Philippine Executive Order No. 786 of July 9, 1935.

²¹ See appendix II.

²² The Committee's terms of reference did not contemplate recommendations with respect to such questions as the postponement of independence, the neutralization of the Philippines, and the retention or relinquishment of naval reservations.

States and the Philippines and the adjustment of Philippine economy, the Committee has followed certain principles, both of guidance and of circumscription, which were laid down in the Independence Act of March 24, 1934, and in the agreement of March 18, 1937, between President Quezon and Assistant Secretary Sayre quoted on the first page of this part of the Report.

From an early stage in the discussions with their Philippine colleagues, the American members had also in mind a suggestion of President Roosevelt that an orderly transition of Philippine economy might require a considerable period for adjustment—a suggestion which, in the course of discussion, was eventually elaborated into the Committee's recommendation for a gradual elimination of trade preferences by the end of the year 1960, as approved in an exchange of telegrams between President Roosevelt and President Quezon in March, 1938.¹¹

Fundamental among those principles upon which the Committee has acted is an acceptance of the fact that the Independence Act is a definite mandate of the Congress providing for the independence of the Philippines and outlining the terms under which such independence is to be attained. The provisions of that act were under discussion in the Congress for several years; and the Committee has studied and considered the voluminous hearings which led up to the enactment of that law. The Committee has felt that it would not be justified, either by its terms of reference or on the ground of practical expediency, in recommending any changes in that act except such as might be required to remove "imperfections or inequalities" in the sense in which President Roosevelt used that expression in his message to the Congress on March 2, 1934.

The Committee has also been guided by the fact that its terms of reference definitely contemplate that the termination of the preferential trade relationship now existing between the United States and the Philippines should be brought about at the earliest practicable date, consistent with affording the Philippines a reasonable opportunity to adjust their economy to a position independent of trade preferences in the United States.

A further dominant consideration which the Committee has had in mind is the imperative need for stability and certainty as to the nature of the policies of the United States and the Philippines in regard to their future economic relationship, and as to the method of effectuating those policies. In the absence of a reasonable degree of certainty in this regard, various groups, both in the United States and in the Philippines, may be expected to continue agitating for changes favorable to themselves in the relationship between the two countries. Until the future economic relationship between the two countries is definitely determined, there will be no satisfactory basis for the continued economic development

"On March 22, President Roosevelt telegraphed to President Quezon an expression of his feeling that the work of the Committee should be pressed to an early and mutually satisfactory conclusion. The President recalled that he had already made publicly known his own readiness, with a view to affording the Philippines ample opportunity to adjust their economy to the non-preferential status of political independence, to approve of a general plan by which the elimination of trade preferences would proceed by uniform annual accretions of 5 percent from 25 percent at the date of independence; but he indicated that, except for certain alleviations which he understood the Committee would be prepared to recommend, the export tax provisions of the Independence Act should remain substantially intact as constituting a necessary part of the program of Philippine economic adjustment. The President furthermore suggested that President Quezon join with him in making public their common desire to have the Committee proceed along these lines with a view to reaching an early agreement upon recommendations which would have the whole-hearted support of both sides."

"In a telegram dated March 23, President Quezon replied that he was sending to the Filipino members of the Joint Preparatory Committee a radiogram to the effect that he had, after considering all the attending circumstances, come to the definite conclusion that the best interests of the Philippines would be promoted by their concurring with the American members of the Committee in the plan outlined in the President's telegram."

of the Philippines, in as much as the Philippine authorities would find it difficult to undertake the task of planning and putting into operation a long-range program of economic adjustment which is so necessary for the future well-being of their country.

The Committee recognizes the difficulties of foreseeing and evaluating the national and international economic developments that will affect the United States and the Philippines during the period contemplated by this Report, and of prescribing practical solutions for the problems involved in the development of an independent Philippine state. But the situation requires that, despite unpredictable factors, some long-range plan, however broad and general in outline, should be definitely adopted. The Committee believes that the program which it recommends would eliminate much of the existing uncertainty and afford the Philippines a reasonable opportunity to make the necessary transition.

Part VII

RECOMMENDATIONS AND THEIR EFFECTUATION

RECOMMENDATIONS

The principal recommendations of the Committee are as follows:

TRADE RELATIONS

Commonwealth Period—November 15, 1935, to July 4, 1946

A. General provisions:

1. During the Commonwealth period all Philippine products (except as specified below under B, 1 and 2) should be admitted into the United States free of duty, and all United States products should be admitted into the Philippines free of duty.
2. Beginning January 1, 1941, the Philippine Government should levy and collect for the account of the Philippine Treasury export taxes equivalent to 5 percent of the then-existing United States duties on all Philippine products exported to the United States (except as specified below under B, 1). These export taxes should be increased by an additional 5 percent on January 1, 1942, and on each January 1 thereafter, until on January 1, 1945, they should be equal to 25 percent of the then-existing United States duties.¹²

B. Quota provisions to govern shipments to the United States:

1. Quotas not subject to the export tax:
 - (a) An annually declining duty-free quota, commencing with 200,000,000 cigars for the calendar year 1940, should be imposed upon imports of Philippine cigars into the United States. This quota should be free from export taxes, and should be reduced by 5 percent of the initial amount for each succeeding calendar year, until it equals 150,000,000 cigars for the calendar year 1945. For the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quota should be one half of the quota for the preceding year, or 75,000,000 cigars. Shipments in excess of the aforementioned quotas should also be free from export taxes but subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.

¹² Upon the recognition of the independence of the Philippines on July 4, 1946, export taxes will no longer be required by the United States.

- (b) An annually declining duty-free quota, commencing with 4,500,000 pounds for the calendar year 1940, should be imposed upon imports of Philippine scrap tobacco, cigar-ends, and stripped filler tobacco into the United States. This quota should be free from export taxes, and should be reduced by 5 percent of the initial amount for each succeeding calendar year, until it equals 3,375,000 pounds for the calendar year 1945. For the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quota should be one half of the quota for the preceding year, or 1,687,500 pounds. Shipments in excess of the aforementioned quotas should also be free from export taxes but subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.
- (c) An annually declining duty-free quota, commencing with 200,000 long tons for the calendar year 1940, should be imposed upon imports of Philippine coconut oil into the United States. This quota should be free from export taxes, and should be reduced by 5 percent of the initial amount for each succeeding calendar year, until it equals 150,000 long tons for the calendar year 1945. For the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quota should be one half of the quota for the preceding year, or 75,000 long tons. Shipments in excess of the aforementioned quotas should also be free from export taxes but subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.
- (d) An annually declining duty-free quota, commencing with 850,000 gross for the calendar year 1940, should be imposed upon imports of Philippine pearl buttons into the United States. This quota should be free from export taxes, and should be reduced by 5 percent of the initial amount for each succeeding calendar year until it equals 637,500 gross for the calendar year 1945. For the period January 1, 1946, through July 3, 1946, the quota should be one half of the quota for the preceding year, or 318,750 gross. Shipments in excess of the aforementioned quotas should also be free from export taxes but subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.
2. Quotas subject to the export tax:
- (a) An annual quota of 850,000 long tons, commercial value in any calendar year, should be imposed upon imports of Philippine sugar into the United States, of which quota not more than 50,000 long tons, commercial value, may be refined sugar. Shipments in excess of the quota should be free from export taxes but subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.
- (b) Upon expiration of the Cordage Acts ¹² on May 1, 1941, an annual quota of 6,000,000 pounds, in any calendar year, should be imposed upon imports into the United States of Philippine cordage, exclusive of binder twine. Shipments in excess of the quota should be free from export taxes but subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.

C. Special provisions:

1. Export taxes on shipments to the United States of Philippine embroideries made of cloth which is the product of the United States should be assessed on the basis of the dutiable value as provided in the United States Tariff Act of 1930, less the cost (c.i.f. the Philippines) of the cloth embodied in such embroideries.
2. Abaca and copra should be bound free of United States duty.
3. The allocation of all quotas recommended in this report should be based on formulae already provided by law or, in the absence of any formulae, on the following basis: the annual quotas should be allocated among the manufacturers whose products were exported in 1937, on the basis of the proportion which each manufacturer's maximum production shipped to the United States (either directly or through others)

in any calendar year during the five-year period, 1933-37, bears to the total of such maximum shipments of all manufacturers.¹⁴ The administration of the allocation of these quotas should be effected for Philippine exports in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Government of the Philippines.

4. The Philippine Government should agree to increase its import duties on evaporated milk, canned fish, and cotton textiles, as provided in appendix III.

Period of Tariff Preferences After Independence—July 4, 1946, Through December 31, 1960

A. General provisions:

1. On and after July 4, 1946, the Philippine Government should levy and collect on all United States products imported into the Philippines, except as specified below under B, 25 percent of the then-existing Philippine duties. This rate should be increased by 5 percent on each succeeding January 1, until January 1, 1961, when the full Philippine duties should be collected and all preferences terminated.
2. On and after July 4, 1946, the United States Government should levy and collect on all Philippine products imported into the United States, except as specified below under B, 25 percent of the then-existing United States duties.¹⁵ This rate should be increased by 5 percent on each succeeding January 1, until January 1, 1961, when the full United States duties should be collected and all preferences terminated.

B. Quota provisions:

1. Declining duty-free quotas:

- (a) For the period July 4, 1946, through December 31, 1946, a duty-free quota of 75,000,000 cigars should be imposed upon imports of Philippine cigars into the United States. The duty-free quota of 150,000,000 cigars imposed for the calendar year 1945 should be reduced by 10,000,000 cigars (i.e., 5 percent of the initial quota of 200,000,000 cigars) for the calendar year 1947 and by the same amount for each succeeding calendar year, until 1961. Shipments in excess of the aforementioned quotas should be subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.
- (b) For the period July 4, 1946, through December 31, 1946, a duty-free quota of 1,687,500 pounds should be imposed upon imports of Philippine scrap tobacco, cigar-ends, and stripped filler tobacco into the United States. The duty-free quota of 3,375,000 pounds imposed for the calendar year 1945 should be reduced by 225,000 pounds (i.e., 5 percent of the initial quota of 4,500,000 pounds) for the calendar year 1947, and by the same amount for each succeeding calendar year, until 1961. Shipments in excess of the aforementioned quotas should be subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.
- (c) For the period July 4, 1946, through December 31, 1946, a duty-free quota of 75,000 long tons should be imposed upon imports of Philippine coconut oil into

¹⁴ For example, assuming that the quota for a given commodity is fixed at 800 units:

Manufacturers	Maximum production shipped to the United States during 1933-1937	Share of total
	Units	Percent	Quota
A	200 (1933)	25	160
B	300 (1935)	38	240
C	300 (1937)	38	240
Total	800	100	800

¹⁵ It is expected that the Philippine Government will pass necessary legislation after independence, to provide for the remission of export taxes collected on shipments to the United States made prior to July 4, 1946, provided such shipments arrive in the United States after that date and thereby become subject to United States import duties. In the absence of such legislation, Philippine exports to the United States would, for a limited period, be subject to both Philippine export taxes and United States import duties.

the United States. The duty-free quota of 150,000 long tons imposed for the calendar year 1945 should be reduced by 10,000 tons (i.e., 5 percent of the initial quota of 200,000 tons) for the calendar year 1947 and by the same amount for each succeeding calendar year, until 1961. Shipments in excess of quotas should be subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.

(d) For the period July 4, 1946, through December 31, 1946, a duty-free quota of 318,750 gross should be imposed upon imports of Philippine pearl buttons into the United States. The duty-free quota of 637,500 gross imposed for the calendar year 1945 should be reduced by 42,500 gross (i.e., 5 percent of the initial quota of 850,000 gross) for the calendar year 1947 and by the same amount for each succeeding calendar year until 1961. Shipments in excess of quotas should be subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.

(e) For the period July 4, 1946, through December 31, 1946, a duty-free quota of 1,125,000,000 cigarettes should be imposed upon imports of United States cigarettes into the Philippines. For the calendar year 1947 a duty-free quota of 2,100,000,000 cigarettes should be imposed, which quota should be reduced by 150,000,000 cigarettes (i.e., 5 percent of 3,000,000,000 cigarettes, which was the approximate number shipped to the Philippines in 1937) for each succeeding calendar year, until 1961. Shipments in excess of quotas should be subject to whatever Philippine duty may be in force at the time.

2. Quotas subject to declining tariff preferences:

(a) The quota imposed during the Commonwealth period upon imports of Philippine sugar into the United States should be continued. Sugar entering under this quota should be subject to the progressive import duties provided for above under A, 2. Imports in excess of the quota should be subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.

(b) The quota imposed during the Commonwealth period, after the expiration of the Cordage Act, upon imports of Philippine cordage into the United States should be continued. Cordage entering under this quota should be subject to the progressive import duties provided for above under A, 2. Imports in excess of the quota should be subject to whatever United States duty may be in force at the time.

C. Special Provisions:

1. In the assessment of progressive import duties, the dutiable value of imports into the United States of Philippine embroideries made of cloth which is the product of the United States should be the dutiable value as provided in the United States Tariff Act of 1930, less the cost (c.i.f. the Philippines) of the cloth embodied in such embroideries.
2. After the independence of the Philippines is recognized by the United States on July 4, 1946, the United States excise-tax rate applicable to coconut oil, from whatever source derived, should be no higher than the rate applicable to palm oil (except for use in making tin plate) or to palm-kernel oil.
3. The allocation of all quotas recommended in this report should be based on formulae already provided by law or, in the absence of any formulae, on the following basis: The annual quotas should be allocated among the manufacturers whose products were exported in 1937, on the basis of the proportion which each manufacturer's maximum production shipped to the United States (either directly or through others) in any calendar year during the 5-year period, 1933-37, bears to the total of such maximum shipments of all manufacturers.¹⁰ The administration of the allocation of these quotas should be effected for Philippine exports, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Government of the Philippines, and for United States exports, in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the Government of the United States.

4. Products of the Philippines shipped to the United States and manufactured into articles which are later exported to the Philippines should be subject to a drawback of the United States preferential duties paid on such Philippine products.
5. Products of the United States shipped to the Philippines and manufactured into articles which are later exported to the United States should be subject to a drawback of the Philippine preferential duty paid on such United States products, without thereby becoming subject to the then-existing full United States duties.
6. The recommendations of the Committee with respect to United States-Philippine trade relations after independence should be incorporated in a treaty to become effective July 4, 1946, and to continue in effect through December 31, 1960, subject to denunciation upon two years' notice at any time after July 4, 1953. The negotiation of such a treaty should be undertaken as soon as practicable.

A. Revenues and Expenditures:

1. During the Commonwealth period, the proceeds of any United States excise taxes on sugar and coconut products of Philippine origin should be covered into a special fund in the Treasury of the United States, to be paid over to the Treasury of the Philippines, primarily for the purpose of financing the adjustment of Philippine economy to a position independent of preferences in the United States market: Provided, That the President of the United States may direct the Treasury of the United States to withhold or discontinue remittances in the event that the funds should, in his opinion, be appropriated or expended for purposes which would seriously prejudice the realization of the objective set forth above.
2. In as much as the proceeds of the excise taxes referred to in the preceding paragraph are of an extraordinary nature for a temporary period, the Philippine Government should adopt a general policy of not using these proceeds in substitution for ordinary government revenues.
3. In connection with the formulation of the long-range economic-adjustment program suggested in part IV of this Report, the Philippine Government should formulate plans for financing its adjustment program, the cost of which should be budgeted separately from other expenses, taking into consideration the need to provide funds to carry on the program after the date of independence when the extraordinary revenue now available and expected to be available only during the Commonwealth period shall have ceased.
4. In anticipation of the future financial requirements, not only of the Commonwealth Government but also of the independent government to be inaugurated on July 4, 1946, the Philippine Government should revise the existing Philippine revenue system, with a view to effecting a more equitable distribution of the tax burden, and in order to meet the increased expenditures that may be anticipated as a result of independence.

B. Bonded Indebtedness:

1. The Philippine Government should continue to set aside from its general fund the interest and sinking-fund charges now required by law in respect of that portion of the outstanding bonded indebtedness of the Philippines, its provinces, cities, and municipalities, incurred prior to May 1, 1934, under authority of acts of Congress, as is already provided in section 2 (b) (3) of the Independence Act. In addition, the proceeds of the export taxes required by section 6 (c) of the Independence Act should be deposited in a special account in the Treasury of the United States, to constitute a supplementary sinking-fund for the liquidation of this portion of the public debt, and to bear interest in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved June 11, 1934:¹⁷ Provided, That in accordance with the procedure now applicable to the handling of sinking-funds of the Philippine Government in the United States, this supplementary sinking-fund may be used to purchase Philippine bonds which were issued prior to May 1, 1934, under authority or acts of Congress.

2. During the three months preceding July 4, 1946, the Philippine Government and the Treasury of the United States should confer to ascertain that portion of the Philippine bonded indebtedness, referred to in the preceding paragraph, which would be outstanding after July 4, 1946; and, for that purpose, the Philippine Government should turn over to the Treasury of the United States, for custody pending ultimate destruction, all Philippine bonds issued prior to May 1, 1934, under authority of Acts of Congress, that may be held (canceled or uncanceled) in any of its sinking-funds. After such outstanding portion of this indebtedness is thus determined, and before July 4, 1946, unless some other arrangement shall have been made with the Government of the United States in regard to its liquidation, there should be set up in the Treasury of the United States, in the name of the independent government of the Philippines, from the sinking-funds mentioned in the preceding paragraph, a special trust fund in an amount sufficient to meet interest payments and to retire this outstanding portion of the Philippine debt at maturity (or earlier by the purchase of outstanding bonds upon request of the said independent government): Provided, That this outstanding portion of the Philippine debt should also be assumed by the said Government as and in the manner provided in section 2 (b) (3) and (5) of the Independence Act.
3. The Philippine Government should continue to set aside from its general fund the interest and sinking-fund charges now required by law in respect of all other debts and liabilities of the Philippines, its provinces, cities, and municipalities, not provided for in the two preceding paragraphs, as well as all debts and liabilities of its instrumentalities. All such debts and obligations outstanding on July 4, 1946, should be assumed by the independent government of the Philippines as and in the manner provided in section 2 (b) (3) and (5) of the Independence Act: Provided, That whenever prior to July 4, 1946, it becomes certain that there will be a surplus in the export-tax proceeds over the amount required for liquidating that portion of Philippine bonded indebtedness provided for in the two preceding paragraphs, the Treasury of the United States may, upon the request of the Philippine Government, use this surplus to purchase, for deposit in a special sinking-fund to be handed over to the independent government of the Philippines on July 4, 1946, any Philippine bonds that fall within the category described in the first sentence of this paragraph, and, Provided further, That any balance that may remain in the Treasury of the United States on July 4, 1946, from the proceeds of the export taxes after all actual or estimated claims upon these proceeds (as set forth in the two preceding paragraphs and in the first proviso of this paragraph) have been provided for, should be turned to the Treasury of the independent government of the Philippines to be placed in a sinking-fund to be used exclusively for the purpose of retiring the debts and liabilities referred to in this paragraph.

C. Currency:

1. During the Commonwealth period, the Philippine Government should continue without fundamental change the policy of maintaining the existing dollar exchange standard, at the present legal ratio of two pesos to the dollar.
2. The funds to be appropriated under the act of Congress of June 19, 1934,¹⁸ relating to Philippine currency reserves in the United States should remain on deposit in the Treasury of the United States during the Commonwealth period as a credit to the Philippine government, to be turned over to the independent Philippine Government in connection with the final settlement to be made regarding Philippine bonded indebtedness and monetary reserves held in the United States.

D. Banking:

In connection with other studies which the Committee has recommended should be made concerning matters of finance, the Philippine Government should undertake a study of the existing banking system of the Philippines.

ECONOMIC ADJUSTMENT

- A. The Philippine Government should adopt a long-range economic-adjustment program. This program should be formulated by a technical planning organization, semi-permanent in nature, non-administrative in character, and adequately staffed with competent technicians.
- B. The objectives of the economic-adjustment program should be not only to offset so far as possible the adverse effects of the discontinuance of existing trade preferences but also to increase the productivity, and thus the standard of living, of the people above the levels that would otherwise prevail.
- C. The economic-adjustment program should include projects for the improvement of technical training, transportation facilities, agriculture, manufacturing, tariff schedules, public revenue systems, health conditions, and the conservation of natural resources. (The general criteria which should be observed in selecting projects for the program, and the Committee's various recommendations and suggestions concerning certain projects, are set forth in part IV of this Report.)

RIGHTS AND INTERESTS

- A. The United States and the Philippines, in both legislative and administrative action, should adhere, during the Commonwealth period, to the policy of not curtailing the rights and privileges which citizens of the United States enjoyed in the Philippines, and which citizens of the Philippines enjoyed in the United States, prior to the inauguration of the Commonwealth Government.
- B. Arrangements should be made prior to July 4, 1946, for the adjustment and settlement of the property rights of the United States and the Philippines, referred to in section 2 (b) (1) of the Independence Act.
- C. Arrangements should be made prior to July 4, 1946, under which title to such properties as the United States may require for its official establishments in the Philippines after independence would either be retroceded to the United States without compensation, or be acquired by the United States through an exchange of properties.

EFFECTUATION OF RECOMMENDATIONS

If the Committee's recommendations are accepted, it will be necessary for both the United States and the Philippines to enact legislation to give effect to certain of the recomrecommendations applicable to the Commonwealth period, and to conclude a treaty or treaties to give effect to certain other recommendations applicable to the independence period beginning July 4, 1946. In addition to the need to negotiate a treaty or treaties for the aforementioned purpose, section 2 (a) and (b) of the Independence Act specifies a number of provisions which are to be embodied in a treaty. There are, moreover, a number of other matters for which provisions should be made by treaty. The great variety of subjects to be dealt with makes it appear advisable to conclude a series of treaties covering separate subjects. (See Appendix IX).

The Committee recommends, therefore, that negotiations with a view to concluding the necessary treaty or treaties be entered into with the Commonwealth Government prior to July 4, 1946, on the understanding that the exchange of ratifications shall take place, and the treaties become effective, on the day of the inauguration of the independent government. The Committee further recommends that the treaty embodying its recommendations concerning trade relations during the period beginning July 4, 1946, and ending with December 31, 1960, should be negotiated at the earliest practicable date, in order that the future trade relationship between the two countries may be definitely determined well in advance of independence. Such tend to ensure an orderly transition and a better opportunity for the adjustment of the Philippine national economy.

ANNUAL ECONOMIC REVIEW FOR 1938

By PAUL P. STEINTORF

American Trade Commissioner

Paul P. Steintorf

GENERAL

There was some recession in 1938 from the exceptional prosperity of the previous year. Conditions in the United States and other export markets were less satisfactory, while prices of Philippine products declined steadily, reaching new lows toward the end of the year. Despite these unfavorable conditions, economic activity was maintained at a fairly high level and most lines of business were moderately prosperous.

AGRICULTURE

Agricultural conditions were rather unsatisfactory. The rice crop was below normal for the second consecutive year. As a result, prices were rather high but the returns to the producers were not commensurate therewith. The sugar crop was normal but stocks were excessive and the price level unsatisfactory. Abaca had a rather poor year, with both production and exports falling sharply and with prices reaching new all time lows. Copra and other coconut products recorded substantial quantitative improvement in exports but prices were so low that returns to producers were unsatisfactory. The tobacco trade was featured by a rather marked decline in exports, although prices were fairly well maintained. It is believed that there was some improvement in minor agricultural products concerning which accurate information is not procurable. However, this improvement was hardly sufficient to offset the depression in the principal crops mentioned above, which represent the main source of livelihood of a large part of the population.

Some indication of the unsatisfactory level of agricultural prices may be secured from the fact that average prices of the four principal products, namely, sugar, rice, abaca and copra, were about 25 per cent lower than in either of the two preceding years. This must have had an adverse effect on general purchasing power and it is quite remarkable that there has not been a corresponding reduction in the volume of business. Apparently, the effects of these low prices have been minimized by heavy government expenditures for public works and other purposes. Contributing factors were the increase in mineral production and the building boom which helped cushion the shock and prevent a too rapid fall in buying power.

FINANCE

In general, government finance was satisfactory during 1938, with conservative financing and adequate reserves. However, the year recorded a decline of about eight per cent in general revenue, with a much larger drop in receipts from the United States excise taxes. Expenditures during the year showed a jump of about 20 per cent, this being attributed principally to the heavy government public works program. In consequence, there was a fairly substantial reduction in the government surplus, and it may be noted that commitments for 1939-40 will effect further reductions. The interim budget for the first half of 1938 and the detailed budget for the 1939-40 fiscal year have been prepared and are now under consideration. In general, both emphasize government economy and present a sound balance between income and expenditures.

* See Philippine Economic Conditions—Annual Report for 1938—by Former Trade Commissioner J. Bartlett Richards, pp. 667-662.

The money market showed an increasingly easy trend during 1938, with an average reduction of 10 per cent in discount rates. This condition is attributed to the cessation of gold stock speculation and to lower commodity prices. Loans, discounts and overdrafts showed substantial increases during the year.

Banking conditions were generally satisfactory, with most institutions reporting increased earnings and with a fair improvement in capital and surplus. Two new banks were organized during the year.

Transactions on local stock exchanges were reduced very substantially during 1938, this being a natural reaction from the heavy speculation of the previous year. At the beginning of the year, stock prices were very low but showed a gradual upward tendency, with the exception of two minor recessions, and average stock quotations reached a high for the year during the latter part of December.

Investments in corporations and partnerships declined rather sharply during 1938, this being attributed principally to the collapse of the mining boom. Total net investments for the year were about 50 per cent below 1937. The largest actual and relative decline was in mining, but other principal categories also dropped, the only exceptions being transportation and real estate.

Investments in bonds and debentures are a comparatively unimportant feature of the local financial situation. Such investments by banks showed a gain of about 15 per cent during 1938, while there were three public offerings of debentures with an aggregate value of ₱8,000,000.

INDUSTRY

There was very little progress during 1938 in the development of local industries. Activity was confined principally to government-owned corporations, particularly the National Development Company which has a very extensive program calling for eventual self-sufficiency with respect to various essential products. During the year, there was substantial progress on this company's food canning, can-making and textile plants, but none of these were in actual full-scale operation during 1938. Other activities of the corporation include the purchase of two local sugar refineries, with a view to eventual operation for the domestic market, and expansion of the facilities of the subsidiary Cebu Portland Cement Company, this program being scheduled for completion in March, 1939.

METALS AND MINERALS

During the year, the Philippine gold mining* industry emerged from the promotion stage and production was placed on a sound basis. Total output during the year gained about 25 per cent and profits of the leading producers were generally satisfactory. It is believed that production of other minerals also increased very materially, although no definite statistics are procurable. Available reports indicate very definite gains in output of iron, manganese, chromite, copper, lead and zinc ores.

TRANSPORTATION

In general, railway transportation appears to have been fairly satisfactory during 1938, although there was some decline in freight cargoes. Extensions of rail facilities were confined to projects previously planned and only one important addition was completed during the year.

Highway transportation recorded marked progress during the year under the stimulus of extensive road construction and improvement program. It is noted that there is a definite tendency to develop highway rather than rail transportation owing to lower cost and greater efficiency.

Marine transportation showed a definite improvement during 1938, with increases in both import and export cargoes. Inter-island services were improved and the trend of freight rates was generally downward, with indications of further reductions during the coming year.

There appears to have been very little progress in the development of air transport during the current year. Existing services were continued but there were no new developments and operations of existing lines were not particularly prosperous.

FOREIGN TRADE

Foreign trade in 1938 was featured by heavy increases in imports and even larger declines in exports, causing an unfavorable balance of merchandise trade for the first time since 1921. Total trade for the year amounted to ₱496,805,649, a decline of 4.6 per cent from 1937 but an increase over any preceding year since 1929.

Imports totaled ₱265,215,095, a gain of ₱47,163,605, or 21.6 per cent, over 1937 and the highest figure recorded since 1929. The increase in imports was very widely distributed, showing fairly substantial gains in every import commodity group, the largest actual gains on a value basis being in inedible vegetable products; textiles and manufactures; machinery and vehicles; chemicals; non-metallic minerals; metals and manufactures, except machinery; and foodstuffs. The largest gains by individual commodities were in tobacco products; cotton piece-goods; mineral oils; automobiles and trucks; wheat flour; printing paper; dairy products; miscellaneous cotton manufactures; and printed matter.

Exports during 1938 were valued at ₱231,590,554, a drop of ₱70,941,946, or 23 per cent, compared with 1937. This comparison is somewhat misleading, in that 1937 was an extremely good export year. Actually, imports during 1938 were only 2.5 per cent below the average for the preceding five years. The decline in the value of trade during the current year resulted almost entirely from the low prices of Philippine commodities. It is reasonably certain that the volume of exports during the year was little, if any, below 1937. Available figures show that all of the principal products, with the exception of abaca, increased in quantity during 1938 but declined sharply in value. Even in the case of abaca, the decline in value was much greater than in quantity. On a value basis, the largest declines were in abaca; coconut oil; centrifugal sugar; copra; desiccated coconut; refined sugar; maguey and timber.*

*See Timber Production, page 2397.

The above figures are purely for merchandise trade and exclude the very substantial exports of gold and silver bullion and ores. It is customary to consider such exports as invisibles, but this is misleading for the Philippines in view of the very substantial domestic production, all of which is exported to the United States. Such shipments during 1938 totaled ₱62,410,757, a gain of more than ₱14,000,000 over the previous year. Adding this to the merchandise trade gives total exports of some ₱293,001,000, which would make the balance of trade some ₱27,786,000 in favor of the Philippine Islands.

DISTRIBUTION

There were a number of rather marked changes in the distribution of trade during the current year. Trade with the United States was featured by a very sharp increase in the share of imports and a small decline in exports, with the United States' participation in total trade somewhat above 1937. The share of Oriental countries declined rather substantially, this being a natural result of war conditions. Participation of Europe and miscellaneous countries recorded fractional gains.

Normally, there is a substantial favorable balance with the United States and a moderate positive balance with Europe but a very heavy adverse balance with Oriental countries. The year 1938 was unique, in that trade with all areas was adverse to the Philippine Islands.

TRADE WITH THE UNITED STATES

The year 1938 was in many ways a banner year in United States trade with the Philippine Islands. It is remarkable that the balance of merchandise trade was favorable to the United States for the first time since 1921, total imports having amounted to ₱181,556,478, with exports of ₱180,891,621, or an import excess of ₱664,857. These figures include American possessions. In comparison with 1937, imports jumped ₱54,243,422, or 42.6 per cent, while exports declined ₱62,446,976, or 25.7 per cent. Imports from the United States were the largest since 1929 and represented the greatest percentage of total imports in the history of the country. It is noted also that the United States was the principal and almost the sole beneficiary of the increased imports during the year. Exports to the United States were the smallest since 1932 in aggregate value and represented the smallest percentage of total trade since 1929.

Imports

An analysis of the United States' participation by principal import groups shows substantial increases in every category, with the sole exception of a fractional decline in dairy products. An analysis on this basis is given below:

	Per Cent of Total
	1937	1938
Breadstuffs	25.6	55.9
Automotive	92.8	94.7
Chemicals, drugs, etc.	65.8	70.4
Cotton and manufactures ...	43.9	63.5
Electrical products	84.8	85.7
Marine products	30.1	42.9
Fruits and nuts and vegetables	51.0	59.7
Machinery and parts	80.0	83.3
Iron, steel and manufactures (except machinery)	68.0	76.7
Fertilizers	40.1	73.1
Rubber manufactures	86.2	86.3
Leather and manufactures ..	91.0	92.3
Mineral oils	74.7	75.0
Dairy products	25.8	24.4
Tobacco products	98.8	99.6
Paper	65.9	69.6

Imports of wheat flour from the United States reached an all-time high of 109 per cent in quantity and 107 per cent in value compared with 1937. Imports from both Australia and Canada, the principal competing countries, showed declines both actually and relatively.

The official trade figures show increases of 32 per cent in quantity and 36 per cent in value of imports of automobiles and trucks from the United States in 1938. In this case, these figures are actually misleading, since they represent Customs liquidations and include a large number of motor vehicles which were actually imported during the latter part of 1937 but which did not appear in the Customs statistics until 1938. It is believed that actual imports during 1938 were somewhat below the previous year, this contention being supported by unofficial figures of imports by dealers.

Imports of cotton cloth from the United States were the highest since 1932. A comparison with 1937 shows gains of 178 per cent in quantity and 106 per cent in value. Their relative position in the market was the largest since the large-scale entry of Japan into the trade. Imports from Japan for the current year show declines of 55 per cent in quantity and 26 per cent in value.

Imports of American sardines recorded gains of 102 per cent in quantity and 140 per cent in value during 1938, this being attributed almost entirely to less severe competition from Japan. Fresh fruits imports showed a gain of 77 per cent in value.

Among the leading machinery import items, there was a gain of 38 per cent in value of mining machinery but a decline of 19 per cent in value of stationary and marine engines, this decline being attributed to more effective German competition on diesel engines.

The iron and steel group recorded gains in all principal classifications, with the exception of corrugated roofing which declined about nine per cent in quantity but increased eight per cent in value. The largest gain in 1938 was in steel bars and rods, which showed nearly a three-fold increase over the previous year.

Although, as previously indicated, the American share of the dairy products trade declined to some extent, there were actual increases in imports, condensed milk showing gains of 32 per cent in quantity and 24 per cent in value and evaporated milk nine per cent in quantity and 13 per cent in value.

In the mineral oils group, there were very marked increases in imports from the United States of crude fuel oil and lubricating oil but fairly substantial declines in gasoline and kerosene. Meat products is the only important item showing an actual decline in 1938 and this was comparatively unimportant, amounting to only five per cent. Imports of pharmaceutical products showed a very marked increase of 87 per cent in total value, while perfumery and cosmetics increased 28 per cent.

Imports of American leaf tobacco gained 70 per cent in quantity and 80 per cent in value, while cigarettes showed the remarkable improvement of 120 per cent in quantity and 134 per cent in value. Other import items recording gains during 1938 were automobile tires, 55 per cent in quantity and 26 per cent in value; printing paper, 53 per cent in both quantity and value; and wrapping paper, 20 per cent in quantity and 82 per cent in value.

Exports

Exports to the United States during 1938 show fairly substantial declines in practically all items but in almost every case, the drop in value was substantially greater than that in quantity. Shipments of abaca to the United States during the current year showed declines of 32 per cent in quantity and 65 per cent in value. Exports of copra showed a 10 per cent increase in quantity but a 44 per cent decrease in value, this being the outstanding example of the low prices prevailing during 1938. Similarly, exports of copra cake and meal declined 21 per cent in quantity and 44 per cent in value, while the drop in desiccated coconuts was 15 percent in quantity and 40 percent in value. Shipments of coconut oil were less than one-half of one per cent below 1937 in quantity but fell some 48 per cent in value. Similarly, aggregate shipments of sugar were almost exactly the same during the two years, but the 1938 value was some 13 per cent lower.

Cigars appear to be the only item on which average prices were higher in 1938, since there was a drop of about one-half of one per cent in quantity but a slight increase in total value. Shipments of lumber and timber for the year recorded decreases of 36 per cent in quantity and 38 per cent in value. Among the less important products, there were declines in cordage, chemicals, fruits, canned pineapple, hats, vegetable lard and butter, chrome ore and buttons, the only increases being in cutch and gums and resins.

OUTLOOK FOR 1939

It is somewhat difficult to make any definite predictions concerning the outlook for the coming year, owing to the large number of factors concerning which it is impossible to make definite predictions. These include the possible duration of hostilities between China and Japan and the extremely uncertain political situation in Europe. Also, the economic prosperity of the Philippines depends to a very great extent upon conditions in the United States and upon pending congressional action on the Joint Preparatory Committee's report.

In general, there does not appear to be a basis for excessive optimism concerning the outlook for the coming year. It is certain that the present low prices of Philippine products is an unfavorable factor. There appears to be some basis to hope for higher prices during the year, although this depends solely upon an improvement in world economic conditions and consequently in the consumption of Philippine products. Unless prices advance below the existing unsatisfactory level, general prosperity is practically impossible.

Government expenditures for public works and other purposes contributed materially toward maintenance of buying power during 1938. It is fairly certain that such expenditures will increase very substantially during the coming year, possibly as much as 40 per cent. This will unquestionably be a very favorable feature of the year and may offset the decline in general purchasing power resulting from the low prices of various agricultural products.

The mining industry* should record a further increase in production during the coming year. This will contribute materially toward general prosperity.

The situation with respect to import commodities is somewhat unfavorable, owing to the substantial over-buying during 1938 and the small improvement in consumption, with resulting heavy stocks of many commodities at the beginning of the year. This would appear to make probable some reduction in 1939 purchases of such commodities, unless there is a large and unexpected improvement in consumption.

The export outlook is not particularly encouraging. The prospect for coconut products is rather dark, owing to the world over-supply of fats and increasing production in many countries. The situation with respect to abaca is fair and there is a possibility that there may be some increase in exports during the year.

* See "Gold Production in the Philippines", pages 2480-81.

Exports of sugar should equal 1938 but judging from present indications, prices will be unsatisfactory. Shipments of leaf tobacco and manufactures may show some improvement provided the recent heavy purchases by Spain are continued. There should be a very substantial improvement in exports of gold and base metals, while American purchases of lumber are expected to increase, although there may be a corresponding drop in sales to Japan owing to war conditions.

TIMBER PRODUCTION IN THE PHILIPPINES DURING THE YEAR 1938

Timbers totalling 2,393,510.01 cubic meters were utilized from public forests of the Philippines during 1938, it was learned from the division of statistics of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce. Of this total, 124,993.49 cubic meters belong to the first group; 65,312.61 cubic meters to the second group; 1,413,204.75 cubic meters to the third group, and 789,999.16 to the fourth group.

The province of Negros Occidental leads all the other provinces in the total number of timbers cut with 383,446.90 cubic meters, followed by Camarines Sur with 381,487.44 cubic meters; then by Zamboanga with 284,429.02 cubic meters. Other leading provinces with their respective output of timbers are Lanao, 255,813.54 cubic meters; Mt. Province, 168,626.65 cubic meters; Misamis Oriental, 117,117.25 cubic meters; Davao, 108,215.28 cubic meters; Tayabas, 94,973.02 cubic meters; Camarines Norte, 89,444.51 cubic meters; Surigao, 87,952.96 cubic meters; and Agusan, 75,902.36 cubic meters.

The statistics show that the great bulk of the timbers in the Philippines belong to the third group, followed by the fourth group. The first group, which represents the highest quality of timber, was the smallest quantity cut.

Palawan cut the biggest amount of first group timber with 20,013.48 cubic meters; followed by Zamboanga with 15,246.67 cubic meters and then by Cagayan with 14,492.14 cubic meters. Of second group timber, Zamboanga leads with 11,862.38 cubic meters; followed by Camarines Sur with 7,685.24 cubic meters; and then by Lanao with 4,643.43 cubic meters. Of third group timber, Camarines Sur is the leader with 281,814.09 cubic meters, with Negros Occidental second with 192,871.76 cubic meters, and Mt. Province third with 164,696.12 cubic meters. In the fourth group, Negros Occidental holds the foremost rank with 187,516.04 cubic meters with Zamboanga holding second place with 116,897.65 cubic meters and Lanao occupying third place with 97,224.95 cubic meters.

MINING IN THE PHILIPPINES

HISTORY GIVEN

Spanish and English Tried Unsuccessfully To Work P. I. Ores

MANILA DAILY BULLETIN

February 1, 1937

Long before the Spaniards came to the Philippines, gold was being washed from the streams, and copper and iron ores were being mined and smelted in a primitive way by the Filipinos, according to an article which appeared in the Bureau of Science's 1924-1925 journal on the mineral resources of the Philippine Islands.

Morga, a Spanish historian, says that before Magellan's arrival, gold figured conspicuously among Philippine exports to China. It is also said to have been reported in Chinese writings of about the third century A.D. that gold was the chief product of Luzon. It is also claimed that the old mine workings in Aroroy, are very old Chinese, because pieces of Chinese pottery, from earlier than the Ming Dynasty, were found near the old tunnels and open cuts. That the Chinese were influential in early mining, and may have taught the Filipinos the rudiments of mining and smelting is evidenced by the striking similarity of the crude native furnaces to those used by the Chinese.

TRIBES HOSTILE

In the early days of the Spanish occupation, very little was done to develop the mineral resources of the islands; this was partially due to the hostility of the mountain tribes and their unwillingness to disclose the whereabouts of their deposits. Later, however, rich deposits of gold, iron, copper, and coal were discovered and mining companies were formed, but all were more or less unsuccessful. The Spanish essayed to develop the Philippine mineral resources along modern and scientific lines, but mining never became profitable during Spanish times. The present industry, however, has greatly profited from the knowledge they gained of our economic deposits through their studies and developments and by their mistakes and experiences.

The history of mining prior to the American occupation of the Philippines is essentially the history of gold, copper, iron, and coal mining. Each has its own story to tell, and each has its own important place in the history of the industry to fill.

Gold, first in importance in Philippine mining, has been washed from streams and rivers of the islands by the natives since time immemorial. Lode mining was also practiced as is evidenced by the many old tunnels and open cuts discovered in several parts of the islands. The most important gold mining districts of today are the same as those of early times. Rich gold deposits were known and recorded by the Spanish more than three hundred years ago. Morga tells how these deposits were zealously guarded by the "savages." As far back as 1544, Blair and Robertson spoke of the knowledge of gold in Mindanao, Masbate, and Paracale. Hernando Riquel, in 1754, wrote enthusiastically of the gold mines of Luzon which may have been located in the Paracale-Mambulao district in Camarines Norte.

That gold was panned in the Paracale-Mambulao district long before the coming of the Spaniards is highly probable as this district was the scene of much mining activity long before the other gold bearing regions became known to the conquerors. This gold washing was done very primitively. During the last years of Spanish rule, a native dipper dredge came into use which had a two to three cubic meter capacity per day. This remained in operation until 1908.

VENA REAL

In 1626 a vein was discovered on Mount Calacot near Mambulao by Don Diego de Espina. This vein was called the "Vena Grande" or "Vena Real." It was not until about 1848 that a company, the Ancla de Oro, was organized to exploit this vein. This company failed after long and active efforts had been made to win the values from the refractory ores encountered. The portal of a drainage tunnel which was driven is still in existence and well preserved.

Later, in the 19th century, an English company entered the field with large plans and considerable capital. This company, known as the Philippine Mining Syndicate, started operations in 1892, and introduced the stamp mill into the Philippines. Due to the Insurrection of 1896, the British company had to stop operations before production had been reached.

Mining activities declined in the Philippines after 1874 because of an order from the Spanish government prohibiting Filipinos from engaging in the mining industry.

At the time of the American occupation a German company, La Candelaria, was active in the district, but due to the unsettled conditions of the period, failed to accomplish anything of importance.

Prior to American sovereignty, the total amount of gold produced in the Paracale-Mambulao district is not known. Montero y Vidal claims that the production from the placer mines of Luzon amounted to about 100,000 pesos a year. This figure covers all placer workings in Luzon, but none was as important as the deposits of Paracale-Mambulao. The price of gold at that time was 22 pesos per tael, or 1.5 Spanish ounces.

In 1609, Morga writes that the production of gold in the Philippines was 200,000 dollars annually, and that nearly all of this came from the Paracale district.

ITALIAN VISITOR

Masbate, northern Mindanao, and Cebu were other gold bearing localities known at this time. Caseri, an Italian, who visited the islands sometime between 1695 and 1698, wrote of the rich gold mines of Masbate. It is known that both placer and lode mining were in practice there at that time. A Manila newspaper, in 1848, published an article concerning the gold deposits of Masbate island. The Spanish apparently made no effort to exploit the deposits as nothing has been found to indicate the fact.

The gold placers of Misamis were reported by Sainz de Barranda in 1848, and Surigao became known to the Spaniards at about the same time. Surigao was discovered by the Spanish much later than the other important districts, although the inhabitants of the district had been panning gold there for some time. Centeno, Minard, and Abella were also familiar with the deposits in these districts.

William Ashburner, a noted American mining engineer, examined the Surigao properties in 1883, but did not recommend them to his principals. He reported that the natives produced about 20,000 dollars in gold annually.

In 1871 a society called La Cebuana was formed to exploit the high assay gold and silver bearing ore which came from Ascubing and Panoyoy, Cebu. The claims were soon abandoned, however, as there was not enough ore to make the enterprise profitable. Ore of the same quality was found in Paracale and other places but as it was not free-milling, the old method of grinding and panning was unsuccessful.

CAMARINES AREA

The Spanish centered their activities around Camarines, but despite their activities gold mining did not prosper. In other districts little or no exploitation was accomplished. The Government endeavored to do everything in its power to promote the industry by special decrees and legislation, but, unfortunately, to no avail.

Since the Filipinos had no use for coal prior to the Spanish rule, it is not to be expected that the deposits were exploited by the island inhabitants. The history of the Philippine coal industry dates back only a little more than a hundred years. Coal was discovered in Cebu in 1827. In the year 1842 it was reported that steamboats were coming to the Philippines for the first time. Consequently, inquiries were made into the islands' coal resources; especially those of Cebu. Ten years later coal was discovered in the Danao district and was reserved for the Government. In 1854 the Viña, Roxas y Compañía was awarded a concession to exploit the Guila-Guila deposits on the Mananga River near the city of Cebu. After expending seventy to eighty thousand pesos it was discovered that faulting had displaced the coal so that it could not be traced. The company was dissolved.

In 1859 Da. Margarita Roxas started operations at Uling and Viña at Alpaco. Steaming tests were conducted on some steamers, which proved successful. Encouraged by this, roads were built to facilitate the rapid transportation of coal mined so that production could be depended upon. The coal proved to be pyritic and did not store well, so the navy, the only market at that time, stopped using it. The mine failed.

Isaac Conui in 1871 solicited the Compostela deposits, and in 1873 applied for those of the Danao River. In 1890 the Sociedad Nuevo Langrea started work in the district. In 1898 Enrique Spitz consolidated all these concessions in his name and the Sociedad Nuevo Langrea passed out of existence.

COAL SHIPPED

In 1842 in Albay Province, Batan Island, Governor Velarde made the first open cut in coal and for the first time coal was shipped to Manila from Calanga Bay. For the next fifty years the location and relocation of claims was the only development work done in that district. In 1893 the Minas de Batan, a company owned by the Gil Brothers, took out claims. Operations were not begun until 1899.

The La Paz Company was organized in 1874 to exploit certain deposits near the barrio of Bacon, San Esteban, Sorsogon. After a little coal was produced the company failed because of lack of capital.

In 1887 coal mining was started in Cataingan on Masbate. The work was unsystematic and haphazard. The total production of the workings up until 1895 amounted to only 625 tons.

Coal was discovered in Mindanao in 1855 but no development was done prior to American occupation.

The history of iron mining in the Philippines dates back to 1664, at which time native furnaces in Bulacan were known to be in operation producing agricultural implements.

The Morong (now Rizal) deposits were first exploited by the Spanish. Later, those of San Miguel de Mayumo and Angat in Bulacan were worked. Plowpoints, plowshares, bolos, and kitchen utensils were manufactured. Early in the nineteenth century an attempt was made to establish a large smelting plant with modern machinery, but, owing to poor transportation, this enterprise failed even before work on the deposits had commenced.

Other deposits known in 1883, as recorded by Abella, but not exploited, were those of Paracale (Mambulao), Camarines Norte, Caraballo Mountains in Luzon, Cebu, and other places.

A letter ordering every possible assistance given by Padre Belli in the operation of his iron mines in Angat, Bulacan, and bearing the date 1781, is the earliest available record of iron mining in the islands. The next is a petition by Santiago Hizon, in 1815, asking that he be declared discoverer of the iron-ore deposits in Sapang Bacal. Da. Maria Alteza Fernando finally acquired these deposits after they had passed through many hands.

IRON SMELTED

When the Americans landed in the Philippines the Filipinos were busy smelting iron ore in their crude furnaces in Bulacan.

For several centuries the Igorrotes had been making utensils of copper obtained from ore deposits in Mankayan, in what is now the Mountain Province, when Don Pascual Enrile reported the fact in an official communication dated 1838. Samples obtained by the explorers of these deposits ran high in assay. The inspection of 1838 was then created and the mining law of 1846 enacted. These copper deposits were explored in 1850 by Don Antonio Hernandez, accompanied by a column of soldiers to protect him against the hostile Igorrotes.

It is estimated that, between 1840 and 1855, about 600,000 pounds of copper were produced, valued at around 117,000 pesos.

In 1855, Don Tomas de Balbas y Castro also sent an expedition to explore the deposits. The following year he applied for demarcation of properties. He had 120 Chinese coolies working on his four claims. He also made a deal with the Igorrotes to pay them 500 pesos for their holdings.

In 1860 operations were started by the Cantabro-Filipino Company, which had been formed five years previously. The operation of the mines was intrusted to Don Jose Maria Santos, an eminent Spanish mining engineer. Work was suspended in 1875, due to the death of Santos, and never resumed.

With the passing of the Cantabro-Filipino Company, copper mining was crudely carried on by the Chinese and the Igorrotes until 1900, when claims were relocated and development resumed.

The first mention of gas or petroleum in the geologic literature of the Philippines was made in 1890, in a description of Panay Island by Abella. He said that some shales were found in Cebu and Panay from which petroleum could be distilled. A combustible in Quinaulian creek in Panay was also mentioned.

WELLS SUNK

At the time of the revolution of 1896, Smith, Bell and Company were sinking two wells near Toledo, Cebu. The American drillers were driven out and work was stopped. The wells reached a depth of 244 and 344 meters, respectively, and a small quantity of petroleum was produced. This district has remained idle ever since.

Other nonmineral deposits that have been discovered and worked in the islands are: Sulphur on Biliran Island and at Burauen, both in Leyte Province; Rock quarries located near and around Manila and other places; Adobe stone, or volcanic tuff, was quarried in Mariquina, San Mateo and Guadalupe in Rizal, Meycauayan in Bulacan, and other places. Ba-salt for road metal was obtained from Morong, Rizal. Marble was quarried in Romblon and used in Manila for making fonts and similar articles. In San Pedro Macati there was a brick factory, La Olimpia, which utilized the clays found there. Kaolin was obtained from Mount Maquiling and was used in making water paint.

It is reasonably safe to say that with the location of these old workings already known, and with the use of modern equipment and methods, mining in the Philippines should become ever-increasingly profitable. The discovery of chromite, iron, and manganese in recent years has enlarged the scope of mining operations greatly.

GOLD PRODUCTION IN THE PHILIPPINES DURING THE FIRST SEMESTER OF 1939

A marked increase in the gold production in the Philippines has been noted during the first half of the year 1939. The total value of ores extracted from the deposits, not including the production during the month of June this year, of eight mining companies only, reached a total amount of ₱38,904,454.94. There were 43 producing companies in operation during said period, from January to June, 1939. The Benguet Consolidated and the Balatoc Mining companies continued the lead in the gold production this year, each of which shows a total of ₱6,000,000.00 in round figures, or an average of ₱1,000,000.00 a month each. If the present activities of these producing companies continue until the end of this year, it can safely be estimated that the total gold production will reach more or less ₱78,000,000.00.

The comparative value of the production of the 43 mining companies corresponding to the first six months of 1938 and 1939, are as follows:

PRES. QUEZON RESERVED METAL DEPOSITS IN SURIGAO PROVINCE

In line with the policy of reserving deposits of base metals for the government, President Quezon has issued an executive order reserving all mineral lands in Surigao containing base metals for the government, it was announced by Jorge B. Vargas, Secretary to the President.

The step taken by the President was interpreted in official and private circles as the beginning of a large scale program of the government to engage in base metal mining for exportation and for local use. The exploration and development of these rich mineral lands in Surigao will be undertaken by the government through the National Development Company which has already made preliminary steps, opening camps to start a big-scale mining program in the South.

It is recalled that the national government last year sent Dr. H. Foster Bain, Commonwealth adviser on mining, and Quirico Abadilla, director of mines, to find new markets for Philippine base metals, specially iron ore in Japan. The good prospects of Japanese markets encouraged government authorities to take unto itself the exploitation of Philippine base metal resources, it was remarked.

According to present plans being worked out by the National Development Company, the Philippines will sell iron ore to Japan and foreign countries, and with the estimated profits of about one million pesos (1,000,000.00) annually, the government will be able, in the next five or six years, to put up machineries, foundries and other equipment for the processing and manufacture of steel and pig iron.

The coal will be mined by the government and will be used for many purposes, for the Manila Railroad Company, and the Cement Factories in Cebu, it was stated.

COAL RESERVES IN P.I. INSUFFICIENT

Mining Engineer Says Local Fuel Not Enough for Industrialization of the Country*

Known coal reserves of the Philippines are hardly sufficient for any large scale industrialization of the country, according to Ramón Abarquez, mining engineer of the bureau of mines, in one of the papers of Filipino scientists presented to the Sixth Pacific Science Congress now being held in California.

The government is now endeavoring to make a thorough canvass of all possible coalfields in the Islands with a view to remedying this deficiency, Mr. Abarquez revealed.

According to the present knowledge based on limited preliminary reconnaissance, the coal bearing formation of the Philippines, covering approximately 195 square kilometers, has a possible reserve of about 20,000,000 metric tons, he said in his paper. Local production of coal has always been small and consumed mainly by interisland merchant vessels. Coal imports of the country during 1937 were 263,000 tons valued at P1,566,800.

Philippine coals are generally non-coking, Mr. Abarquez said, except in a few limited localities. Furthermore, the coal seams lack persistence and have been affected by faulting, folding and igneous intrusions.

Steps are therefore being taken to explore the country's possible oilfields to determine whether they exist commercially in the Islands, with which to supplement or substitute deficient coal resources.

Another paper presented to the Pacific Science Congress is by Director of Mines,

*Published in The Tribune, July 29, 1939.

Dr. Quirico Abadilla, and treats of the mineral resources of the Philippines.

Director Abadilla said new goldfields are expected to be discovered, in addition to the proven fields of Baguio, Camarines Norte, Masbate, Surigao, and Bulacan.

Mineral production, he said in his paper, rose very rapidly from P3,900,000 in 1928 to P74,000,000 in 1938. Of the 1938 income from the mines, 34 per cent went to machinery, equipment and supplies bought mainly from the United States; 27 per cent to stockholders; 21 per cent to mine laborers; 7 per cent to government royalties taxes and revenues; 6 per cent to salaries; and 5 per cent to lumber industry.

Gold and silver represents 88 per cent of the total mineral production in 1938, and the base metals, 12 per cent, Director Abadilla reported. A Government geological survey in order to correlate existing geologic data obtained from the mines with the end in view of helping them solve their common structural problems and obtaining geologic phenomenon that may aid in discovering new mineralized fields is now being made.

FINANCE

REVENUES OF GOVERNMENT SHOW BIG RISE

Unprecedented Increase Noted In Interest On Commonwealth Bank Deposits, Due To Coconut Excise Fund

An unprecedented increase in the interest income on bank deposits of the Commonwealth Government, amounting to ₱3,019,675.51 in 1938 as against only ₱455,221.94 in 1937, constituted the brightest spot in the financial operation of the national government last year, according to the 1938 annual report of Insular Treasurer Antonio Ramos.

This interest earned on bank deposits came largely from the coconut oil excise tax funds which have been a major source of government revenue during the past few years. Increases in the national income of the government, principally from financial operations of the Exchange Standard Fund and of the government mints, have given indications of sound and profitable operation.

The operating income of the insular treasury during 1938 amounted to ₱3,278,351.085 as against its operating expenses of ₱123,987.066, giving a net profit of ₱3,154,363.425. The net increase in income of the government amounting to ₱2,713,741.81, bigger than 1937 figures, was also realized, the total income for 1938 being ₱2,726,464.43 and expenditures only ₱12,722.62.

Insular Treasurer Ramos reported that the bonded indebtedness of the Philippine Government has been reduced to a net amount of ₱81,319,850.42 at the end of 1938 after deducting ₱84,184,149.58 as collateral bond and sinking funds accumulated, or a grand total of ₱165,504,000.00, of which amount the insular government assumed the total of ₱130,450,000.00.

Investments of the Philippine government largely in stocks, bonds, loans and advances to railroad companies, totaled ₱196,257,156.20 at the end of 1938, as against ₱181,122,652.77 as of December 31, 1937. The increase in investments, amounting to ₱15,134,503.43, was registered in spite of the redemption of the ₱2,000,000 bonds of the Metropolitan Water District and was due to the subscription to stocks of the National Development Co., Manila Railroad Company and the National Power Corporation, amounting to ₱10,475,300; ₱2,000,000 and ₱208,503.43, respectively.

By the operation of the Exchange Standard Fund proper, the national government realized a net gain of ₱1,730,268.74, which was larger than the net gains in 1937 amounting to only ₱1,698,380.69. Receipts of this fund amounted to ₱2,251,246.63, as against ₱1,923,094.11 in 1937, the increase being due to interest earned on bank deposits and premiums received on telegraph transfer and demand drafts in Manila on New York.

In the operation of the division of mints, a net gain of ₱205,843.17 was also realized. The receipts of the Exchange Standard Fund on account of the operation of the mints for the minting of coins amounted to ₱1,057,574.04, as against a total expense of only ₱851,730.87.

Insular Treasurer Ramos has segregated in his annual report the different funds held for the account of the national government, totaling ₱375,322,648.75 as of December 31, 1938, as follows:

₱120,082,231.715 as general funds; ₱47,397,874.77 as exchange standard funds; ₱174,763,462.00 as treasury certificate funds; ₱6,790,759.415 as depository funds; ₱5,761,657.26 as sinking funds; ₱14,320,027.22 as special funds, and ₱6,230,007.24 as fiduciary funds.

IV. LABOR

CHEERS GREET EPIC SPEECH BY THE PRESIDENT

Quezon Stresses Rights, Obligations of Labor in Duty To Nation— Hails Labor's New Found Unity

The Tribune, June 8, 1928

A mighty workers' throng of 100,000, marching in a parade that took two hours to pass a given point, sealed the united front of Philippines labor and, massed on the Luneta, heard President Manuel L. Quezon define human rights as more important than the rights of property, and appeal to the workers to show its appreciation of the government's sympathetic attitude towards its recognition and unity by bearing in mind that there is the interest of the nation which must be promoted.

Representing more than 200 unions, the workers marched along a rain-soaked parade route from Rizal Avenue at Azcarraga to the Luneta in one of the greatest mass demonstrations seen here in years. It came as a colorful climax to the achievement of national labor unity under the newly-formed National Executive Commission of Labor.

After the partakers had been reviewed by President Quezon on the Luneta, they massed around the speakers' stand and heard the President declare in a 20-minute speech in Tagalog that the rights of man are more important than the rights of property.

Applauded thunderously almost every other minute, the President emphasized, however, that property rights must be recognized and maintained not only for the benefit of the already property-owning class but in the interest of the workingman who would be deprived of the fruits of his own labor beyond that which he needs for his immediate essential daily requirements if the rights of property should be abolished.

President Quezon made a symbolical gesture when he shook the hand of Secretary of Labor Jose Avelino, explaining he did this because he was unable to shake hands individually with all the workers who took part in the parade.

Stations KZRM and KZIB radiocast the President's speech by long and short wave from the Luneta. Mayor Juan Posadas who introduced President Quezon was the first to speak after Secretary Avelino had given to the President the "loyalty resolution" approved by the labor commission at the convention.

The demonstration was reviewed by President Quezon, all members of his cabinet, assemblymen, members of the judiciary including those of the court of industrial relations, high government officials, representatives of capital and labor and prominent ladies. Significant was the fact that the demonstrators refrained from voicing their opinions on leading labor questions. The demonstration had only one theme,—the achievement by labor of national unity.

Other highlights of the parade included the participation of the 30 members of the labor commission headed by Secretary of Labor Jose Avelino, its chairman, who marched in the rain from Rizal Avenue and Azcarraga to the Luneta in barong Tagalog at the head of the demonstration. He went up the grandstand after saluting the President.

Following Secretary Avelino were Angel Marin, president of the Confederated Workers' Alliance and National Federation of Labor No. 1; Jose M. Nava, of the Collective Movement; and Anselmo Panaguiton, of the National Federation of Labor No. 2 and "Congreso Obrero de Filipinas", who as representatives of the three confederations under the commission, flanked the "Unity Flag".

Among placards carried by the demonstrators, those that called attention were one showing President Quezon embracing two men, one representing the industrial worker and the other the agricultural laborer; and likenesses of Dr. Dominador Gomez and Isabelo de los Reyes, pioneers in labor organization in the islands.

The placard with Dr. Gomez's portrait quoted the late doctor's advice to labor about 20 years ago, "Unite to triumph!" Isabelo de los Reyes was called the "father of the Philippine labor movement".

A group of Chinese laborers affiliated with the Chinese Labor Unions Association also joined the parade as a sympathy gesture for Philippine labor. The keynote of their representation was the "preservation of democracy in the Far East".

A big group in dark grey uniform and organized as a semi-military unit known as the "Kawal ng Kapayapaan" (Soldiers of Peace) also drew attention. The "Kawal" is said to have started in Pampanga and is spreading to other provinces. Its main objective is the preservation of "labor-capital peace".

A group of suffragettes, including Mrs. Rosa Sevilla de Alvero and Mrs. Asunción A. Perez, secretary of the Associated Charities, drew applause from the grandstand.

Capital cooperated with labor in making the event a success by excusing laborers from work in the afternoon of June 5th to join the parade, in accordance with the half-day holiday proclaimed by President Quezon. Some of the placards carried by the workers in the demonstration were paid for by the employers themselves.

Big delegations from the provinces, including those from the Visayas and Central Luzon came to Manila to join the parade and the convention. Pedro Abad Santos, Socialist leader, was, however, unable to come from Pampanga. Several of the groups carried red flags.

The rain which fell shortly before 3:30, the time designated for the march, threatened to halt the parade, but the rain stopped and the parade started. Rain fell again while the parade was on its way to the Luneta but the participants continued to march, heedless for the shower.

The parade was preceded by mounted policemen and the Philippine Army band. At the head were Secretary Avelino, Inspector General of Labor José Figueras and members of the labor commission.

Following the commission members were the employes and laborers of the department of labor. The other participants were government laborers and employees, laborers affiliated with unions under each of the three confederations comprising the labor commission and the independent unions.

The entire police force, except a few officers detailed at headquarters and in the stations as reserves, turned out to regulate traffic and maintain order during the parade. The new policemen undergoing training in the police school and 100 graduated Philippine Army trainees, the latter after they were deputized, also took a hand in handling the affair.

MAYOR POSADAS' INTRODUCTORY SPEECH

The introductory speech of Mayor Juan Posadas, of Manila, follows:

"YOUR EXCELLENCY, AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:

"This mammoth demonstration marks the culmination of all attempts heretofore made to unify the various labor and peasant organizations in our country. With the creation of the National Commission of Labor to coordinate the movements of these organizations, we can well hope for a more effective cooperation in the prosecution of the President's social justice policy. But this vast congregation of workers, Mr. President, came not only to celebrate their unification but also to express their gratitude to you for your great accomplishments in their behalf, fully conscious that in your many years of public service, you have not once failed to show deep interest in the cause of the working man whose unfortunate condition you have consistently and courageously sought to better and improve. We are, therefore, highly honored by your presence this afternoon.

"The policy of social justice to which the cause of labor is intimately related and with which the present administration is eminently characterized, cannot be said to be a new policy of the President. It may be recalled here that when I first met the President in 1918, his views on this matter were clearly expressed. In this meeting, the problems of Mindanao were discussed, especially the unwholesome living conditions of laborers working in the plantations. The conditions then existing were so defective that they have caused suffering and appalling mortality among the laborers which at the same time lowered the spirits of those who could survive, even blasting their hopes to improve in that part of the country which was painted to them as the promised land. There was lack of hospitals or dispensaries for the treatment of the sick in many plantations; the sick, the dying and the healthy were mixed and poorly housed together; the supply of food and drinking water was most deficient in many districts; hardly any form of recreation was available, all of which made the laborers' lives utterly miserable. The President stated in unmistakable terms that these conditions must be remedied, adding that the government was not sending laborers there to die or to remain as mere laborers, but to enable them to improve their lot and to become eventually independent land owners, and that it was the duty of every government official to lend a helping hand in the realization of this objective. Some years later, when I had the good fortune of accompanying the President on a trip to Mindanao, labor problems were discussed and, incidentally, he made mention of the inequity of the law then in force which allowed planters to prosecute laborers indebted to them for failure to comply with their contract for services with penalty of imprisonment and without regard as to the cause or causes which might have impelled the laborers not to comply with their contracts. Not very long thereafter, upon the recommendation of the President in the former Philippine Senate, this law was repealed. There are but few instances to show that this policy "to promote the people's welfare assuring to every one an equal economic opportunity, wholesome living conditions, a chance to work for a decent livelihood, a fair share in the fruits of the country's material progress, and the enjoyment of a fair standard of living" has long been a matter of serious concern on the part of the President, whose sincere desire for the prosperity of his people cannot be surpassed.

"The social and political changes taking place in many parts of the world where subversive forces from within and without are set to capitalize the plight of the masses in order to sow the seeds of dissatisfaction and disrupt established institutions have generally resulted in confusion, disorder and even revolutions. Happily for our country, and thanks to the wisdom and far-sightedness of our President, most particularly in the pursuance of his social justice policy, our country had been spared the misfortune befalling other peoples.

"In the appraisal, however, of the results brought about by this policy, we cannot overlook its intangible effects upon the working man which have advanced his cause perhaps more considerably than the immediate material gains derived therefrom. Manifest indeed is the spirit of confidence infused in his heart. He feels no stronger sense of security than today when, after having been accorded the just treatment which is his due, he looks forward to the future equipped with nothing but hope and encouragement, believing earnestly that his "opportunity to acquire through toil his necessities in food, clothing and shelter" also assures the welfare of his family and ultimately the happiness of the whole country. This sense of security is fostering his determination to do his share in promoting general prosperity and progress.

"Fellow citizens: It is both our honor and privilege to hear His Excellency, the President of the Philippines, than whom no other man in our country has taken a deeper interest in, and has accomplished greater things for, the cause of labor."

THE PRESIDENT'S LABOR UNITY SPEECH

"FRIENDS AND COUNTRYMEN:

"In the name of the government and in my own, I greet the workers of the Philippines this afternoon and I wish to express my joy because at last I have seen what I had always hoped for: that all labor organizations in our country will have an agreement and be bound into one organization which will result in the strength of all and which will do away with different labor organizations.

"It is a great honor for Secretary Avelino that under his administration of the department of labor this unity of labor was achieved. And because it is impossible for me to shake hands with you all, I will shake the hand of Secretary Avelino, and by this handshake I promise you that you can be assured that the government of the Philippines will defend the rights of all workers in the Philippines.

"Maybe there are some who will see danger in this occasion, because perhaps they think that if all laborers in the Philippines have already achieved absolute unity, they will use this strength to trample on the rights of others. I do not believe such will transpire. In my long experience with the feelings and thoughts of people in our country, especially the poor, my belief is firm that the Filipino does not only want his rights but also, properly enlightened, is ready to recognize the rights of others. That is why I believe that in this union of labor organizations in the Philippines they are not only united in what they are asking, but they are united to help all of us, because through the representatives of all these organizations, it will be easy to know whatever they are thinking through reason, and the rights of everybody will be won.

"In other countries, laborers only achieved victory after a long period of struggle, and sometimes the spilling of blood solved the struggle. In totalitarian states, the government leads in the establishment of labor organizations. But although laborers in totalitarian states have already gained concessions, all that they do is subject to the decision and will of their ruler. Here, although the government greatly wishes to help the laborers and see them in comfort, it does not interfere but allows you to form your own organizations according to your own will. What the government only does is to help you and in its help it is your will and thought that rule.

"There is nothing on earth so valuable as freedom. If the organization of yourselves had been done by the government and you had nothing to do but follow orders, in my belief this would not be satisfactory to you as when it is your own will that you follow. That is why, although Secretary Avelino intervened herein, it was your leaders who truly decided on this matter. The government did nothing but follow you.

"My countrymen: we have a long way to go before we come to a situation where it can be said that you have won; that all have received what is due them; that their lives are comfortable. My firm belief is that this day will come. But in order that that day should come, not only the government, not only capital, but also you laborers must ponder our situation so that we would not be mistaken in our ideal.

"Workers in the Philippines must realize that we are starting a new life and that the life we are facing is not the same as before. We are going to establish our own government which shall not be under any nation. In these days every Filipino should not think only of his own comfort or the benefit of his companions, but of the good of all of us. If you workers are asking your employers for something which you think should be given you, I am appealing to your leaders that they study whether what you are asking is within their power to give, because you must not forget the saying: If we want eggs, we must not kill the hen.

"To capital, I can say this: It must realize that nobody has the right to get rich at the expense of labor. The laborer is more valuable than capital. Capital may be wasted, added, or lost as long as there is labor. The time will come when capital will appear again. But if labor is lost, capital cannot do anything. He is blind who does not see this. Not only thousands of years but millions of years passed before capital appeared in the world. It was also hundreds of years that man had been living on earth and there was no capital.

Bit by bit, through fighting against nature, he learned to gather food not only for the present but also to keep for the morrow. That was the beginning of so-called capital. That is why I repeat that labor is more valuable than capital. Not only that: the right of labor is more valuable than property rights, or the rights of proprietors, because the rights of labor are human rights.

"Capital needs to use its right, but in using this right, it should not forget that the rights of labor are more important. Capital wants to gain. Why? Not only because the capitalist wants to find riches but he also wants to enjoy life and let his children enjoy it too.

But should he not think that those who work for him and his children also want to become happy and to add to his comfort?

"These are matters which if pondered by all will lead to the day when those who have shall not have to fear, because their property will be respected. If everybody bears this in mind, the time will come when nobody in our country will die of hunger.

"I have nothing to hope in life but to see this day in the Philippines when the life of a laborer is a man's life, and his right as a man is respected. Your unity, I am sure, will help the government so that what this government has long desired, will come true."

UNITY PACT SIGNED

First Lady Sounds Plea for Lasting Pact; Avelino Urges Elimination of Rivalries

Labor was enjoined to make the unity effected, lasting and permanent, and was warned that labor's greatest enemy is itself if laborers remain divided, in speeches delivered by Mrs. Aurora A. Quezon, sponsor of the unity movement, and Secretary of Labor José Avelino, who welcomed the delegates to the labor convention held at the Manila Opera House.

"The movement for the union of all laborers in the country," declared Mrs. Quezon in Tagalog, "should not be as short-lived as a coon fire. All laborers joining this movement should remember that it is not for the benefit of some people alone but for all,—laborers as well as capitalists."

On the other hand, Secretary Avelino told the convention that "labor is labor's own enemy" if workers will continue to fight each other. He advised his hearers to eliminate rivalry and personal vanity if they expect to win their fight.

Symbol of the unity of the labor organizations, the flag of the National Labor Commission was unfurled at the convention by Mrs. Quezon. The ceremony was performed while everybody stood at attention as the national anthem was played.

Besides Mrs. Quezon and Secretary Avelino, the other speakers at the program were José Nava, Visayan labor leader; Angel Marin, of the Confederated Workers' Alliance; Segundo Ramos, secretary of the National Federation of Labor; and Under-Secretary of Labor Faustino Aguilar. Inspector General of Labor José Figueras was master of ceremonies.

To further cement the unity of the labor groups, the convention adopted a labor contract and signed the charter of the National Labor Commission. The contract, written in Tagalog, was read by Pedro Bagtas, secretary of the commission.

Mrs. Quezon was not included among the speakers at the convention and her speech caused no little surprise among the delegates. The 2,000 delegates broke into thunderous applause when she said:

"You should not think that because I am the wife of the President of the Philippines and live in Malacañan that I am different from you. I also belong to the laboring class and I do and feel the same way that you do and feel. When I was a child, I did what many of you did not do. I took water from the river, I washed clothes, and I handled the pestle. In my town I was the first to make "sabutan" and buri hats, which we sold to support our parents. I am a laborer although I live in Malacañan."

Mrs. Quezon also spoke on the work of her husband. "It is not true that he is the master of the people. On the contrary, he is the servant of the people. At times we think of going somewhere but my husband has matters of state to attend to and he could not follow what his family wants."

SEC. AVELINO'S ADDRESS OF WELCOME

Secretary Avelino's short address of welcome follows:

"I extend you the most cordial welcome because forgetting differences of opinion you have come from the remotest concerns of the archipelago to attend this convention.

"I know that many of you had to make sacrifices to be able to attend; your only recompense is that you are making sacrifices for a cause fully worthy of them.

"The prime purpose of this convention is to rally the pact of unity between the biggest labor organizations in the Islands and to seek the membership of all other independent unions. This pact of unity means the success of all your efforts to obtain social and economic adjustments. Divided, you destroy yourselves; for the greatest enemy of Labor is not Capital but labor itself.

"Fly-by-night unions and the case with which organizations already established are broken up and reformed, even within one plant or factory, prove your weakness. Such discord is the seed of graver conflicts. United you will be able to write the most brilliant chapter in your history—an example to be held up proudly before all your descendants of all generations to come. You have to throw out 'face,' reduce vanity if you are to triumph.

"The Department of Labor will help you as far as the law allows and as extensively as prudence counsels. This is the reason the National Labor Commission was formed to guide your steps and keep you out of trouble and help your collective movement. It will help labor and seek, as far as it can, better cooperation between labor and capital."

CHARTER OF THE NATIONAL COMMISSION OF LABOR

The charter of the NLC as adopted reads:

"The working people of the Philippines, duly represented by their respective organizations, fully cognizant of the unavoidable necessity of promoting their social and economic well-being through collective effort do hereby sanction the creation of a supreme national entity of all labor organizations in the country and promulgate for the government thereof this charter.

Art. I. Name.—The supreme national entity of all labor organizations in the Philippines shall be known as the National Commission of Labor.

Art. II. Objectives.—It shall be the principal objective of the Commission to maintain labor unity, to promote harmony and foster mutual assistance and cooperation among labor organizations in the Philippines and to coordinate their movements relating to the economic, social, cultural and moral improvement of the working people, with the end in view to uniting labor and peasant organizations.

Art. III. Membership.—The commission shall be composed of the secretary of labor as member ex-officio and 30 members representing in equal proportion the three principal labor groups in the country, namely, 1. The National Federation of Labor—Congreso Obrero de Filipinas and their affiliates; 2. The Confederated Workers' Alliance-National Federation of Labor and their affiliates; and 3. The Collective Labor Movement and its affiliates.

Art. IV. Offices.—The Officers of the Commission shall be the secretary, of labor as chairman ex-officio, and a secretary, who shall be appointed by the chairman upon the recommendation of the commission. Said secretary of the commission shall hold office for a term of one year or until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified.

Art. V. Finances—The Commission may, in any manner it shall deem wise, raise or create any such fund or funds as may be necessary to carry out its aims and purposes.

Art. VI. Standing Committees—The Commission shall have the following standing committees: 1. Executive Committee; 2. Committee on Rules and Resolutions; 3. Committee on Finance; 4. Committee on Legislation; 5. Committee on Industrial Relations; 6. Committee on Research; 7. Committee on Organizations; and 8. Committee on Educational Activities. Said committees shall be appointed by the chairman upon the recommendation of a majority of the members of the Commission.

Art. VII. By-Laws—The Commission shall adopt all such rules, regulations and by-laws as may be necessary to govern all affairs and activities of the same.

Art. VIII. Amendments—Any amendment to this Charter may be proposed by any member of the Commission, provided that the same shall be adopted only upon two-thirds vote of its entire membership and that it has been submitted in writing at least two-weeks prior to the holding of the session called for the purpose of acting upon it.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, the authorized representatives and spokesmen of organized labor have hereunto affixed their signatures, in the City of Manila, Philippines, this 29th day of May, in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-nine and of the Commonwealth the fourth.

The basic covenant or agreement signed previously by the representatives of the various labor organizations reads as follows:

"The labor unions in the Philippines which are represented at the meeting today, May 22, 1939, agreed to create a high governing body relating to laborers that will be called 'National Commission of Labor,' which beginning today and in the future will be considered the symbol of unity of different labor organizations in the Philippines.

"The 'National Commission of Labor' will be composed of 30 representatives to be equally distributed from the three largest labor organization, namely, Collective Labor Movement, National Federation of Labor, and Confederated Workers Alliance. The Commission will be temporarily headed by the Secretary of Labor, who shall be the supreme head.

"The 'National Commission of Labor' will carry out the following:

"(a) The maintenance of unity of all labor unions in the Philippines.

"(b) Intervention in all cases affecting laborers and labor unions and between labor and capital.

"(c) Preparation of the constitution and by-laws that should be followed with respect to the management of the 'National Commission of Labor' and which should be respected by all the labor unions under the commission."

THE EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

Brief Description of Past Congresses Held in Other Parts of Catholic World

By NICOLAS V. VILLARRUZ

The Philippines Herald-Feb. 2, 1937.

THE EUCHARIST symbolizes the presence of CHRIST in the appearance of bread and wine which the Catholic Church believes and teaches as one of her most exalted mysteries under a dual aspect of sacrament and sacrifice of the mass. The early Christians accorded the Eucharist first importance in symbol-tomb-decoration as depicted in the subterranean cemeteries commonly known as the Roman catacombs.

DEFINITION. — Leon Clugnet defines Eucharistic Congress as the "gathering of ecclesiastics and laymen for the purpose of celebrating and glorifying the Holy Eucharist and of searching the best means to spread its knowledge and love throughout the world." International Eucharistic Congress is of much wider magnitude. "Es la realización de Asambleas magnas donde se congregan los católicos más destacados del mundo por su piedad y por su ciencia para estudiar el dogma de la Sagrada Eucaristía, hacer conocer la verdad de la presencia real de Jesucristo en el Santísimo Sacramento y promover su mayor glorificación en medio de los hombres."

ORIGIN — On June 29, 1873, about two hundred catholic delegates gathered in the illustrious sanctuary "Paray-le-Monial" to consecrate for France the Blessed Sacrament. Mlle. Maria Marta Emiliana Tamisier was the moving spirit of the intense movement in France to honour the Eucharist and to counteract irreligious movement. The idea was later generalized and universalized to assume the immense gathering of international character.

PERMANENT STANDING COMMITTEE.

—For the organization and preparation of the congress there is a Permanent Committee composed of ecclesiastics and laymen under a President directly appointed by the Roman Pontiff. Since 1881 congresses were held at irregular intervals but from 1922 congresses were celebrated every two years on even year.

FIRST FIVE CONGRESSES.—Inspired by the Bishop Gaston de Segur, the first Congress was held at Lille, France, on June 21, 1881. Pope Leo XIII wrote Bishop Segur on May 16, 1881, one month before the first congress as follows: "Conviene a la devoción de los fieles celebrar solemnemente el recuerdo de la Institución de tan saludable y admirable sacramento. Nosotros veremos el modo inefable como Dios está presente en este Sacramento visible. Alabamos el poder divino que obra tantas maravillas en este Sacramento y damos gracias a Dios por don tan suave e inefable. Es por todo esto, querido hijo, que Nos acordamos con una afectación muy especial, la bendición apostólica a Vos y a todos cuantos asistan a ese Congreso." Avignon was the scene of the second congress in 1882 and the third congress took place 1883 at Liege. Under the Presidency of the venerable Bishop of Lausanne and Geneva, Mgr. Mermilled, the fourth congress met at Fribourg, Switzerland, from September 9 to 13, 1885. High dignitaries of the Cantonal Government and catholics all over Europe graced the occasion by their presence. The fifth congress at Toulouse in the south of France on June 20-25, 1886, was attended by 15,000 ecclesiastics and 30,000 laymen during the final exercises.

6TH TO 10TH (1888-1897).—Paris' turn came in 1888, from July 2 to 6 during the 6th congress. The great memorial church of the Sacred Heart of Montmartre was the centre of the celebration. On Aug. 15-21, 1890, the seventh congress took place at Antwerp, Belgium. Cardinal Goossens, Archbishop of Mechlin, gave the solemn benediction to 150,000 faithfuls who were gathered at the immense altar erected in the Palace de Meir. Leo XIII sent Cardinal Langenieux, Archbishop of Rheims as papal legate to the eighth congress at Jerusalem on May 14-21, 1893. "Here the reunion of the orient was advocated, and an adoration of the Blessed Sacrament was preached on the very spot where tradition says the Agony in the Garden took place." The churches of the East were largely represented at Rheims during the ninth congress on July 25-29, 1894. For the first time social questions affecting the working class were discussed and referred to for further study. The tenth congress was held at Paray-de-Monial, Sept. 20-25, 1897.

11TH TO 15TH (1898-1904).—At Brussels, July 13-17, 1898, the 11th congress, "best organized and most numerously attended of the series," was held. Cardinal Longenieux was again the Pope's Legate to the 12th congress at Lourdes, the city of "Eucharistic miracles" from Aug. 7-11, 1899. This Congress was noted for the number of priests taking part in the procession. Angers was the scene of the 13th congress (Sept. 4-8, 1901). At the deliberations a special section for young men was formed wherein was discussed papers referring to the work that young men should undertake to promote devotion to the Blessed Sacrament and the solutions to social problems. In the following year (Sept. 3-7, 1902) the 14th congress was celebrated at Namur, Belgium. During the 15th congress at Angoulême on July 20-24, 1904, the French law forbidding religious procession was lifted in order to permit the procession of the Blessed Sacrament.

16TH TO 20TH (1905-1909).—At the express wish of Pope Pius X, the 16th congress was held at Rome on June 1-6, 1905. At the opening of the congress Pope Pius X celebrated the solemn mass, and during the congress gave special audiences to the delegates. The Holy Father was present at the procession that closed the proceedings. Tournai, Belgium, was the place selected for the 17th congress on Aug. 15-19, 1906. The 18th congress at Metz, Lorraine, (Aug. 11-17, 1907) was attended by Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli as the papal legate. In deference to the celebration, the German government suspended the ban against processions so as to permit the solemn procession of the Holy Eucharist. The 19th congress was, so far, the most representative. It was held at London on Sept. 13-19, 1908, at the invitation of the Archbishop of Westminster. Great importance was attached to this congress because it was not only the first congress under the auspices of English-speaking members of the Catholic Church but also because three hundred and fifty years has passed since a papal legate set foot in England. Chosen for the second time, Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli attended the congress as legate of Rome, accompanied by 6 cardinals, 14 archbishops, 70 bishops and a large number of priests. After the congress the Pope sent a special letter to Archbishop Bourne of Westminster stating, "though it was the first of its kind in England, it must be looked on as the greatest of all, for its concourse of illustrious men, for the weight of its deliberations, for its display of faith and the magnificence of its religious functions." The twentieth congress met at Colonia in 1909.

21ST TO 30TH (1910-1930).—Montreal was the scene of the 21st congress in 1910; Madrid of the 22nd in 1911; Vienna of the 23rd in 1912; Malta of the 24th in 1913, and London of the 25th in 1914. Due to the world war there was a moratorium on the holding of International Eucharistic Congresses from 1915 to 1921. The 26th Congress took place in Rome in 1922. This was the second time that Rome was selected, the first one being in 1905. It was decided in this congress that future congresses be held every two years. Amsterdam claimed the 27th congress in 1924 with the Dutch Cardinal, Mgr. Van Rossum, C.S.R., as legate of the Vicar of Rome. In 1926 Chicago earned the 28th congress, the first time in the United States, and attended by a huge gathering of humanity reaching the million mark. Cardinal Bonzano represented the Holy See. The 29th congress at Sydney in 1928 was notably known for the procession of the Blessed Sacrament over the sea. The Pope's legate was Cardinal Ceretti. It was estimated that the huge crowd bordered a million. Africa especially distinguished herself to the Catholic world when Carthage became the scene of the 30th congress in 1930. Cardinal Lepicier was commissioned to represent the Holy Father.

31ST TO 32ND (1932-1934).—The best and most splendidly organized I. E. C. was the 31st in Dublin in 1932. A mass of humanity over the million mark packed themselves as one body to pay reverence to the Blessed Sacrament. The papal legate this time was the Italian Cardinal Lauri. The next congress, or the most recent, held in 1934 at Buenos Aires from October 10 to 14, was reported to have administered holy communion to 400,000 faithfuls. Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, Secretary of State of Rome, attended the congress as legate of Pope Pius XI.

PHILIPPINES' PART

There can never be any doubt as to the tremendous and far-reaching influence of the 33rd I. E. C. would bring to the Philippines from an international outlook as well as from the standpoint of spiritual, moral, cultural and material blessings to the Filipino people. Our country claims the distinction as the "Pearl of the Orient" and above all, the only Christian nation in this part of the globe.

The reason why the 33rd I. E. C. is taking place this year (1937) instead of 1936, in accordance with the standing rule that congresses shall be held every two years and on even year is the fact that during the month of December (in 1936 as any other year) the likelihood of storm and bad weather would necessarily diminish the success of the congress. So it was decided to hold the congress on Feb. 3-7, 1937, and the next (34th) in 1938, so as to keep intact the "even year" rule.

THE PHILIPPINE DELEGATION TO XXXIV I.E.C. AT BUDAPEST

By United Press

BUDAPEST, May 27 (1938).—The Philippine delegation played an important part tonight in the second plenary session of the 34th International Eucharistic Congress.

Manuel C. Colayco delivered a brief address, the first in Tagalog ever made at an international Catholic meeting outside the Philippines.

Twenty Philippines women delegates wore mestiza dresses, winning the admiration of thousands of other delegates from other parts of the world.

Colayco recalled the 33rd Congress in Manila nearly 16 months ago and continued: "We come from the Orient in turmoil and strife in answer to your call that we may help fulfill the theme of the time...unity in thought and aspiration."

The Philippines delegation later heard an address by Mons. Michael J. O'Doherty, Archbishop of Manila.

THE XXXIII INTERNATIONAL EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

The Legate's Arrival—The Events—The End

(The Monday Mail, Feb. 8, 1935.)

THE XXXIII International Eucharistic Congress, which catapulted the Philippines to universal pontifical prominence, was held successfully in Manila from February 3 to 7 with an estimated attendance of 1,500,000 Catholic followers coming from different parts of the archipelago as well as from 62 nations of the world. After the formal closing of the religious convalescence that night with a

CONGRESS OPENS

THE formal opening of the XXXIII International Eucharistic Congress at the New Luneta was declared by aged Most Rev. Tho-

Eucharist, 81-year old Rev. Heylen finally said: "It is my pleasant duty as president of the permanent committee of the International Eucharistic Congress, to declare this thirty-third congress open."

Shortly before the opening of the congress a Papal procession attended by all priests, archbishops and bishops was held around the New Luneta at 6:00, with the Papal mission at the rear. Among the speakers on the first night of the congress were Rev. Mons. Pe-mas Louis Heylen, bishop of Namur, in the presence of 300,000 Catholic followers. It was estimated that 8,000,000 Filipinos representing 80 per cent of the country's population, and the whole world in general, physically or spiritually, heard the broadcast of the ceremonies. Speaking on the traditional hospitality of the Filipinos, the excellence of the Philippines as host in the congress, the Catholic dogma and the meaning of Holy dro Santos who read the Papal brief in Latin and Spanish; Rev. Austin N. Hannon who interpreted the message to English; Archbishop O'Doherty who spoke on the significance of the great event; His Eminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty who paid tribute to the Filipinos' effort in making the event a reality; and Bishop Finneman, president of the executive committee who read the cablegram of the Holy Father.

Fifty-two nations were represented at the congress and 66 flags were received at the congress headquarters at St. Rita's Hall for the procession last night.

The second day, February 4, was dedicated for women with a pontifical mass and general communion celebrated by Rev. Mons. Giovanni Battista Tong, vicar apostolic of Phai Dien, Indo-China, and a lengthy sermon by Most Rev. Gabriel M. Reyes, archbishop of Cebu. Beginning at 6:30 in the morning 100,000 women between the ages of 16 and 61 gathered to form a mighty feminine congregation at the New Luneta and received Holy Communion from 300 priests within 15 minutes. Bishop Reyes in his sermon in Spanish attacked communism as the primary root of social disorders and reminded the wives and young ladies of their obligation as mothers or mothers-to-be.

In conjunction with the general mass for women, similar masses were also celebrated by various bishops, prelates and priests in churches and chapels in Manila and in the provinces.

After the women's pontifical mass, the first international assembly was held at the Luneta with "The Holy Eucharist as a Sacrifice" as its theme. The conference was separately presided over by Mgr. Cesar Guerrero, bishop of Lingayen, and Mr. Joseph Scott of Los Angeles, who spoke on the theme of the day in Spanish and English, respectively. Seven prelates, each allotted to five minutes talk, were assigned to speak on the different aspects of the Holy Eucharist as a sacrifice.

50,000 MEN

In the men's pontifical mass and general communion at 12:00 p. m., February 5, 50,000 men devotees between the ages of 18 and 81 gathered at the New Luneta to hear Most Rev. Michael O'Doherty of Manila and Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco, celebrant and preacher respectively. Rev. Mitty spoke on the significance of men's faith to the Catholic religion and its influence on the progress of the Catholic world.

Last Friday morning at 6:30 a special poncontinuous attendance to the International Eucharistic Congress. Mons. Hipolito Martinez, prefect apostolic of Lichow, Hunan, who delivered the lay sermon, spoke on the Spanish missionary work in the Philippines, praised the Filipinos' abiding faith to the Church and advised the large gathering to go on with the spread of the Catholic religion.

60,000 TOTS

THE XXXIII International Eucharistic Congress did not in any way forget the tiny tots of Manila and nearby provinces. The pontifical morning mass of February 6, celebrated by Most Rev. Santiago Sanchez, Bishop of Vigan, was attended by 60,000 children ranging in age from six to fourteen, all flushing with religious enthusiasm.

The sermon of the mass was delivered by Most Rev. Francis X. Ford, vicar apostolic of Kaying, Kwangtung, China, after which the consecration of children and parents to the Blessed Virgin Mary was solemnly performed. Rev. Ford counseled the vast congregation of children to work for their salvation by praying regularly to God, to attend mass every Sunday and on feast days, and to take regular Holy Communion.

Present in the high mass were also 100 Igorote children who had been converted to the Catholic religion and brought to Manila for the Congress by the executive committee, 400 Chinese tots, and a number of foreign kids residing in the city.

EDITOR SPEAKS

Rev. James T. Gillis, editor of "The Catholic World", and Dr. José Ma. Delgado, chairman of the archdiocesan action, were the presiding officers at the third international assembly held on February 6 at the Luneta, attended by various church and civil dignitaries. The subject of the day, "The Eucharist and the Priesthood," was submitted by the chairmen for discussion by six bishops and prelates.

The last day of the XXXIII International Eucharistic Congress was featured by a solemn mass at 7:00 in the morning celebrated by His Eminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty which was attended by thousands of men and women, and a solemn procession of the Blessed Sacrament at four o'clock which started at the south end of the Dewey Boulevard and ended at the New Luneta where the Papal Legate performed the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

THE POPE OF PEACE

was born the son of a poor silk-weaver, in Desio, of Lombardy, Italy, May 31, 1857. He was reared amid the ceaseless clatter of the looms. Early in life, at first hand, he learned the lesson of labor.

He studied for the priesthood in Rome, and was ordained in 1879. When he was presented to Pope Leo XIII, three years later, on receiving two doctorates, the pontiff's hand lingered prophetically on the young priest's head.

Dr. Ratti worked as a humble curate and a convent chaplain for 50 years. "Here," he used to say, "I feel myself indeed a priest. Nothing can be pleasanter for me than to give Jesus to the souls of men." He was learning the lessons of love and humility.

In 1888 he was appointed librarian of the world-famous Ambrosian Library in 1912 prefect of the peerless Vatican Library. These were "the temples of knowledge, the schools of diplomacy, and the lofty observatories" where he learned the lessons of history, which repeats itself, and which he would help to make.

He was also a fearless mountain-climber. He was the first Italian to climb the eastern slope of Mount Rosa. On one trip to the summit of the Grand Paradiso, his guide slipped off a snow bridge into a crevasse. Without hesitation, Dr. Ratti drove his stick into the ground, wound the rope around it, and managed alone to save the man on the brink of the abyss. Here he acquired his rugged physical strength.

Defender of the City

In 1918 he was appointed apostolic visitor to Poland, the great Catholic nation that had emerged from a captivity of a century and a half. Later, he was named papal nuncio, the first in Poland in 125 years. He was consecrated at Warsaw in the presence of the President of the Republic.

The war was not yet over. The Red armies of Bolsheviki Russia knocked at the gates of Warsaw. The Polish government retreated to Posen. The foreign ambassadors left hurriedly. Only one, the papal nuncio, stayed behind. He became in Poland what Cardinal Mercier had been in Belgium. The defenders of Warsaw rallied around him; the Reds were outfought and retreated in disorder. Poland and Europe were saved. The President of the Republic named him Defensor Civitatis, Defender of the City.

In 1921, he was made cardinal-priest of the archbishop of Milan. After a meeting of the cardinal's hat, Pope Benedict XV said again prophetically: "Today we have imposed the red; soon they will be wearing the white. Only the Pope wears white."

Entering his archiepiscopal city, Ratti was greeted with shouts of "Long live the loyal cardinal!" He cheerily called back: "Long live the cardinal's boys!" He had not forgotten the lesson of humility and humility.

The night of his entrance, he blessed the foundation stone of the Casa del Popolo, the House of the People. His address made clear that he had not forgotten the lesson of labor, learned in the silk looms of Desio.

"Come you all to me!" he said. "The door of your father's house is always open. You may think of yourselves as people of little importance, poor and humble, but do not therefore think that your father's staircase is a long one; at least, however long it may be, do not doubt that you can easily climb it. If you are little in the world's esteem, humble, poor, bowed down with suffering, broken by life's burden, then I do but echo to you the Redeemer's words: 'Come to me, all ye who labor and are sad.'"

The long years of preparation were almost at an end. The lessons had been learned.

Pope Benedict XV died January 22, 1922, the heart-broken Pope of the Great War. Once more prophecy pointed a finger. The Archbishop of Milan, at the requiem mass in his cathedral, preached on a text that would soon be quoted of him: "He was a burning flame shining in a dark place."

The College of Cardinals met to choose the next Pope. Fifty-three princes of the Church entered the solemn conclave, imprisoned in the Vatican palace until they should arrive at a decision. Two more cardinals were racing across the Atlantic from the United States.

Way to Calvary

Two sessions were held each day, morning and evening. At each session, the votes, marked in disguised handwriting to conceal the voter's identity, were counted, then burnt in a straw-filled brazier. If a Pope had not been elected by the required two-thirds majority, the straw was dampened, and the rising column of smoke, rising out of the Vatican in the sight of the thousands waiting in the great square of St. Peter's, was black. When the Pope was chosen, the straw would not be dampened and the smoke would be white.

Again and again the ballots were deadlocked between Cardinal Gasparri and Cardinal Merry del Val, both renowned statesmen of the Church. Neither could obtain the two-thirds majority. Voting switched to Cardinal Laurenti who was elected. But he refused. Then Cardinal Ratti was elected.

"Fourteen scrutinies," remarked one cardinal, "the number of the stations of the Cross, were necessary before we had brought our new Pope to his Calvary."

All the princely canopies in the Sistine chapel were lowered except the one under which Cardinal Ratti sat. The Pope-elect bowed his head in meditation, seemingly unconscious of the cardinals who have thronged around him.

The cardinal dean asked: "Do you accept your election to the pontificate?"

Cardinal Ratti replied. "In spite of my unworthiness, of which I am profoundly conscious, I accept."

"What do you wish to be called?"

"Pius is a name of peace. Since I desire to consecrate my labors to the work of the peace of the world, I choose the name of Pius XI."

The election was at an end. One of the first and one of the last democracies of the world, the Roman Catholic Church had chosen the son of the silk-weaver to be its 261st Pope, Bishop of Rome, Vicar of Christ, Successor to the Prince of the Apostles, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church, Primate of Italy, Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Province of Rome, in the unbroken line of Peter the Fisherman, representative on earth of the Carpenter of Nazareth.

Lesson of Peace

He chose as his motto, Pax Christi in Regno Christi, the Peace of Christ in the Reign of Christ.

Pius XI was to learn the bitter lesson of patience, while he taught the world an unheard lesson of peace. Throughout his pontificate he worked for peace and prayed for peace.

Peace between Church and State. In 1929 he ended the voluntary imprisonment of the Popes, begun in 1870 when the new Kingdom of Italy had confiscated the papal states. In a treaty signed by Cardinal Gasparri and Premier Benito Mussolini, Italy acknowledged the sovereignty of the Pope over a tiny state, the size of a modern golf-course. Many Catholics protested that both the territory and the indemnity for the past seizure were too small.

"No desire of earthly greatness has entered the mind of the Vicar of Christ," said Pius. "It seems to Us in fact that we have reduced our demands according to the spirit of Blessed Saint Francis; we want only the amount of earthly goods which are necessary to keep body and soul together."

The same year, the 50th of his priesthood, he published the famed encyclical on Christian education, which defined the rights and duties of Church and State on the matter. He defended the right of the Church to watch over the entire education of her children, and attacked as unjust and unlawful "any monopoly, educational or scholastic, which physically or morally forces families to make use of government schools, contrary to the dictates of their Christian conscience, or contrary even to their legitimate preferences."

Peace between capital and labor. In 1931 Pius XI followed up the work of Leo XIII, the Pope of Labor, with his encyclical on the Social Order. The Pope praised and advocated unions for Christian workingmen, but attacked Socialistic and Communistic theories, and defended the right of private property. He affirmed the right of the worker to a just wage, sufficient to support himself and his family in frugal comfort.

"The mutual relations between capital and labor must be determined according to the laws of the strictest justice, supported however by Christian charity."

Life Work

Peace between nations. From the first moment of his pontificate, Pius labored for international good-will. In every crisis his voice was heard.

But he was attacked when he failed to condemn his "beloved Italy" in strong terms for the invasion of Ethiopia, and when he openly took the side of Generalissimo Francisco Franco against the Spanish Reds who had persecuted the Church without mercy.

But he was courageously impartial in the blasphemous battle of ideologies that raged around him. He condemned atheistic Communism solemnly in an encyclical issued in 1937. He denied that a Catholic could be a Communist, or a Communist a Catholic.

At the same time he was unbending against the neo-paganism of the Nazis in Germany. He condemned the persecution of the Jews that spread from Germany to Italy. "All men are members of one great human race," he said.

When Adolf Hitler visited Benito Mussolini in Rome, the Pope ostentatiously left the city and closed the Vatican.

As Vicar of Christ and spiritual sovereign of 400,000,000 Catholics throughout the world, Pius XI was a solicitous father and a sagacious ruler.

In the year he was elected to the papacy, 1922, he wrote his encyclical letter, Ubi Arcano Dei, containing the program of Catholic Action that was to revitalize the Church. He defined it as "the organized employment of all our forces in order to assert, make known, apply, and defend the principles of Christianity, according to the measure in which they affect the life of the individual, the family and society. It consists in the sanctity of its members and in the sanctification of our neighbors; it consists in doing good to others in all ways and senses, by all possible means."

Besides his great encyclicals on education and Communism, he wrote one of intimate interest to his flock, the encyclical on Christian marriage, published in 1931. He decried and condemned adultery, divorce, birth control and abortion. "We are deeply touched," he said, "by the sufferings of those parents, who in extreme want experience great difficulty in rearing their children. However, no difficulty can arise that justifies the putting aside of the law of God which forbids all acts intrinsically evil. There is no possible circumstance in which husband and wife cannot, strengthened by the grace of God, fulfill faithfully their duties and preserve in wed-lock their chastity unspotted."

With a golden hammer, he opened the Holy Door of St. Peter's, on Christmas eve, 1924, for the year of jubilee, 1925. A million pilgrims of every color and tongue knelt at the foot of the Common Father that year. He canonized the Little Flower, the humble consumptive nun, St. Therese of Lisieux, "the guiding star of my pontificate." He raised another example of saintly humility to the altars: St. John Vianney, the Cure d'Ars, patron of parish priests.

He proclaimed more saints than any other Pope in modern times: it was perhaps his way of saying that the age of miracles had not yet passed, and the Church of Rome was as vigorous as ever.

One of his greatest concerns was the missions of the Church. In 1926, he published a special encyclical letter on them, putting on the bishops a strict obligation to form a native clergy and to entrust the newly Christian people to its care, in order that the ancient discipline and Apostolic methods might be restored. He personally consecrated in St. Peter's, the first six Chinese bishops and the first Japanese.

For the Philippines, Catholic outpost in the pagan east, he had a special love. He called the Filipinos his "far-away children, but most beloved because the most distant."

He gave the new country one new archdiocese (Cebu, 1934), four new dioceses (Lingayen, 1928; Bacolod, 1932; Cagayan, 1933; Palo, 1937); two prefectures (Mountain Province, 1932; Mindoro, 1936). He bestowed in Manila the extraordinary honor of being the site of the 33rd International Eucharistic Congress in 1937.

President Manuel L. Quezon handsomely acknowledged last February another papal gift: the idea and the program of social justice.

An alert modern, Pope Pius XI put up his own radio station in Vatican City and used it frequently to keep in touch with the faithful all over the world. He introduced automobiles in the Vatican City, made talking pictures, encouraged science.

But above science and missions, he prized peace.

When he lay on his deathbed last February, he whispered, almost inaudibly: "Peace, peace, oh Jesus!"

Then, in the words of the official release, "serenely and with the spirituality which reflected the candor of a life spent entirely

HIS HOLINESS, POPE PIUS XI

Pope Successor of St. Peter, Bishop of Rome and Vicar of Christ

In the solemn morning of the 10th of February, 1929, the Pope, Pius XI, was elected to the papacy. He was the first Pope to be elected in the conclave since the death of Pope Pius X in 1914.

It was February 10, 1929, two days after the death of Pope Pius X.

THE NEW SUPREME PONTIFF OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

POPE PIUS XII CHOSEN BY ASPIRATION OF THE WHOLE CHRISTIAN WORLD

By
His Grace, Most Rev. Dr. M. J. O'Doherty
Archbishop of Munster

HIS HOLINESS, POPE PIUS XII

The only Catholic Pope who has been elected by the College of Cardinals since the death of Pope Pius XI in 1939. He was elected on October 26, 1955, and reigned until September 9, 1962. He was the first Pope to be elected by the College of Cardinals since the death of Pope Pius XI in 1939.

The present pope was intimately connected with the reign of his present predecessor for many years, and especially during the last nine years since he became Cardinal Secretary of State.

The late Pontiff had the greatest confidence in Cardinal Pacelli, and all the important pontifical pronouncements were prepared in collaboration with him. This is evident from the documents of appointment written regarding Cardinal Pacelli when he was sent as papal legate to the XXXII International Eucharistic Congress at Buenos Aires, and again as papal legate to Lourdes and to the Blessing of the Basilica of Saint Teresita of the Child Jesus in Lisieux. In these documents Pius XI speaks in terms of grateful affection regarding his invaluable Secretary of State.

When the late pope died we were for a moment filled with sorrow and some dismay at the passing of such a holy scholar and just ruler as Pius XI was. But then we remembered Cardinal Pacelli and while our sorrow remained, our dismay disappeared.

It may be truly said that the present pope has been elected not merely by the votes of his brother cardinals but also by the aspirations of the whole Christian world. He was the best known of all the members of the Sacred College, not merely because his position brought him into prominence, but also because of his travels in so many different countries.

The new pope knows Germany perhaps better than any other country outside his own, because he lived there for several years as Apostolic Delegate. He was papal legate in France more than once. Last year he was papal legate at the XXXIV International Eucharistic Congress in Budapest, as well as previously in the Argentine.

So far Pius XII is the only pope who had visited the United States. He visited more individual states than most American citizens. He used the airplane constantly, flying from New York to Los Angeles, zigzagging up and down the country, so that when he finally sailed from New York he had visited thirty-six out of forty-eight states, under the Stars and Stripes. Among other places, he went to Washington and visited President Roosevelt.

Cardinal Pacelli gained the admiration and affection of all who had the pleasure of speaking to him for even a few minutes, because of his simple manners and humility. And he was able to talk to everybody, as he is one of the most remarkable linguists of our day.

After Italian it is difficult to say whether he speaks Latin, German or French with greater ease, but he is eloquent in all three of them. Then come Spanish, English and

Luigi Maglione
Cardinal Secretary of State

Portuguese, not to mention a number of other languages like Hungarian, which he reads easily and can speak slowly. Last year in Budapest, we heard him give eloquent discourses in Latin, French, Italian and Hungarian.

It can be easily imagined what an asset to him is his knowledge of languages in getting first-hand information from the press of the world, and also in receiving visitors in the Vatican and conversing with them in their own language.

Cardinal Pacelli's field was mostly that of diplomacy, and critics from many different countries, in Europe especially, have not hesitated in giving him the title of the greatest statesman in the world today.

There is every indication that the onward march of the Catholic Religion in the world will continue as in the reign of Pius XI, because the present pope was intimately connected with the late pope, and he has selected the same name, Pius. The motto of the last pope was "The peace of Christ in the Kingdom of Christ," and the name of the present pope is "Peace." Pacelli comes from "par" or "peace."

CARDINAL PECELLI, arriving in Budapest as Papal Legate to the XXXIV International Eucharistic Congress held in 1938.

If Pius XII has as glorious a reign as his predecessor, he will have accomplished a wonderful life. And yet he may do more: he has all the qualifications for a perfect ruler. So his work for Christianity may surpass that of his immediate predecessors.

Cardinal Pacelli has already broken many records. It has been a tradition that a secretary of state is never elected pope, and Cardinal Pacelli has the honor of being the first to be elected in such circumstances.

There is also an Italian proverb which says the new pope is always a surprise or, as we say, "a dark horse." The cardinals who enter the conclave as recognized favorites for the Papal Throne leave the conclave just as they entered, namely, as cardinals, but on the other hand some cardinal who had not attracted much attention from the public goes in as a humble cardinal in popular estimation and leaves the conclave as the ruler of Christendom. Here was another break with tradition, for the name of Cardinal Pacelli was in every mouth as the coming pontiff, and so it has come about in spite of tradition.

If he surpasses Pius XI he will have accomplished very much. May it turn out thus for the glory of our Father and the happiness of all our brethren.

CONCLAVE—The assembly of the Roman Catholic cardinals for the election of a Pope. A two-thirds vote is necessary for an election. The cardinals meet in a part of the Vatican which has been divided into several small apartments. After the first day they are locked in and are allowed no communication with the outer world till after the election takes place. Even the food, passed through a window, is thoroughly examined that no letters or notes may reach the members of the Sacred College.

SACRED COLLEGE, or College of Cardinals, the entire body of cardinals in the Roman Catholic Church. The cardinals are appointed by the Pope, and they assist him in managing the affairs of the Church. At present, there are seventy cardinals, but the number has varied from time to time. The Sacred College is a corporate body, with an income of its own. Its most solemn duty is, upon the death of the Pope, to elect his successor. During the election, the members are excluded from intercourse with the public.—The American Educator.

ARCHBISHOP O'DOHERTY PRAISES THE NEW POPE

Local Catholics Join in Celebration of Coronation of Pope Pius XII.

Catholic Philippines joined in the celebration of the pontifical coronation of Pope Pius XII at St. Peter's Basilica when a Te Deum was sung at the Manila Cathedral last Sunday, March 12. High government and church officials attended the ceremonies, headed by Chief Justice Ramon Avanceña and Apostolic Delegate William Piani, respectively.

The sermon by Archbishop Michael O'Doherty was the highlight of the occasion. He started his sermon by pointing that the local celebration was being held simultaneously with the crowning of Pope Pius XII in Rome. Then he offered a thanksgiving for the election of a new Pope to succeed the late Pope Pius XI.

"Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli," Archbishop O'Doherty said, "was a happy choice for a pope as in him are combined the virtues of piety and humility."

"The new pope—the Archbishop said—will also have the interest of the Philippines deep in heart, like Pope Pius XI." He recalled that in his latest visit to Rome, the new Pope expressed his desire of knowing more about the Philippines and her people.

The Archbishop's sermon follows in full:

MY DEAR FRIENDS:

As we sit here in the Cathedral of Manila, under the flags of half a hundred nations, Pius XII is being crowned in Rome as the spiritual head of the Universal Church. He is going to rule the Church of Christ. Quo Vadis Domine? Will his reign be successful? Nobody doubts the answer, for the answer is certain. His reign will not be ruthless, overbearing, crushing conquered nations through force of arms—for his kingdom is not of this world. But he will light up the world of truth; he will strengthen the wavering by his example of humility; he will lead all earnest Christians along the royal road of the cross. And with this triple breastplate of faith, humility and sacrifice, his reign will be successful, for the Lord Jesus has promised, "Behold I shall be with you all days even to the consummation of the world."

According to the prophecies of St. Melachy, Pius XII is a foretaken victim, and should it prove true, no man will ever meet his fate so joyously, so serenely as Eugene Pacelli, but no one thinks of that in Rome today. Pilgrims are present from every nation on the face of the earth. Eighty thousand people covet even standing space in the precincts and surroundings of the greatest shrine in Christendom, and a million people surge in the open from the Piazza of St. Peter's to the historic banks of the Tiber. Those who have witnessed a great papal ceremony in St. Peter's confess that it cannot be reproduced in words. For, besides the beauty of the basilica, with its vaulting columns and arches, with the largest and loftiest dome in Christendom, the statues of Michelangelo, the columns of Bernini, and the silver trumpets, announcing the appearance of the Pope with his gorgeous retinue, there is that intangible otherworldly atmosphere produced by the coalition of hundreds of thousands of human wills poured forth as the essence of Christianity in Faith, Love, Sacrifice to the Creator as remembered through the coronation of his chief representative on earth.

And as the ceremonies proceed in Rome, they are accompanied by the prayers of every Christian community from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof. And so we in Manila come to sing our Te Deum—our hymn of thanks to God—because He has given us a new leader in Israel, the Pastor Angelicus, whose elevation to the throne of Peter has been acclaimed by the whole world.

This world-wide celebration is a most consoling realization of St. Paul's wish, when he said, "One body and one spirit as you are called in one hope of your election. One Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all and in us all."

Pius XII comes to rule in exceptional circumstances. The outlook is not encouraging, and still he knows he is going to succeed. Pius X came to rule a world still mainly inspired by Faith. Benedict XV saw religion ravaged during the Great War. "Religio depopulata." Pius XI entered a world which had not yet found its bearings after the hurricane, but a few years after his accession he confessed in "Quadragesima Anno" that the world had almost lapsed into paganism.

This great Pope did much to stem the tide of atheistic communism, but such remains to be done. The tenacity and enthusiasm of the communist is really worthy of a better cause. Would that their system should be constructive, but alas! communism and destruction are synonymous. They fight until they destroy, or be destroyed; so their fate is destruction, because they cannot destroy Christ the King.

The chief work of the new Pope, as of all his predecessors, will be to dispel the clouds of unbelief, and let the bright rays of divine Faith shine again in the heart and intellect of this modern world.

To convince this modern world to return to the simple methods of the days of Faith seems almost an impossibility, but Cardinal Pacelli has had a way of conquering traditional impossibilities. Some people thought Cardinal Pacelli would not be elected Pope, for tradition says no Cardinal Secretary of State has ever been elected to the Pontifical Throne. Yet, Pius XII was not merely Secretary of State, but also Camerlengo of the Church during the interregnum. The chances were also against the election of a Cardinal in Curia, that is residing in Rome. Yet Cardinal Pacelli not only resided in Rome, but is also Roman born, and no Roman has been elected Pope since the ascension of Innocent III, in the year 1721. There is an Italian proverb which says the new Pope is always a surprise, or as we say, "a dark horse". The cardinals who entered the conclave as recognized favorites for the Papal Throne, leave the conclave just as they entered, namely as Cardinals, but on the other hand some Cardinal, who had not attracted much attention from the public enters as a humble cardinal in popular estimation, and leaves the conclave as the ruler of Christendom. Here was another break with tradition for the name of Cardinal Pacelli was in every mouth as the coming Pontiff, and so it was turned out in spite of tradition.

If he did break such customs, it is due to his own attractive personality, donated to him by God, for he gained the love and respect of his brother bishops and cardinals; and so each cardinal in depositing his vote for Eugene Pacelli could say, according to statute, "I take as witness Christ our Lord, Who one day will be my judge, that I have chosen him whom I believe it my duty towards God to choose."

It was my great privilege to have long intimate conversations with Cardinal Pacelli in the apartments of the Secretariat of State on the occasion of my visits to Rome, and as I said goodbye to him on each occasion, the uppermost feeling in my heart was, "This is truly a man of God." I could not well decide whether I admired more his great ability, or his unassuming humility. In his every utterance one could discern his complete dedication to God, over and above the thought of all created things, and then a tender love for all the brethren, for all the children of God—for the people for whom Christ died.

In our conversation, we touched on the question of preaching, and His Eminence said: "Oh, I love to be with the people and to teach them." And then he looked wistfully at his table covered with piled-up correspondence, and continued, "I have much to do here, and yet whenever I am invited to preach in the churches of Rome, I accept willingly, I love to be with the people." Another man might feel legitimate pride in being Secretary of State to the Pope, but this single-minded man of God confided to me, "You know I am tired of all these papers (with a wave of his hand toward his work table) I would prefer to be with the people," and then he concluded quite simply, "but you know we must help the Holy Father." And now he himself is the Holy Father. He is with the people and his love is universal. Hence, it is not surprising to hear, as we learned by telegraph, that one of his first mea-sages was for all those who do not call them Catholics, "Tell them the Holy Father thinks of them and prays for them." There is a luminous example for the millions of Catholics in these Islands, "Love your neighbor as yourself," and your neighbor is mankind of every description, without distinction of race or religion.

And so Pius XII enters the arena as leader in the Christian Crusade to keep the faith pure and untarnished against all the allurements, enticements, blandishments, and even cowardly threats of a world, bowed down in adoration before passing pleasures and possessions, whose end is destruction. He will follow in the footsteps of Pius XI and be a fearless defender of human dignity, with all its rights and liberties.

He will vindicate the right of every Christian to freedom of action within the Law of God, and the right of every citizen to freedom of action within the laws of his Country, provided such laws do not contravene the higher laws of the creator. Neither democracies, nor totalitarian states, have any monopoly of perfect statescraft, and both are surely on the wrong road when they discard the first command of Infinite Wisdom. "Love God above all things," or its corollary "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

And in these days of easy so-called "divorce", Pius XII will continue his crusade to preserve the sanctity of the home, knowing well that divorce is the greatest enemy of the family and the greatest enemy of the state, which is made up of individual families.

In the great question of Capital versus Labor, the Pope will not be against the rich, and not against the poor but on the side of justice for a reasonable distribution of the profits; because, as his predecessor said "Capital can not get on without labor, and labor can not get on without capital, and the laborer is worthy of a living wage."

Who can doubt that our new Pope will take an intense interest on the development of Catholic Action, or the organization of the lay people, when he has declared so often his love for the people? I hope all the lay people of the world will hearken to his voice. Now that we hear so much of the popular front in Russia, formerly in Spain—now no more, thank God—and even in France, it is time for all men of good will to form our Christian Front and save the world from the ruin and suffering which can be the only fruit of atheism.

He will bend his own efforts to build up the mystical body of Christ the King, inviting the whole world to forget the materialistic cant, that life is a struggle for existence, and success must be gained at the cause of our neighbor's failure. He will invite all men to lay down the implements of war, to live in peace and love, believe that we must rather seize every opportunity to being serviceable to our fellow beings, than plot methods for destroying them.

The present Pope was a faithful servant to his four predecessors, and especially to his immediate superior Pius XI. By being obedient to authority he showed that in this respect he merited to rule. May he be blessed in turn by having spiritual subjects and co-operators who respect authority. This want of respect for authority in all its shapes and forms is one of the five modern evils of which Benedict XV complained. There should be respect for authority in the family, in the civil forum and in the Church. The lack of this respect is beginning to make itself felt even in the Philippine Islands. The family authority is backed by one of the commandments "Honor thy father and thy mother," and the Lord Jesus himself has said, "Give unto Caesar the things of Caesar, and to God the things that are of God."

Some philosophers put undue emphasis on one or other of these injunctive clauses, but the Lord makes no such distinction. The civil authority has the same source as the spiritual, and vice versa, for all authority comes from God.

Let us, therefore, today in these favored islands sing a Te Deum for the gift of a new and consoling spiritual ruler, and give thanks for the continuance of a temporal government which respects the liberty and dignity of its citizens, and rules by the norm of justice.

Our religion teaches us our duty to our civil rulers—"Give to Caesar the things of Caesar, and to God the things that are of God." May God inspire the heads of all nations to cooperate with Pius XII, the Pastor Angelicus, whose kingdom is not of this world, so that we may have again world peace, for the greater honor of God and the salvation of souls."

Vatican City, March 12, 1959.—Pope Pius XII was crowned here today as supreme pontiff of the Roman Catholic faith in a ceremonial of medieval splendor.

A festive crowd of 350,000 persons thronged famous St. Peter's Square to watch the actual coronation on the balcony of the Basilica. It was the first outdoor coronation in nearly a century.

Within St. Peter's Cathedral, mother church of the Roman Catholic faith, a huge congregation of royal princes, prelates, diplomats, pilgrims, priests, and the faithful witnessed the impressive coronation mass and investiture.

For the first time, in the history of the Vatican the radio was employed to broadcast the ceremonies to the world at large. It was the first time since the reign of Pius IX in 1846 that the investiture was within the view of the multitude outside the cathedral.

Pius XII chose the same tiara used in the coronation of Pius IX symbolizing the end of the 59 year controversy between the Holy See and the Italian state which had kept popes voluntary prisoners within the Vatican and had prevented coronations in public view.

The New Pope, successor to the late "pontiff of peace," Pius XI, sat on a gilded temporary throne on the Basilica balcony halfway up the facade of majestic St. Peter's, to receive the crown. The throne canopy was of rich crimson tapestry while the crown keys of St. Peter's, embroidered in gold, hung from the railings. The canopy was fringed with gold.

A warm midday sun beamed from a cloud-flecked sky as the ceremony came to a climax. Almost at the stroke of 1:00 p.m., the deans of the Roman cardinals carried out their part of the elaborate ceremonies. Camillo Cardinal Caccia Dominioni and Nicola Cardinal Canali appeared beside the throne with attendants bearing white candles and the golden cross.

The Pope, clad in white robes heavily embroidered in gold and wearing the gold cloth mitre, was borne to the balcony as the huge throng roared "viva il papa." Cardinal Canali removed the pontiff's mitre leaving the white skull cap on his head. Cardinal Caccia Dominioni took the gem studded tiara from its red velvet cushion and placed it gently on Pius's head.

The multitude became silent as the Pope recited the papal absolution and repeatedly raised his hand in the pontifical blessing.

After the coronation, the Pope stood for a moment at the balcony railing his white gloved hands upraised. He then mounted the portable throne and was carried to the Vatican Palace.

The coronation mass in St. Peter's was preceded by an impressive procession. The Pope entered the great nave of the Cathedral at 9:00 a.m., after attendants had assisted him to don the papal mantle and the mitre. —The Tribune, March 14, 1959.

HIS FIRST MESSAGE TO THE WORLD

The first message of His Holiness Pope Pius XII, delivered less than 24 hours after his election by the Sacred College, was an invitation to peace—peace of conscience, peace of families, and peace among nations. Part of his message follows:

"While the most profound emotion pervades Our soul and We feel bewildered before the tremendous responsibility to which Divine Providence, in its inscrutable designs, has wished to call Us, We feel the need to reach all with Our thought, Our own first paternal word. x x x

"May the copious, beneficent and choicest blessings of Heaven descend upon each and every one.

"But in this solemn moment Our thought runs also to all those outside the Church to whom it will be pleasing to know that the Pope raises for them to God his best and greatest prayer and wishes for every good. x x x

"We invite all to the peace of a tranquil conscience in friendship with God, to the peace of families united and harmonized by much love of Christ, and, finally, to a peace between nations through fraternal help, reciprocal and loving collaboration, and cordial understanding for the superior interests of the great human family under the eyes and protection of Divine Providence. x x x "

MEMBERS OF THE COLLEGE OF CARDINALS

On March 1, 1939, the Sacred College of Cardinals opened the conclave in the Sistine Chapel to elect a new Pope. The following day Cardinal Eugene Pacelli, pontifical secretary of state, was elected to succeed the late Pope Pius XI.

The College of Cardinals, when complete, is made up of 70 members, of whom 6 are Cardinal-Bishops, 50 are Cardinal-Priests, and 14 are Cardinal-Deacons. At present, however, the Sacred College has only 62 members, the late Pontiff being unable to fill up the vacancies because of this sudden death two days previous to the creation of new cardinals.

Let Your Savings Be Your Right Hand

HEAD-RACKING PROBLEM of YOUR LIFE

Forced by the Tydings-McDuffie Law, the amended, every working man, rich and humble alike, faces the urgent problem: "WHERE BEST SHOULD I INVEST MY SAVINGS and RESOURCES to OFFSET the COMING SHARP, REPEATED FALLS IN MY SALARY or INCOME RESULTING from that LAW?"

Is your income below ₱1,000 a month? Are you now advanced in age? Are you self-contented, slow to act? Is your family large? Are your resources invested in locally-dependent businesses?

Then surely the WORSE your hardships shall be. You know this. Do you have or think of having life insurance? Your expenses normally heavy? With expenses and taxes growing, but income FALLING, how then can you carry on, and have the same comforts? How can your children well continue their studies and prepare for life?

Your savings and resources invested NOW, not tomorrow, in our Merchant Marine can provide you the strongest financial returns and security that no other business can give.

NOT 1¢ YOU to LOSE to OPEN the SOURCE of GREATEST MILLIONS to PROFIT

I. IN THE FIRST PLACE—NOT 1¢ YOU TAKE CHANCE WITH OR RISK: We incorporate before DECEMBER or the GOVERNMENT orders return of your money invested, — INTACT, UNTOUCHED. We acquire the ships and begin operations about 3 months from incorporation.

II. IN THE SECOND PLACE — GREATEST RETURNS FOR YOU, YOUR COUNTRY, and PEOPLE:

1. You Get the Greatest Profits — SAFER, QUICKER, STEADIER, HIGHER than you can get from any other business — be it the richest gold mines, real estate, farming, industries, commerce or any LOCALLY-DEPENDENT business — DOUBLY, TREBLY more so after 1941 when the Ty-McD.

Law begins injuring badly these other businesses.

2. At the same time, YOU HELP in the GREATEST DEVELOPMENT of the COUNTRY and the IMPROVEMENT of OUR PEOPLE.

Why risk further your savings, why rack your head with long waiting, with problems, and worry managing it yourself—any locally-dependent business; after all — only to earn less, if you earn any at all? Why yet keep savings idle in "savings", or in Bank?

The TRANS-OCEANIC — at your leisure — can earn for your investment, (be it only ₱1 or ₱1,000,000) profits Safer, Quicker, Steadier, Higher than you can get from any other businesses.

The strongest hope of our thousands of families of moderate savings

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislature.

He has effected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of Trial by Jury:

For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences:

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms. Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus Marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

WE, THEREFORE, the REPRESENTATIVES of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, IN GENERAL CONGRESS, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly PUBLISH and DECLARE, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT States: that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which INDEPENDENT STATES may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, We mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

APPENDIX II

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS

Extracts from His Address Counselling the Maintenance of the Union,—Confinement of the General Government to its Constitutional Limitations, and Avoidance of Relations with Foreign Political Affairs.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES ON HIS APPROACHING RETIREMENT FROM THE PRESIDENCY.

Here, perhaps, I ought to stop; but a solicitude for your welfare, which cannot end but with my life, and the apprehension of danger natural to that solicitude, urge me, on an occasion like the present, to offer to your wisdom, contemplation, and to recommend to your frequent review some sentiments, which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation, and which appear to me all-important to the permanency of your felicity as a people. These will be afforded to you with the more freedom, as you can only see in them the disinterested warnings of a parting friend, who can possibly have no personal motive to bias his counsel; nor can I forget, as an encouragement to it, your indulgent reception of my sentiments on a former and not dissimilar occasion.

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.

Preservation of the Union.

The unity of government, which constitutes you one people, is also now dear to you. It is justly so; for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence—the support of your tranquillity at home, your peace abroad, of your safety, of your prosperity, of that very liberty which you so highly prize. But as it is easy to foresee that, from different causes and from different quarters, much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth; as this is the point in your political fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed—it is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to it; accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as the palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can, in any event, be abandoned; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts.

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest. Citizens by birth or choice of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of America, which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism, more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. With slight shades of differences, you have the same religion, manners, habits, and political principles. You have, in a common cause, fought and triumphed together; the independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint counsels and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings and successes.

Encroachments by the Government.

It is important, likewise, that the habits of thinking, in a free country should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department, to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power, and proneness to abuse it which predominates in the human heart, is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal, against invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments, ancient and modern; some of them in our own country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be, in any particular, wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change or usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always overbalance, in permanent evil, any partial or transient benefit, which the use can, at any time, yield.

Observe good faith and justice toward all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all; religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt that, in the course of times and things, the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

Entanglements with Foreign Powers.

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake; since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy to be useful, must be impartial; else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation, and excessive dislike for another, cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil, and even second, the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favorite, are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people, to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon, to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Parting Counsels.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend, I dare not hope that they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish; that they will control the usual current of the passions, or prevent our nation from running the course which hitherto has marked the destiny of nations; but if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit; some occasional good; that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit, to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigues, to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism; this hope will be full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare by which they have been dictated.

United States, September 17, 1796.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG SPEECH

Address at the Dedication of Gettysburg Cemetery, November 19, 1863.

Four scores and seven years ago our fathers brought forth, upon this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that "all men are created equal".

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived, and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of it, as a final resting place for those who died here, that the nation might live. This we may, in all propriety do. But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow, this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have hallowed it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here; while it can never forget what they did here.

It is rather for us, the living, we here be dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that, from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they here, gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people by the people for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

APPENDIX IV

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

"The Monroe doctrine" was enunciated in the following words in President Monroe's message to Congress, December 2, 1823:

"In the discussions to which this interest has given rise, and in the arrangements by which they may terminate, the occasion has been deemed proper for asserting, as a principle in which rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power. . . . We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintain it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

APPENDIX V

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

The Constitution originally consisted of a preamble and seven Articles, and in that form was adopted (Sept. 17, 1787) by a majority of the 55 delegates from 12 states which had begun their deliberations in Philadelphia on May 12 of that year. Rhode Island sent no delegates. Of the 65 chosen by other states, 10 did not attend. Of the delegates in attendance, 16 declined or failed to sign.

Under the language of the Constitution itself (Article VII) ratification by 9 states, by convention, was sufficient for its establishment "between the states so ratifying the same." New Hampshire, on June 21, 1788, was the ninth state to ratify. But the Government did not declare the Constitution to be in effect until the first Wednesday in March, 1789.

The signers of the original Constitution, by virtue of their membership in Congress, were:

GEO. WASHINGTON, President and deputy from Virginia. New Hampshire—John Langdon, Nicholas Gilman. Massachusetts—Nathaniel Gorham, Rufus King. Connecticut—Wm. Saml. Johnson, Roger Sherman. New York—Alexander Hamilton. New Jersey—Wm. Livingston, David Brearley, Wm. Patterson, Jona. Dayton. Pennsylvania—R. Franklin, Robt. Morris, Thos. Fitzsimons, James Wilson, Thomas Mifflin, Geo. Clymer, Jared Ingersoll, Gouv. Morris. Delaware—Gen. Reed, John Dickinson, Jaro Brown, Gunning Bedford jun., Richard Bassett. Maryland—James McHenry, Danl. Carroll, Dan. Jenifer, of St. Thom. Virginia—John Blair, James Madison, Jr. North Carolina—Wm. Blount, Hu. Williamson, Richd. Dobbs Spaight. South Carolina—John Rutledge, Charles Pinckney, Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Pierre Butler. Georgia—William Few, Abr. Baldwin. ATTNEY: William Jackson, Secretary.

The Constitution was ratified by conventions, by the 13 original States in the following order:

Del. (Dec. 7, 1787), unanimous; Penn. (Dec. 12, 1787), 43 to 23; N. J. (Dec. 18, 1787), unanimous; Ga. (Jan. 2, 1788), unanimous; Conn. (Jan. 9, 1788), 128 to 40; Mass. (Feb. 6, 1788), 187 to 168; Md. (Apr. 28, 1788), 63 to 11; So. Car. (May 21, 1788), 149 to 73; New Ham. (June 21, 1788), 57 to 46; Va. (June 26, 1788), 89 to 79; N. Y. (July 26, 1788), 30 to 27; No. Car. (Nov. 21, 1789), 194 to 77; R. I. (May 29, 1790), 34 to 22.

(Vermont, by convention, ratified (Jan. 10, 1791) 105 to 4; and Congress (Feb. 18, 1791), admitted that State into the Union.)

THE CONSTITUTION — Original Seven Articles

Preamble.—We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this CONSTITUTION for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

Legislative Powers.—SECTION I. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

House of Representatives.—SECTION II. 1. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature.

Qualifications of Representatives.—2. No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Apportionment of Representatives.—3. Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each State shall have at least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose 3; Massachusetts, 8; Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, 1; Connecticut, 5; New York, 6; New Jersey, 4; Pennsylvania, 8; Delaware, 1; Maryland, 6; Virginia, 10; North Carolina, 5; South Carolina, 5, and Georgia, 3.*

Vacancies, How Filled.—4. When vacancies happen in the representation from any State, the Executive Authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

Officers, How Appointed.—5. The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker and other officers, and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

Senate.—SECTION III. 1. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote.†

Classification of Senators.—2. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

Qualifications of Senators.—3. No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

President of the Senate.—4. The Vice-President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided.

5. The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice-President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the United States.

Senate a Court for Trial of Impeachments.—6. The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

Judgment in Case of Conviction.—7. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment, according to law.

*See Article XIV, Amendments.

†See Article XVII, Amendments.

Elections of Senators and Representatives.—SECTION IV. 1. The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to places of choosing Senators.

Meeting of Congress.—2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Organization of Congress.—SECTION V. 1. Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

Rule of Proceedings.—2. Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds expel a member.

Journals of each House.—3. Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either House on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Adjournment of Congress.—4. Neither House, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Pay and Privileges of Members.—SECTION VI. 1. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either House they shall not be questioned in any other place.

Other Offices Prohibited.—2. No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either House during his continuance in office.

Revenue Bills.—SECTION VII. 1. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives, but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills.

How Bills Become Laws.—2. Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate shall, before it become a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and if approved by two-thirds of that House it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return; in which case it shall not be a law.

Approval and Veto Powers of the President.—3. Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the Senate and the House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

Powers Vested in Congress.—SECTION VIII. 1. The Congress shall have power:

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.

2. To borrow money on the credit of the United States.

3. To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes.

4. To establish an uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States.

5. To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures.

6. To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States.

7. To establish post-offices and post-roads.

8. To promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited-times to authors and inventors the exclusive rights to their respective writings and discoveries.

9. To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court.

10. To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations.

11. To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water.

12. To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years.

13. To provide and maintain a navy.

14. To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

15. To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

16. To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress.

17. To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dry-docks, and other needful buildings.

18. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

Immigrants, How Admitted.—SECTION IX. 1. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.

Habeas Corpus.—2. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

Attainder.—3. No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

Direct Taxes.—4. No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

Regulations Regarding Customs Duties.—5. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.

6. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another, nor shall vessels bound to or from one State be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

Moneys, How Drawn.—7. No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

Titles of Nobility Prohibited.—8. No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States. And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state.

Powers of States Defined.—SECTION X. 1. No State shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

2. No State, shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any impost or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any State on imports or exports shall be for the use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress.

3. No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another State, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

Executive Power, in Whom Vested.—SECTION I. 1. The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the Vice-President, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

Electors.—2. Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector.

Proceedings of Electors.—Proceedings of the House of Representatives.—3. The electors shall meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each, which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately choose by ballot one of them for President; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said House shall in like manner choose the President. But in choosing the President, the vote shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote. A quorum, for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all States shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the President, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the Vice-President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the Senate shall choose from them by ballot the Vice-President.*

Time of Choosing Electors.—4. The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

Qualifications of the President.—5. No Person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

Provision in Case of His Disability.—6. In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice-President and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice-President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Salary of the President.—7. The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Oath of the President.—8. Before he enter on the execution of his office he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States.

Duties of the President.—SECTION II. 1. The President shall be Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States except in cases of impeachment.

May Make Treaties, Appoint Ambassadors, Judges, etc.—2. He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

May Fill Vacancies.—3. The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

May Make Recommendations to and Convene Congress.—SECTION III. He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

How Officers May Be Removed.—SECTION IV. The President, Vice-President, and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

Judicial Power, How Vested.—SECTION I. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

To What Cases it Extends.—SECTION II. 1. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizens of another State; between citizens of different States; between citizens of the same State, claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens or subjects.

Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.—2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a State shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before-mentioned the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

Rules Respecting Trials.—3. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

Treason Defined.—SECTION III. 1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

How Punished.—2. The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

Rights of States and Records.—SECTION I. Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

Privileges of Citizens.—SECTION II. 1. The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States.

Executive Requisitions.—2. A person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the Executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime.

Laws Regulating Service or Labor.—3. No person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

New States, How Formed and Admitted.—SECTION III. 1. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union, but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State, nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned, as well as of the Congress.

Power of Congress over Public Lands.—2. The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Republican Government Guaranteed.—SECTION IV. The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government and shall protect each of them against invasion; and, on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

Constitution, How Amended.—The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress; provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the Ninth Section of the First Article; and that no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

ARTICLE VI.

Validity of Debts Recognized.—1. All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution as under the Confederation.

Supreme Law of the Land Defined.—2. This constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

Oath: of Whom Required and for What.—3. The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States, and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

Ratification of the Constitution.—The ratification of the Conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the same.

DONE in Convention by the unanimous consent of the States present the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the twelfth. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names

Geo. WASHINGTON

President and Deputy from Virginia.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

Articles in addition to, and Amendments of, the Constitution of the United States of America, proposed by Congress, and ratified by the Legislatures of the several states, pursuant to the Fifth Article of the original Constitution.

THE TEN ORIGINAL AMENDMENTS (So-Called Bill of Rights)

ARTICLE I.

Religion and Free Speech.—Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE II.

Right to Bear Arms.—A well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

ARTICLE III.

Soldiers in Time of Peace.—No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE IV.

Right of Search.—The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

ARTICLE V.

Capital Crimes and Arrest Therefor.—No person shall be held to answer for a capital or other infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

ARTICLE VI.

Right to Speedy Trial.—In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defence.

ARTICLE VII.

Trial by Jury.—In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.

ARTICLE VIII.

Excessive Bail.—Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE IX.

Enumeration of Rights.—The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X.

Reserved Rights of States.—The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

AMENDMENTS SINCE THE BILL OF RIGHTS

ARTICLE XI.

Judicial Power.—The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States, by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State.

ARTICLE XII.

Electors in Presidential Elections.—The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the Government of the United States directed to the President of the Senate; the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States.

ARTICLE XIII.

Slavery Prohibited.—1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XIV.

Protection for all Citizens.—1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Apportionment of Representatives.—2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being of twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

Rebellion Against the United States.—3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid and comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

The Public Debt.—4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

ARTICLE XV.

Right of Suffrage.—1. The right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

2. The Congress shall have power to enforce the provisions of this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XVI.

Income Taxes.—The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States and without regard to any census or enumeration.

ARTICLE XVII.

Election of Senators.—The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislatures.

When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies, provided that the Legislature of any State may empower the Executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the Legislature may direct.

ARTICLE XVIII.

Liquor Prohibition.—1. After one year from the ratification of this article, the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

ARTICLE XIX.

Woman Suffrage.—1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any State, on account of sex.

Congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to enforce the provisions of this article.

RATIFICATION OF THE PREVIOUS AMENDMENTS

Articles I to X were declared in force in 1791; Article XI in 1798; Article XII in 1804; Article XIII was proclaimed in December, 1865; Article XIV was proclaimed in July, 1868; Article XV was proclaimed in 1870; Article XVI and Article XVII were proclaimed in 1913; Article XVIII was proclaimed in January, 1919, and took effect in 1920; Article XIX was proclaimed in 1920.

ARTICLE XX

Terms of President and Vice-President to begin on Jan. 20; those of Senators and Representatives on Jan. 3.—The following amendment was proposed to the Legislatures of the several States by the Seventy-second Congress, in March, 1932, a joint resolution to that effect having been adopted, first by the House, and then, on March 2, by the Senate.

On Feb. 8, 1933, the Secretary of State proclaimed it in effect, 39 of the 48 States having ratified. By Oct. 15, 1933, it had been ratified by all of the 48 States.

Section 1. The terms of the President and Vice-President shall end at noon, on the 20th day of January, and the terms of Senators and Representatives at noon, on the 3rd day of January, of the years in which such terms would have ended if this article had not been ratified; and the terms of their successors shall then begin.

Section 2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year and such meeting shall begin at noon on the third day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Section 3. If, at the time fixed for the beginning of the term of the President, the President elect shall have died, the Vice-President elect shall become President. If a President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, or if the President elect shall have failed to qualify, then, the Vice-President elect shall act as President until a President shall have qualified; and the Congress may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President elect nor a Vice-President elect shall have qualified, declaring who shall then act as President, or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected, and such person shall act accordingly until a President or Vice-President shall have qualified.

Section 4. The Congress may by law provide for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the House of Representatives may choose a President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them, and for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the Senate may choose a Vice-President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them.

Section 5. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect on the 15th day of October following the ratification of this article (Oct. 1933).

Section 6. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, within seven years from the date of its submission.

ARTICLE XXI

REPEAL OF THE EIGHTEENTH (PROHIBITION) AMENDMENT BY CONVENTION IN THE STATES

The following proposed amendment in the Constitution, embodied in a joint resolution of the 72nd Congress (Senate, Feb. 16, 1933, by 63 to 23; House, Feb. 29, 1933, by 289 to 121), was transmitted to the Secretary of State on Feb. 21 and he at once sent to the governors of the States copies of the resolution. The amendment went into effect on Dec. 5, 1933, having been adopted by 36 of the 48 States three-quarters of the entire number. The Amendment reads:

Section 1. The eighteenth article of amendment to the Constitution of the United States is hereby repealed.

Section 2. The transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or Possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited.

Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by convention in the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

PROPOSED CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT

The following amendment was proposed to the Legislatures of the several States by the Sixty-eighth Congress having been adopted as a joint resolution by the House of Representatives (297 to 69) on April 26, 1924, and by the Senate (61 to 23) on June 2, 1924.

It was ratified by Arizona (1925); Arkansas (1924); California (1925); Colorado (1931); Idaho (1935); Illinois (1921); Indiana (1935); Iowa (1923); Kansas (1937); Kentucky (1937); Maine (1933); Michigan (1933); Minnesota (1933); Montana (1927); Nevada (1937); New Hampshire (1933); New Jersey (1933); New Mexico (1937); North Dakota (1933); Ohio (1933); Oklahoma (1933); Oregon (1933); Pennsylvania (1934); Utah (1935); Washington (1933); West Virginia (1923); Wisconsin (1925); Wyoming (1935); total-28. Ratifications by 36 States is necessary.

The U. S. Supreme Court in 1921 (Dillon v. Glass, 256 U. S. 368) ruled that proposed amendments of 1789, 1810, and 1841 were no longer pending. "We conclude," said the Court, "... that the ratification must be within some reasonable time after the proposal."

Section 1. The Congress shall have power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age.

Section 2. The power of the several States is unimpaired by this article except that the operation of State laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by the Congress.

SOURCES OF THE CONSTITUTION

The sources from which the Constitution of the United States was derived included the evolution of the British government; the political institutions of the British colonies; the various state constitutions created during and after the Revolution; and the Articles of Confederation. Max Farrand, a recognized authority on the history of the framing of the Constitution, says, "It is of interest that the New York Constitution of 1777 seems to have been more extensively used than any other."

In brief, it may be said that New York contributed the models for the bicameral legislature, the census, impeachment, rotation in the Senate, the idea of a President and President pro tempore of the Senate, the casting vote in the Senate, the executive veto, the term and eligibility of the President, the Presidential succession, the Presidential message, the calling of extraordinary sessions, the President as executor of the laws, doctrine of no corruption of blood, the non-obstacle clause, and Amendments Seven and Nine. If these contributions of New York are subtracted, no workable Constitution remains. The document as finally elaborated was not a revision of the Articles of Confederation but a completely new Constitution. It replaced a clumsy old Congress with a government of three departments. Federal authority was enlarged to include taxation, finance, control of public lands, the admission of states, and authority over foreign and interstate commerce.

GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The United States of America, Federal Republic, is bounded on the north by Canada, on the east by the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, on the south by the Gulf of Mexico and Mexico, and on the west by the Pacific Ocean. It comprises 48 States and the Federal District of Columbia. This is called for convenience in reference Continental United States. Continental United States is the fourth largest country in the world in point of area, being exceeded only by Soviet Russia, China, Canada and Brazil. Only three countries have a larger population—China, India and Soviet Russia. Its non-contiguous areas are the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii; Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands of the United States, American Samoa, Guam, Wake and scattered islands in the Pacific; and the Panama Canal Zone, not to mention the Philippines which will soon have her independent government. The United States also claims about one hundred ungoverned islands in various parts of the Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

The area of Continental United States is 3,026,789 sq. m.; total including Territories and Dependencies, 3,728,395 sq. m.

The population according to the census of 1930 is as follows: Continental, 122,775,046. The present population of the United States with outlying possessions is estimated at more than 140,000,000.

DEMOCRATIC LIBERTY, F. D. ROOSEVELT'S IDEAL

Franklin D. Roosevelt, in an address in Washington (April 14, 1938), before the governing board of the Pan American Union—an address which was broadcast throughout the United States and Latin America—said:

"We have learned in this Western Hemisphere what community of interest really means. We have worked for it, created it, and we now glory in it. Properly, therefore, Pan American Day is set aside as an annual testimony to the significance which the American family of nations has for the world.

"Never was that significance greater than today. The 21 American republics present proudly to the rest of the world a demonstration that the rule of justice and law can be substituted for the rule of force; that resort to war as an instrument of policy is not necessary; that international differences of all kinds can be solved through peaceful negotiation; that the sanctity of the pledged word faithfully observed and generously interpreted offers a system of security with freedom.

"The 300,000,000 citizens in the American republics are not different from other human beings. We have the same problems, the same differences, even the same material for controversy which exists elsewhere.

Yet, we have undertaken contractual obligations to solve these normal human differences by maintaining peace; and that peace we are firmly resolved to maintain.

"It shall not be endangered by controversies within our family; and we will not permit it to be endangered from aggression coming from outside of our hemisphere. This, a common objective of all of us, forms a lasting foundation for the maintenance of an international understanding unique in the world.

"The American peoples, who today fortunately live as good neighbors not only enjoy a privilege, but undertake a heavy responsibility.

"Our democratic system has conferred on all of us an inestimable gift of individual liberty within the law. We are vitally concerned with preserving the high standards of international restraint and morality, which the lessons of centuries has taught is the first requirement of peaceful relationships between nations.

"Now, more than ever before, we of this American Hemisphere must make plain that these principles, upon which so great a civilization is founded, are vibrant, productive and dynamic. National and international law and morality are not the restraints of weaklings; they are signs of serene strength—confidence in our purpose and ability to maintain independence and democracy.

"Our ideal is democratic liberty. Our instrument is honor and friendship. Our method is increased understanding. Our basis is confidence. So and not otherwise, in common efforts, we safeguard in this new world the great rights of our liberties and build our civilization for the advancement of humanity throughout the world."

APPENDIX IX

HARRY L. HOPKINS
(By United Press)

WASHINGTON, (By Air Express)—Following is the text of a survey prepared for Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins by the Far Eastern section of the regional information division, Commerce department, on economic aspects of the Philippines economic adjustment bill:

H. R. 7096, signed by President Roosevelt August 7, 1939, amends the Tydings-McDuffie Act in such a way as to alleviate hardships to certain especially vulnerable Philippine industries which might have found it impossible to carry the burden of the export taxes imposed by that Act in earlier stages.

Those industries engaged in the manufacture of cigars, coconut oil, pearl buttons and embroidered garments represent a fairly considerable investment, and are even more important from the viewpoint of the labor employed. Evidence indicated that, due to the narrow margin of profit, it would be impossible to continue shipping cigars (with their by-products, i.e., scraps, cigar ends and stripped filler), coconut oil, or pearl buttons if they had to carry an export tax of even 10 or 15 per cent of the American duty.

The bill therefore relieves those products of an import tax increasing annually, replacing it with quotas declining 5 per cent each year from 1941 to 1946.

For the calendar year 1940 those quotas are as follows:

Cigars, 200,000,000.

Scrap and filler tobacco, 4,500,000 pounds.

Coconut oil, 200,000 long tons.

Buttons, pearl or shell, 850,000 gross.

These quotas approximate or slightly exceed average annual shipments in recent years.

In the case of embroideries, it was considered equitable that the export tax should be payable only on the value added in the Philippines, and not on the value of the American cloth embodied therein. It is provided, that in determining the taxable value of embroidery exports, an allowance shall be made equal to the landed cost of American cloth used.

These provisions have been made because it was felt that strict application of the export taxes provided in the Tydings-McDuffie Act would not fulfill one of the primary purposes of the Act, i.e., a gradual conditioning of the Philippine export industries to the situation to be encountered after independence, when there will no longer be free access to the American market. In the case of other Philippine exports, the export tax provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Act will still apply. This tax amounts to 5 per cent of the American duty for the calendar year 1941, increasing 5 per cent each year until it reaches 25 per cent for 1945, and continuing at the rate until July 4, 1946.

The duty-free quota on sugar, 850,000 long tons, of which 50,000 long tons may be for direct consumption or refined sugar, is continued. Any shipments over that figure will pay the full American duty, but no export tax. The cordage quota established by the Act of June 14, 1935, an absolute quota of 6,000,000 pounds a year, will be continued, though the basis of allocation in the Philippines is changed. Since the Act of June 14, 1935 expires May 1, 1941, the application of the quota imposed by H. R. 7096 commences with that date, and a quota of 4,000,000 pounds is set for the balance of the calendar year.

Abaca and copra, two of the major export commodities, are not affected by the export taxes, since they are not dutiable under the American tariff. It is provided, that they shall not be subject to an export tax, which protects them up to July 4, 1946, even if duties are imposed by the American tariff.

The amendments made to the Tydings-McDuffie Act H. R. 7096 represent for the most part, recommendations of a Joint Preparatory Committee, made up of representatives of the American and Philippine governments. That committee made a number of other recommendations, however, the most important of which was the gradual application of the American duties after July 4, 1946, to make the transition less abrupt. Thus, Philippine products would have paid only 25 per cent of the American duties in the last half of 1946, increasing to 30 per cent in 1947 and so up to 100 per cent in 1950. It was also recommended that the Philippine tariff on cotton textiles and a few other products be increased, to provide more protection for American goods.

Those recommendations are not embodied in H. R. 7096, which took up only those matters considered most urgent. It is provided, however, that there shall be a conference, at least two years before the date set for independence (July 4, 1946), of nine representatives of the American government and an equal number of the Philippine government, to formulate recommendations as to future trade relations between the United States and the independent Philippine Republic. The American delegation will include three members of the House of Representatives and three members of the Senate, the remaining three to be appointed by the President.

The Philippines have been heavily dependent on the American market, since reciprocal free trade between the United States and the Philippines was established in 1909. In recent years, merchandise exports to the United States have made up 80 to 85 per cent of total Philippine exports. Including gold, which is shipped as a product of the Philippines rather than as treasure, the percentage would be substantially higher. Since Philippine production has been primarily for export rather than for domestic consumption, approximately half of the total value of production being exported, it may readily be imagined what the effect of an abrupt transition might be.

178,830,000 pesos ($89,445,000), or 78.11 per cent—a small proportion as compared with other years—went to the United States. In addition, gold was exported to the value of 62,000,000 pesos or $31,000,000, all to the United States. With the exception of copra, lumber, abaca and a few minor products, valued at possibly 25–27,000,000 pesos ($12,500,000–$13,500,000), exports to the United States were all dependent on freedom from the American duties.

Products shipped to the United States to the value of about 118,000,000 pesos ($59,000,000), in 1938, including sugar—which accounted for 100,000,000 pesos or $50,000,000—will be affected by the export tax starting at 5 per cent in 1941, but probably only to the extent that profits will be reduced. It is believed unlikely that actual volume of shipments of these products will be much reduced by the export taxes. Shipments of coconut oil, valued at 21,000,000 pesos or $10,500,000 in 1938, will ultimately be reduced in volume, although the quota reduction probably will not become effective before 1943, as the full quota is not being shipped. Coconut oil will then be gradually replaced by copra. Cigar shipments, valued at 6,000,000 pesos or $3,000,000 in 1938, will continue unaffected until 1943 or 1944, as the quota exceeds actual shipments in recent years. Embroideries, valued at 10,000,000 pesos or $5,000,000 in 1938 will be affected somewhat by the export taxes in 1941, but the taxes will apply to only half the value of the embroidery exported. Pearl buttons are not an important export commodity.

There are no provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Act or H. R. 7096 which will affect American sales to the Philippines prior to 1946, unless they should be indirectly affected by a possible reduction in Philippine purchasing power.

After independence, American goods will, under present legislation, be subject to the full Philippine duties. The effect on total American trade will be relatively minor, as exports to the Philippines make up less than 3 per cent of total American exports. The Philippines have, nevertheless, been one of our important export markets ranking between 7th and 11th in recent years; and in the case of some commodities, such as cotton textiles, galvanized iron sheets, condensed milk and several others, it has been a market of major importance.

From the Philippines point of view, imports from the United States have been consistently between 60 to 65 per cent of total imports, falling to 58 per cent in 1937 and rising to 68 per cent in 1938. Imports from the United States of automobiles, tobacco, and leather goods make up over 90 per cent of total imports of these commodities; machinery, electrical goods and rubber products over 80 per cent; mineral oils and iron and steel goods over 75 per cent. Even in cotton textiles, the American share was over 60 per cent in 1938, due to reduced Japanese competition, but normally it is somewhat under 50 per cent in value.

It may be assumed that, with the ending of reciprocal free trade relations after independence, there will likely be a heavy reduction in the total capacity of the Philippines to purchase abroad, and a substantial diminution in the United States share of its trade.

APPENDIX X

ACCEPTANCE OF ADJUSTMENT ACT URGED BY PRES. QUEZON

The acceptance of the Philippine economic adjustment act, formerly known as the Philippine omnibus bill, by the National Assembly, was urged by President Quezon in a message sent to the assembly on August 15, 1939, at the opening of its special session. The Chief Executive briefly summarized the contents of the new law and pointed out certain benefits the Philippines will derive from its operation.

The message follows:

GENTLEMEN OF THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY:

I take pleasure in transmitting to you for your information and appropriate action an official copy of the Act of August 7, 1939, passed by the Congress of the United States, entitled "An Act to Amend an Act, Entitled 'An Act to Provide for the Complete Independence of the Philippine Islands, to Provide for the Adoption of a Constitution and a Form of Government for the Philippine Islands, and for other Purposes.'" This law embodies substantially the recommendations of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs, which you have previously approved, as regards necessary adjustments in the economics and other relationships between the United States and the Philippines prior to July 4, 1946. It may be recalled that the original bill introduced in the Senate included provisions continuing preferential trade relations between the two countries until the year 1961, as was recommended by the Joint Preparatory Committee. Instead of these provisions, realizing perhaps that the problems involved could better be solved if action thereon were deferred, the Congress of the United States in this Act has directed that a conference be held at least two years prior to July 4, 1946, for the purpose of formulating recommendations as to trade relations between the United States and the Philippines after independence.

The approval of this new law should be regarded by the Filipino people as another indication of the sustained interest of the United States in our welfare and of the desire of the American people to be fair and just to the Philippines and to do everything reasonably necessary to make possible our adequate preparation for independent nationhood. I wish again to make avowal of our gratitude to the government and people of the United States, and, particularly, to President Franklin D. Roosevelt who, despite the multitude and the gravity of the problems confronting the American nation, had persistently urged the enactment of this law to forestall the ruin of some of our basic industries and to facilitate in some measure our economic readjustment. I also wish to record the nation's acknowledgment of the eminent public service rendered by Vice-President Sergio Osmeña and Resident Commissioner Joaquin M. Elizalde in relation to the approval of this law. Throughout the long process leading to its enactment, they represented the Philippines with dignity and ability of the highest order and it was partly due to their persistence in the face of seemingly insurmountable obstacles that the measure was finally passed. Our nation's recognition should likewise go to Floor Leader Quintin Paredes, former Secretary of Finance Antonio de las Alas, former Resident Commissioner Camilo Osias, Benito Razon, and other officials of our government who were associated with our representatives in Washington in the effort to obtain the approval of this legislation.

Summarizing the important provisions of this new Act, we find that—

(1) It establishes an annual duty-free quota in the United States for cigars, scrap tobacco and stemmed and unstemmed filler tobacco, coconut oil, and pearl buttons, and relieves them from the payment of the export tax imposed by the Independence Act. With regard to embroideries, in the computation of the export tax to which they are subjected, the value of any cloth of United States origin used in the production thereof is excluded.

(2) It continues until July 4, 1946, the annual quota of 6,000,000 pounds for Philippine cordage which quota, under the Cordage Act, would be reduced to 3,000,000 pounds beginning on May 1, 1941.

(3) It guarantees to Filipino citizens and corporations the enjoyment in the United States and all places subject to its jurisdiction of all the rights and privileges that they enjoyed at the time of the inauguration of the Commonwealth.

(4) While maintaining the prohibition against the use of the proceeds of the excise taxes to subsidize directly or indirectly producers or processors of copra, coconut oil, or allied products, it liberalizes the restrictions now imposed upon the Philippine government in the expenditure of the proceeds of said taxes by merely requiring that such expenditures be necessary in adjusting the Philippine economy to a position independent of trade preferences in the United States and in preparing the Philippines for independence, and by expressly authorizing the expenditure of such funds to grant facilities for better curing of copra or for bona fide production loans to copra producers. The President of the United States, however, is authorized to cause the withholding of payments to the Philippine treasury of the proceeds of excise taxes in case said funds are spent for purposes other than those contemplated in the law.

(5) It expressly exempts copra and Manila fiber (abaca) from the payment of the export tax, so that even if said articles were made dutiable in the United States, they would still be free from the said tax.

(6) It establishes regulations for the collection of export taxes and the liquidation of the bonded indebtedness of the Philippines, its provinces, cities and municipalities, incurred prior to May 1, 1934.

(7) It provides for the acquisition or retention by the United States of such lands and properties in the Philippines as may be necessary for its diplomatic or consular establishments.

(8) It provides for a conference to be held in such manner, time and place as the President of the United States may determine, at least two years prior to July 4, 1946, for the purpose of formulating recommendations as to future trade relations between the United States and the Independent Philippine Republic. It is provided that this conference shall be between representatives of the government of the United States and the government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, such representatives, on the part of the United States, to consist of three United States senators appointed by the President of the Senate, three members of the House of Representatives appointed by the Speaker of the House, and three persons appointed by the President of the United States, and, on the part of the Philippines, to consist of nine representatives to be appointed by the President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

with the consent of the commission on appointments of the National Assembly.

The provisions that I have briefly outlined will, in my opinion, take care of the most immediate difficulties that many of our industries have to face. The law, however, does not solve adequately nor completely the larger and more important problem of economic readjustment, for unless preferential trade with the United States is allowed to continue for at least fifteen years after independence, we should not entertain the least hope that our basic industries, representing a production amounting to about forty per cent of our total annual income, may survive the sudden application of the full American tariff on July 4, 1946. The ruin of these industries would severely affect our economy precisely at a time when the economic base of our national structure needs greatest strength and consistency, for it will occur upon our emergence as an independent state. We are doing everything humanly possible to prepare for that eventuality, but the difficulties of the task must be evident to all who have studied our economy and the degree of its dependence upon preferential trade with America. The Joint Preparatory Committee recognizing this fact recommended the continuation of preferential trade after independence. I wish to remark in this connection that preferential trade to be of any assistance to the Philippines must consist of effective preferences, such as will permit the gradual adjustment of our industries looking to their final survival or convenient substitution. It is my hope and abiding confidence that when the economic conference convene at least two years before independence, this matter will receive careful consideration. I am strengthened in this belief because there will be members of the American Congress in that conference and I am certain that, once the problem is understood by them, they will do that which is just and fair for the Philippines and the United States.

I believe the Philippines should prepare early for this conference. It is my purpose at your next regular session to submit recommendations to that end.

Aside from the material advantages which this new law will bring to us, there is one other consideration which enhances its significance. When the Independence Act was passed, the Filipino people accepted it on the assurances given to me by President Roosevelt that any inequalities or injustices in the law would be eliminated. This Act in part at least, is a fulfillment of that pledge. Our reliance in America has once more been vindicated, and we have every reason to feel that our faith in her has not been misplaced.

The effectiveness of the Independence Act was conditioned upon its acceptance by the Philippine Legislature or by a convention called for the purpose of passing upon that question. That requirement has established the Independence Act as a covenant between the U. S. and the Philippines. It has been our view, and we still hold to that view, that the provisions of the Independence Act may not be changed or altered without the consent of the constitutional representatives of our people. The Act recently passed does not require that acceptance or consent. I feel, however, that in making the effectiveness of the Act dependent upon the fulfillment of certain conditions which are entirely within our control and decision, the principle of mutuality involved has been respected. Notwithstanding this, in order clearly to maintain an adherence to this principle, I recommend that the National Assembly formally accept this new Act before it initiates the required steps that are a condition to its effectiveness.

Section 7 of the Act provides as follows:

"Sec. 7. (a) Section 1 to 5, inclusive, of this amendatory Act shall become effective on January 1, 1940, if before that date—

"(1) Subsection 5 of section 1 of the Ordinance Appended to the Constitution of the Philippines shall have been amended in the manner now provided by law, by changing the final period of said subsection to a comma, and by adding thereto the words: 'as amended by the Act of Congress of the United States approved (followed by the date of the approval of this amendatory Act),' and section 3 of the said ordinance shall have been amended by inserting immediately after the words 'approved March 24, 1934' the same amendatory language mentioned above.

"(2) The President of the United States shall have found and proclaimed that the Philippine government has enacted, subsequent to the adoption of the amendments to the Constitution of the Philippines (as provided in subdivision (1) of this subsection), a law relating to export taxes (as provided in section 1), and has retained those Philippine laws relating to sinking-fund and currency matters which were in effect on May 20, 1938.

"(b) Section 1 of this amendatory Act shall remain in full force and effect from the effective date thereof until July 4, 1946, unless the President of the United States shall, prior to July 4, 1946, have found and proclaimed that the Philippine government has, in any substantial respect, repealed or amended, or failed or refused to enforce or administer any Philippine law referred to in subdivision (2) of subsection (a) of this section. In the event of such a finding and proclamation, section 1 shall immediately become ineffective and trade relations between the United States and the Philippines shall be as provided by section 6 of the Act of March 24, 1934, prior to the enactment of this amendatory Act and by section 13 of the said Act.

"(c) Sections 6 and 7 of this amendatory Act shall become effective upon its enactment."

In the belief that this Act would prove beneficial to the Philippines, I urge the National Assembly to pass the necessary resolution and legislation to amend the Philippine Constitution as required in this section. I also recommend that the process for this amendment be expedited so that the National Assembly might take the action required under paragraph (2) of section 7 and thus complete all the conditions established for the effectiveness of the Act before January 1, 1940.

For the purposes of the provisions of Article VI, Section 12, paragraph (2), of the Constitution, I hereby certify to the necessity of the immediate enactment of legislation necessary to carry out the foregoing recommendations.

Respectfully,

(Sgd.) MANUEL L. QUEZON
President of the Philippines

APPENDIX XI

HOW TO ADDRESS PERSONS OF RANK

The President of the United States is usually, and properly, spoken to as "Mr. President"; in writing to him, "My Dear Mr. President," is good usage, and so is "Dear Mr. President," if the writer is a friend or is of prominence in affairs. Otherwise the chief executive should be addressed more formally—"To the President," or "Hon. F. D. Roosevelt, President." All diplomatic letters from foreign sources style the President "Excellency."

A member of the American Cabinet may be addressed as "Dear Mr. Secretary"; the head of a bureau may be written to as "Dear Mr. Commissioner."

A member of the upper branch of the Congress is "My dear Senator," or "Dear Senator"; a member of the lower branch may be written to as "My dear Congressman," or "Dear Mr. Representative."

A member of the Supreme Court of the United States is "Dear Mr. Justice," adding his family name if preferred. He is also "Hon." so and so. "Associate (or Chief) Justice, Supreme Court of the United States." All judges, Federal, State, Municipal are Honorables ("Your Honor").

Governors are officially "Excellencies" or "Honorables"; Mayors are "Honorables" and so are the heads of departments.

Doctors, medical or otherwise, are addressed as "Dr."; Professors are "Prof."

An Emperor is to be addressed in a letter, as "Sire," or "Your Imperial Majesty."

A King or Queen is to be addressed, in a letter, as "Sire" (or Madam), or "Your Majesty." The envelope is to be addressed, "The King (or Queen's) Most Excellent Majesty," or "His," or "Her," or "Your Royal Highness."

Princes and Princesses and other persons of royal blood are addressed as "His (or Her) Royal Highness." Here, as in the cases above, a letter may begin "May it please," following with the words "Your Majesty" or "Your Royal Highness."

A Duke or Marquis is "My Lord Duke" (or "Marquis"), a Duke is "His (or Your) Grace."

An Ambassador is "Your Excellency." A Minister Plenipotentiary is "Sir."

Wives of any peer may be addressed as "Madam," with the further alternative of "Your Ladyship," or "Your Grace," if she is of high rank.

The Pope is usually addressed as Holy Father; but as he is a bishop as well as an archbishop, and the Vicar of Christ, there is no fixed rule.

A Cardinal is "Your (or His) Eminence." An Archbishop is "My Lord" or "His Grace." A Bishop is "My Lord."

ARMY TRAINING ACTIVITIES

Regular Army—Throughout the year all units of the Regular Army receive peace-time training at their home stations or in summer training camps.

National Guard—The National Guard is trained throughout the year. This training is directed toward providing in time of peace, an adequate organized, and effective force, sufficiently trained and developed so that it will be available in minor emergencies for employment within the limits of the United States by the United States, and so that it will be immediately available in major emergencies for employment in the execution of limited missions. The law requires that each organization assemble for drill and instruction not less than 48 times each year, and shall in addition participate in encampments and maneuvers, or other exercises at least 15 days each year.

The assemblies for drill and instruction (technically known as armory drills) are carried on at the home station of the organization.

The fifteen days' field training is carried on during the summer months at camps or localities especially selected for this purpose.

Officers' Reserve Corps—Active duty training for officers of the Organized Reserves is usually conducted at Regular Army garrisons.

Reserve Officers' Training Corps—Young men attending certain schools and colleges receive military training during their academic courses.

This training is divided into a basic course and an advanced course. The basic course normally is given during the freshman and sophomore years. The advanced course normally is given during the junior and senior years. Depending on the requirements of the institution, all students may be required to take, or may elect, the basic course. Only a limited and selected number can be admitted to the advanced course. Students admitted to the advanced R.O.T.C. are given six weeks' training at a summer training camp.

Citizens' Military Training Camps—During the summer there are established throughout the United States camps for the training of the youth of the Nation. Young men between the ages of 17 and 29 attend these camps.

THE RANK OF GENERAL AND LIEUTENANT GENERAL

General of the Army—George Washington (June 15, 1775); Ulysses S. Grant (July 25, 1866); William T. Sherman (March 4, 1869); Philip H. Sheridan (June 1, 1888); John J. Pershing (Oct. 6, 1917); Tasker H. Bliss (Oct. 6, 1917); Peyton C. March (May 20, 1918); Charles P. Summerall (Feb. 23, 1929); Douglas MacArthur (November 21, 1930); Malin Craig (Oct. 2, 1935); George C. Marshall (July 1, 1939).

Lieutenant General of the Army—George Washington (July 3, 1798); Ulysses S. Grant

(March 2, 1864); William T. Sherman (July 25, 1866); Philip H. Sheridan (March 4, 1869); John M. Schofield (Feb. 8, 1895); Nelson A. Miles (June 6, 1900); Samuel B. M. Young (Aug. 8, 1903); Adna R. Chaffee (Jan. 9, 1904); John C. Bates (Feb. 1, 1906); Henry C. Corbin (April 15, 1906); Arthur MacArthur (Sept. 15, 1906); Hunter Liggett (Oct. 16, 1918); Robert L. Bullard (Oct. 16, 1918); Edgar Jadwin (retired Aug. 7, 1929, with rank of Lieutenant General, Act, March 4, 1915).

Army figures for USSR (Russia) include 9 million partially trained.

Czechoslovakia figures are as of Sept. 1936.

In Spain, owing to the presence of foreign volunteers and the several mobilizations of natives, there were no stabilized forces during the civil war.—From The World Almanac, 1939.
